Tappan introduces
The Cool Oven.

he incredible Tappan Electronic Cooking enter cooks without heat. Bakes a cake in 3 inutes, cooks a 5-pound roast in 30 minutes. nd saves you about 4 hours each day.

'e call it the "cool oven" because it cooks with microwaves stead of heat. (The same thing that makes your TV work.) the incredible Tappan Electronic Cooking Center, only e food gets hot. Air, glass, metal, ceramics, and plastics on't absorb microwave energy; everything but e food stays at room temperature. And ice food doesn't stick to a cool surface, ou can forget about pot-scrubbing and en-scraping. (So much for "self-cleaning" ens—this one doesn't get dirty!)

Bakes rosy red apples in 4 minutes.

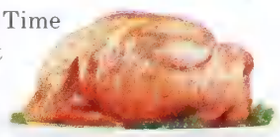
In fact, food cooks so quickly that flavor can't cape. Bacon takes 90 seconds. Baked apples, 4 minutes. A 14-pound turkey roasts beautifully in 75 minutes. You've never tasted meat so juicy and tender. You've never cooked vegetables so fresh-looking and full of vitamins.

Does a delicious 5 lb. roast in half an hour.

You'll save worlds of dishwashing, too, because you can cook right in your rving dishes. If you don't have a Tappan Reversa-Jet Dish-asher, just cook on paper plates. They can't urn. Remember, only the foods get hot.

Anyone tall enough to reach the dials old enough to operate our easy-does-Time Machine. No temperature set-ngs to worry about. Just a simple on/off vitch and an automatic timer.

Bakes a layer cake in 3 minutes.



lectronic cooking is the best thing that ever happened to frozen foods. It ends defrosting for good.

Heats a TV dinner in 4 minutes.

Suppose you want to cook frozen broccoli. Take it out of the package, ice and all, put it in a dish, pop it into your Time Machine, shut the door and set the dial for 4½ minutes. Tick-tock. Ding-dong. The oven defrosts and cooks the broccoli, turns itself off and rings a bell. (It's not a very loud bell, but you haven't ad time to go very far.)

When you serve from your Tappan Time lachine, you'll get another pleasant irprise: food goes further! There's ss shrinkage in preparation, and iat means something at today's food rices.

Roasts a 14 lb. turkey in 75 minutes.

You may not believe all this. Even though 's true. But the Tappan Electronic Range will make a be-ever out of you while it saves you time and money. See a emonstration now at Time Machine Headquarters: your 'appan Dealer.

The Tappan Electronic Range. Free standing, fits in 30" of space. Complete with incredible electronic oven, contour cooking surface with 4 infinite heat elements, automatic electric oven below. Shown above in exciting new Provincial styling. Also available in Coppertone, White, or Avocado.

People, Places, Pleasures

By DUNCAN MacDONALD

Widely known for her radio interview programs from New York, Miss MacDonald is an acute observer of the many worlds of esthetics, entertainment, travel, and the home.

Inception: David Rockefeller carves out an ever larger niche for himself in the history of our relations with South America—most recently through his help in creating the new Center for Inter-American Relations at 680 Park Avenue in New York City.

Let us approach the Center by way of the structure that contains it, a noble house with chambers high-ceilinged, vaulted, surfaces eased by bas-relief, splendid fireplaces at every turn, and with a truly grand staircase curving up to the fourth floor. All of this situated in the very center of the glory that was Queen Victoria and the grandeur that was Park Avenue.

Perception: The Center is there largely because of the Marquesa de Cuevas, a granddaughter of John D. Rockefeller, Sr. One day in January of 1965, she saw scaffolding going up at the Pyne Mansion and workmen preparing to demolish it. Knowing its background—designed by McKim, Mead, and White and completed for Percy Rivington Pyne in 1911, built in the Georgian style and considered the finest of its type and period in the country—the Marquesa intervened with a million dollars for its purchase, then gave it to the Center.

Conception: Back of all this personal and financial energy was the recognition of a need to bring all Americans, North and South, into a closer relationship. To accomplish this, David Rockefeller says the Center "will encourage, plan, and sponsor conferences, lectures, studies, publications, exhibitions, public events, and continual private encounters between Latin American and North American businessmen, statesmen, scientists, artists, intellectuals, scholars, journalists—all hemispheric leaders in terms of thought and action."

The Center is providing a great house in New York City as a kind of crossroads where the vital people of our 21 nations can meet privately and perhaps reach a closer understanding than would be possible in a public forum.

Direction: The administration of the Center is headed by President William D. Rogers and William MacLeish, executive director. Both are young men of reputation, Rogers as one of the architects for the Alliance for Progress, and MacLeish as a writer and member of a famous writing clan. Supporting this leadership is a broad base of members ready to contribute money and time.

Perfection: The members are just now attending the formal opening of the Center and seeing the refurbished building for the first time. They are seeing what Architect Walker O. Cain and his associate, Interior Designer Thomas L. Moore, have wrought, a blend of architectural expertise and tasteful decoration. On the second floor is a salon whose medallioned ceiling is inset with paintings by Barry Faulkner and Angelica Kauffmann. (She was a protegé of Joshua Reynolds and an original member of the Royal Academy.) A dining room on the third floor features wallpaper painted by the French artist Dufour, whose imaginative and appropriate subject was the Incas of Peru. A handsome setting for a fine enterprise.

Connections: For many reasons, North and South America are not so far apart as they used to be. When I was in Lima recently, I saw in the bookshop at the Gran Hotel Bolivar a copy of William Hickling Prescott's famous history, The Conquest of Peru, written in Boston more than a hundred years ago. Another interesting link is the fabled lost city of the Incas, Machu Picchu, recovered in 1911 from centuries of oblivion by Hiram Bingham, a Yale University professor and a distinguished senator from Connecticut.

An important contribution to the joining of the Americas is the great speed with which people get back and forth between the two continents. Braniff sends nonstop flights from New York to Lima in 7½ hours, from New York to Bogotá in 5¼ hours. If you leave from Miami, you can be in Lima in five hours and in Santiago in eight.

The governments of South America place great value on this increased intercommunication. Harding L. Lawrence, president of Braniff International, was recently honored by President Belaúnde of Peru, who presented him with the Order of the Sun, Peru's highest civilian decoration. Fernando Belaúnde Terry himself has strong ties with the United States, having graduated from the University of Texas with a degree in architecture.

Improvement in communication, however, was stimulated long before air travel. A young Irishman named William Russel Grace left home and sailed to Peru in the 1840's in search of greater opportunity. Grace prospered and married the daughter of a Yankee skipper. He became a citizen of the United States and founded the W. R. Grace Company of New York and Lima, which has carried people and products between the Americas ever since.

Discover America: For those whose travel is confined to one continent, New England is an annual temptation. During much of the autumn, the six-state area bursts into leafy flame, its trees providing a breathtaking display. Along the way are many exciting ports of call. One such is surely the unusual museum at Shelburne, Vermont, seven miles south of Burlington, 90 miles southeast of Montreal.

The Shelburne Museum, depicting the early life of Vermont, consists of 42 structures pleasantly scattered over a beautifully landscaped area. Among its unique exhibitions are the sidewheeler Ticonderoga, a live bee exhibit, a retired sea captain's home of 1790, a stagecoach inn of 1783, a display of farm implements and tools, a collection of over 300 quilts and rugs, and a general store of 1840.

This year Shelburne celebrates its 20th anniversary, and to honor its founders, the late Mr. and Mrs. W. Watson Webb, the Electra Havemeyer Webb Memorial Building was dedicated this summer. The building was designed to accommodate furnishings removed from the New York home of the Webbs—library walls paneled in leather, old Chinese wallpaper, fireplaces, and numerous antiques—and the Webbs' great collection of paintings, which includes works by Rembrandt, Courbet, Corot, Monet, Manet, Degas, and Mary Cassatt. This fascinating museum is open daily through October 20th. ■

ADDRESS BOOK

Valuable names and places—for unique services—from our little black book to yours

By EPSIE KINARD

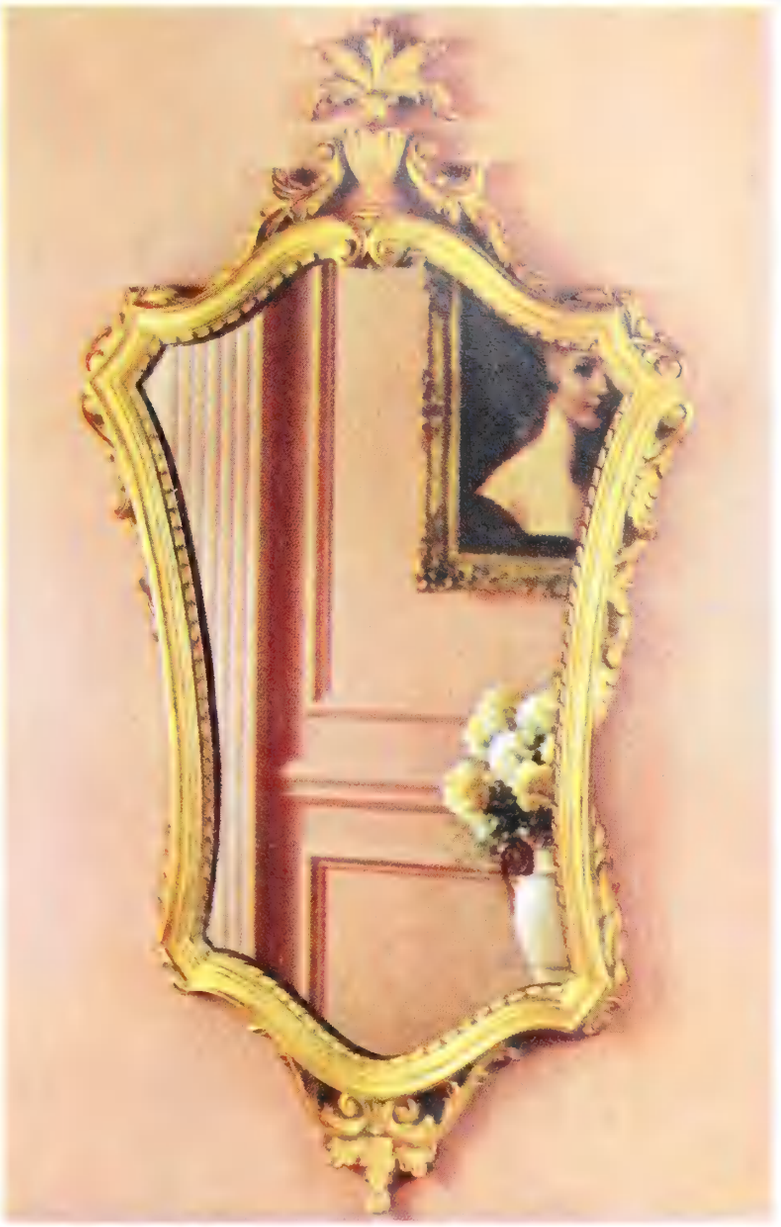
I started a needlepoint rug in a charge of enthusiasm and dropped it in a prolonged yawn of boredom, writes an Orange, New Jersey reader. Is there anyone in your little black book who would finish it?

The Elder Craftsmen Shop, 850 Lexington Avenue, New York City, can tap specialists who will. Besides rugs, they'll finish cushions, bench pads, chair seats and other needlepoint pieces, hooked rugs, knitted throws, sweaters, handmade quilts and crewel embroidery coverlets. The only stipulation these rescuers of abandoned pieces make is that the exact dye colors of yarn or thread originally used be available. Where pieces have been put away for a long time, colors may be faded beyond the hope of matching. Estimate sent upon request.

Do you know anyone who would hand-weave color into the Romanesque medallion centering an ecru bedspread? I want to adapt it to a bedroom's decorative scheme, writes a Brooklyn, New York reader.

Skilled weavers at Macy's Repair Center, Department 289, Herald Square, New York City, would do this job. Guided by the bedspread's raised pattern, they would pick out the design and weave in any colors desired.

The reader from Des Moines, Iowa, who writes asking for the name of someone who could reweave moth holes in a treasured wool-knit afghan, might also try these specialized Macy's services. Gathering raw threads from the fringed edge or seams of pieces to reweave holes and tears, experts make repairs that are practically undetectable.



Where can I go to replace broken cobalt-blue glass liners for a set of heirloom silver salt cellars, asks an Evanston, Illinois reader.

Liners of blue glass, crystal, or lucite—a new material used to add sparkle to antique silver holders—may be ordered from Hess Repairs, 168 East 33rd St., New York City. Here is a good stock of properly fitting inserts. But where necessary to custom-fit a piece, liners can be made for salt cellars, condiment sets, epergnes, hors d'oeuvre trays, antique sugar baskets, mustard or jam jars, and other traditional holders. For matching, send actual liner (broken or intact) or send holder securely wrapped, packed, and insured.

Who will make felt dropcloths in smashing decorator colors for tables I've turned into round tops, asks a Carmel, California reader.

Central Shippee Inc., 24 West 25th St., New York City, felt supplier, is prepared to make dropcloths to order in any of 65 colors. You can pick your choice from a color card which they will send you in advance. The only specifications needed for making smart, tailored skirts of felt (need no hemming) are the diameter of table and its height from floor. Average cost: A table—30″ in diameter with a 30″ drop—would be about $25; price includes the felt. ■

HOW TO LEAVE HOME AND LIKE IT

BY MARION GOUGH

Super Travel

The stuff that dreams are made on—travelers' flights of fancy—that's what this is about. Places and pursuits—bizarre, romantic, elegant, beguiling enough to seem beyond attainment. Yet—nothing is impossible. Take as practical, if dreamy, examples:

For the Shangri-la-minded, whose favorite fantasy transports them to places as strangely unlike home as possible, there is the Himalayan wonder of Nepal, a tiny realm of gaudy-rich color, gilded pagodas, and mysterious folkways. One can watch the sun rise over Everest in the crystal air that washes morning mountains, wander the temples of Kathmandu, the valley capital, and then, mirabile dictu, fly off to see the tiger in his native jungle. This to be accomplished at Tiger Tops, an ingenious mahogany and rattan twelve-room hotel loftily cradled in trees. (Continued on page 264)

Lessons learned at the piano can help your child succeed at life.

The pleasure your child can have making music and sharing it with others is reason enough for piano lessons. But there's more to music than meets the ear.

A child at the piano develops independence and self-confidence, learns discipline, concentration, poise and pride of accomplishment. Piano stimulates imagination and creative thinking . . . qualities which can lead to success in many other fields as well as music.

But will your child stay with it? With proper encouragement, yes. Especially if you show confiden by providing a beautiful new Wurlitzer piano. (The rich, resonant tone, smooth, easy action and crisp response of a Wurlitzer have inspired thousands of youngsters.) But, make sure, if you like. With the Wurlitzer Rent-A-Piano plan you can rent a Wurlitzer piano for as little as $10 a month from any participating dealer, and prove to yourself that your child has musical aptitude. Then, as your child progresses, you can apply the rental to the purchase price.

With this liberal offer available to you, there's really no reason to deny your child the advantage of a musical education.

APPLIANCE INSURANCE: THE BEST POLICY

By L. ACHILLES DANE

I arrived home the other night to find that our clothes dryer was on the fritz—and it was pouring rain, of course.

The next evening, however, my wife told me that the dryer was back on the job—good as new, at no extra charge. This may sound like a plug for some appliance-repair company or a dissertation on "How to get the repair man on the job." It isn't either one. It's a description of and praise for appliance service policies, which are available with any appliance you buy, at any price, and from virtually any company.

WHAT is a "service policy"? It is insurance against anything that may go wrong with an appliance. How does it work? Depending on the type of appliance, and how much use it would normally get, you can buy a service policy which will take over when your regular warranty expires. The service policy covers any number of years, renewable yearly. You don't usually expect the refrigerator or the electric range to cause trouble the first year, while it's in warranty, but how many times have you had one go on the blink just after the warranty had expired? And you mustn't blame the manufacturers, either. They have to draw the line somewhere, no matter how long the warranty lasts.

What do you get from a service policy? One-hundred-percent coverage including parts and labor. Of course, vandalism, negligence, or tampering are not covered.

Now for the important question. Cost. It varies, but almost all major appliance companies have very attractive policies. For example, our automatic washer has a full-coverage policy which can be bought at the time of purchase or at any time before the warranty expires. The first year after warranty cost us $19.95, the second year $29.95, and after five years, we can still get it for $39.95! Not bad for a guarantee that we won't spend a dime on a washer over five years old.

Our dryer, from the same people, has a service policy that costs $14.95 for the first year, $24.95 for the second through fourth year, and $29.95 from the fifth year on—for as long as we want it. Of course, we pay only one year at a time. The company tells us when the policy is due to expire, giving us the option to renew.

THE cost also goes down if you have more than one of a company's products. For example, our company gives us a ten-percent discount on any policy after the first one. With four in effect at the present time, we enjoy a 30-percent discount. You are also entitled to a lower price if you take the unit to them. If they don't have to come to the house to perform the repairs, the price is five dollars a year less. All of the other policies I inquired about have these features.

To break the cost down in more detail, suppose you buy a freezer and finance it with the dealer who sells it. In simple terms, for a total cost of 60 cents to two dollars monthly, depending upon the company and the terms of the policy, you can get a guarantee that you won't spend any money on a freezer whose sealed unit alone could cost over two hundred dollars to replace. Again, this insurance increases in price through the fourth year, and then levels off.

The original service policy has been extended to include power mowers of all types, gas heaters, freezers, air conditioners, oil heaters, stereos, radios, etc. Television sets command the highest price for service policies. This is understandable since they're most apt to cause trouble. But coverage is on anything that may go wrong.

I checked with four other major appliance manufacturers, and they all have policies similar to the ones we have. Some companies have lower prices, some don't charge for out-of-town calls, some do (usually a flat five dollars), and some cover a wider range of products than others, but they all offer a bargain.

Our experience with such policies has been good. Depending on the age and nature of your appliances, they may work as well for you. Information on them is as close as your appliance store. ■

THE HOUSE IN MY HEAD

THE HOUSE IN MY HEAD
WILL BE PUBLISHED IN NOVEMBER BY ATHENEUM

With our impressive stack of requirement sheets to guide us, we settled down to what our architect John Stonehill called "giving the house architecture." To him the word "architecture" has a meaning different from the one most people give it; they consider it as primarily exterior, suggesting such descriptives as Colonial or Tudor. Even "contemporary" has established connotations—shades of boxlike office buildings, glassy façades, concrete screens, and roofs that resemble aircraft-carrier decks.

To architects, architecture is something much more exciting. As John explains it, "It is the art of organizing the elements you perceive—surfaces, planes, interstices, edges, textures, colors—into sequences of significant spaces. That is the task, the ceremony of architecture." It is creating balance, pattern, and order that satisfy not a preconceived form but a prestated set of needs. It supplies definition (you say you want a large living room, but how large is large?) and detail (the hardware on a cupboard door, the brickwork around a fireplace). It works out the proportions—the ceiling heights, the sizes and shapes of doorways. It settles on materials and vistas, plots out points of view and exact exposures. Its aim is to provide a specific and beautiful answer to a particular set of problems.

In the instance of the private house, success depends on the extent to which it makes a particular family happy and comfortable by suiting their individual lives and tastes.

Needs must be clarified before planning can begin. To help with clarification is a basic part of the architect's job. This is why making room-by-room lists of specifics, in detail, is so essential, enabling the architect to shape a house that best incorporates them. Not only must he see that the house provides the number and types of rooms required, that it be as beautiful as possible, that the materials used suit the land and the climate, but all this must be accomplished within budget limits—small or large. How well he does this is the mark of his creativity. Indeed, architecture is a profession that requires custom tailoring to an exquisite degree. No one expects a painting to hold up the wall it ornaments or a piece of sculpture to provide shelter from the rain. Architecture is the only art form we expect to be both beautiful and practical.

There was a strong sense of understanding and respect among John and his partner, Oliver Lundquist, and ourselves. Like a good collaboration in the theatre, it felt right. In the early stages, house talks involved all of us. But when our plans got to the drawing stage, it was difficult to rally all four for every consultation, so John and I formed the central team, meeting three or four times a week to talk sizes, shapes, traffic patterns, and materials. Then, armed with our conclusions, John would work with Oliver on modifying the basic drawing.

"Charrette" is architectural slang for nonstop work under pressure. It comes from the French for "cart"—because in the 18th Century an architectural student's way of making use of every last minute on an assignment was to leap onto the cart that was carrying his drawings away to be judged and continue to add and correct en route. In a sense we were doing that, too—our pressure being the knowledge that unless Mike Sochacki, our contractor, could get the foundation in before the first frost, we wouldn't have our house ready to be lived in the following summer.

Whenever there were changes to be made, they took time. At this stage they were inexpensive—it doesn't cost a thing to move a wall on paper. Once the foundation has been laid and the real walls are going up, shifts are always enormously expensive, if not impossible.

And each change requires an adjustment somewhere else. When, for example, I realized that soiled clothes should not have to be carried through the kitchen on their way to the laundry, we not only had to move the laundry and the hall, but change the location of the maids' rooms, the drying yard, and the back door as well.

As we had agreed from the first, we started with the heart—the function—of the house. Basically there were three areas to work out: the area for entertaining, which would consist of the living-dining room, the terraces, and the pool (that was to be part of the house, not a separate entity); the sleeping area; and the service section. For a one-floor plan, the most practical scheme from the point of view of both efficiency and privacy seemed to be to make a large living-dining room the center of things, with a bedroom wing on one side and service rooms on the other.

The living-dining area and the effect I wanted of one large, airy room that could serve two purposes were, as John had predicted, not easy to deal with. Every idea we tried produced a floor plan that gave the effect of a dining room with one wall missing, which seemed rather silly. But after sketches and resketches, we devised a scheme that provided for my buffet counter in the living-room-pantry wall and, just outside the pantry door, a space that could be screened from view and where the table could be rolled to be set or cleared without interfering with the major part of the room. And then Bryant Conant, an associate of John's and Oliver's, came up with the brilliant suggestion of pushing the center of the east wall out toward the pool. This gave the room a "thrust" section that provided space for a conversational seating group indoors yet dramatically near the pool, and also divided the veranda into two outdoor screened areas: one to be used for dining, the other for sitting.

Having worked our way through L shapes, alcoves, and other variations, we plotted surrounding territories—the pool and terraces on the "view" side of the house. On the side nearest the road, a hall would serve both as an entrance and as a passage from the service to the bedroom wing, since otherwise we would have had a laundry and cleaning parade running directly through the living room.

Next, we went to work to site the house precisely on the land. The important considerations were privacy, vistas (trees could be cut down to open views), and exposures. Originally we had thought of "slipping" the house into a line of trees that had marked a boundary between two pastures. Then Alice Orme Smith, who was planning the landscaping, convinced us that this would be an extravagant waste of the very oaks and maples we had been so happy to find on the property, and suggested the house be moved almost its full width north to a spot quite close to the edge of the property. The service wing of the house, acting as a shield, would provide all the privacy we could want for the pool and the outdoor sitting areas.

THE HOUSE IN MY HEAD

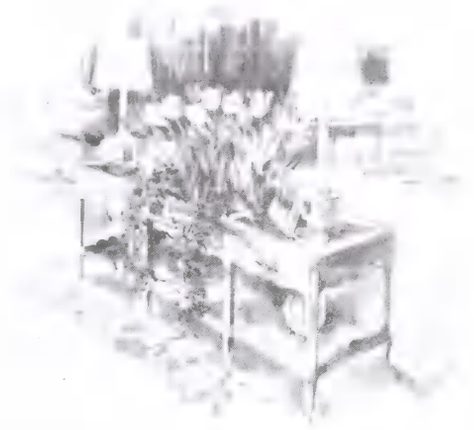
"Our most important decision had to do with the ceiling heights. John came up with a brilliant thought: We would not have one roof but several, which would allow us to vary the heights of the rooms according to their size. . . . I wanted a wall of books—we really didn't need a separate library. . . . The curtains would be a loosely woven linen."

At first we couldn't agree on which wing would be on which side of the house. To John, for whom each new day's sun is a joy, it seemed clear that the bedroom windows should face east. To me, it was just as obvious that the bedroom windows should face south, since although Dick and I are usually awake early, many of our guests like to stay behind shades till eleven. Nor did we want a living room facing west, since western windows trap all the glare and heat of a summer day.

Actually, I think one of the great delights of a house that is on one floor, aside from the stair-climbing it saves, is the way you can let light into it. I wanted to use daylight wherever possible: through windows in the living room, the bedrooms, the kitchen, the maids' sitting room; through windows and skylights in the hallways; and through skylights in the pantry, dressing rooms, and bathrooms where privacy ruled out the idea of windows.

At night, or whenever additional light was needed, four light bulbs set in the sides of each skylight, behind the frosted plastic, would provide artificial light from the same source that let in the daylight. In the living room, we planned on lights that would bathe the walls with a soft glow and also help anyone who might be hunting a book on the shelves.

All artificial light in the house was, incidentally, to be incandescent because I think fluorescent bulbs bring out the worst in people and things. Since lighting requirements vary with occasions, seasons, and moods, the whole system would be designed to operate on rheostats that make it possible to dial just the degree of brightness you want, and so adjust to any occasion, time of day, or outside light.



Plotting wiring and outlets takes long and meticulous figuring. In the course of it, John described the way I would enter my bedroom and, with the snap of a single switch, light both the bedside lamps and the soft light over the bookcases. It was a pleasant picture. But its appeal lessened considerably when I imagined myself reading at night, getting drowsy, and reaching up to turn out my lamps—only to realize that the bookcase lights were still on. I would have to get out of my nice warm bed and pad clear across the room. When I pointed this out to John, he looked stricken; then both of us started to laugh.

"One of the great delights of a house that is all on one floor is the way you bring light into it with skylights (two examples here). I wanted to use daylight whenever possible . . . at night, bulbs set inside each skylight would provide artificial light from the same source that let in the daylight. My room (below) would be blue and white —as it always is—and have a fireplace . . . with bits of red to link it to Dick's pale gray, red, black, and white color scheme."

We solved this problem, as we did a number of others, with an ingenious kind of outlet, one part of which is wired directly into the circuit while the other is connected to a switch.

In the electricity department alone, there were many things to remember. For safety and convenience, we would have a switch near our beds to turn all the outside lights on or off. There were also the closet lights (the kind that go on when you open the door), places to plug in shavers, clocks, radios, and electric blankets, not to mention dozens of kitchen and laundry appliances or who-knows-what wonderful gadgets that may be marketed in the next few years.

In any future wiring or plumbing crisis, another great asset will be the crawl space under the house. It is floored with a thin layer of concrete—known enchantingly in the trade as a "rat slab"—which serves as a firm footing for repairs beneath the house as well as a practical means of excluding the furry population.

The incident of the bedroom lights serves as just one more illustration of a basic truth: In the process of planning, unless you actually visualize every step that you're going to take, you are bound to make mistakes.

From the start, I did considerable mental walking through the house. I'd imagine myself going down the hall, across the living room, through the pantry, and on into the kitchen, where I'd sit down to do my meal planning. Or I'd be bringing in flowers and needing a place to arrange them. Next I'd be a delivery boy, staggering under a big box of groceries and looking for a place to put them down. Then I'd be the cook, rolling pie crust at the kitchen table. In this role I knew it was raining, and the delivery boy's feet were muddy; I couldn't have him tracking up my floor or putting groceries down on top of my pastry. Clearly, there would have to be a counter near the back door, one not too far from the larder or the refrigerator or the storage space where all the cleaning things were kept.

"For the paneling . . . an American maple stained pale honey to lend a faint sense of color."

I played so many parts that I began to feel like that protean actor, George Spelvin. It was the only way I knew to track down errors in planning. I knew I'd never detect them all, but my concentrated imagining did uncover quite a few.

There was the business of answering my bedroom phone. This episode always began with me in the tub: that's where I usually am when the phone starts ringing. So, grabbing a towel and dripping, I'd make my damp way through the dressing room, around the bed (which in my diagram was placed opposite the fireplace) to the left side where—because I am right-handed—I had put the phone. Mentally, I tripped any number of times and barked my shins on the bed: and, by the time I picked up the receiver, I was always cross as well as chilly and out of breath. After several rehearsals of this scene, I realized that if I shifted my bed to the west wall, the phone (still on the bed's left) would be next to the dressing-room door and within much safer and easier reach.

Actually, the bedrooms presented few problems: a room, dressing room, and bath each for Dick and me, plus a double and a single guestroom, both with baths.

Nevertheless, this simple plan did disturb several of our friends. Where, they wanted to know, would we put daughter Mary and husband Hank, daughter Linda and husband Danny, and our grandchildren? I admit, quite frankly, that we won't be able to put all of them up at the house at the same time. When they do all come out together, it makes much more sense for them to have meals and games and swim with us: then we'll put them up at night in a very comfortable motel just minutes away. It doesn't seem to us or to them to make sense to build in so much extra space and have it empty most of the time.

In the bedroom section we had only one other major space problem. There was a brief moment when Dick's dressing room disappeared, or at least became so small that John thought it would be better eliminated completely. He asked if I thought Dick would mind dressing in his bedroom. I replied pretty emphatically that he would, since the same large, lovely windows that gave him his view would rather effectively do away with the privacy needed for putting on clothes. Both of us like dressing rooms. I don't need a great deal of space, since I have drawers for underwear in my bathroom and do part of my dressing there: but Dick needs a place to empty his pockets, a mirror for tying his tie, a full-length mirror, and a chair to sit on while putting on socks and shoes.

John, obligingly, said he would look for space. Since all the general proportions were pretty well set, it was, literally, a matter of finding, not making, room. And this is one of those places where an architect's training put him so clearly ahead of the layman. He stole an inch here and there, gave my dressing room sliding closet doors, and managed to gain enough room for Dick's dressing space.

Where air conditioning, insulation, hot water, and drainage were concerned, we gratefully accepted the fact that John knew best. I found the literature on them incomprehensible, anyway. The air conditioning was to be zoned so that it could be regulated in each of the bedrooms: I love it myself, but we know many people who prefer it turned way down or off.

There was, however, one department in which I felt qualified as an expert: the kitchen and service area. In this particular case, I wanted to duplicate the Rockmeadow measurements almost exactly, because the kitchen there had seemed just about perfect to me. Basically, it was almost square—about 14 feet by 15 feet—with lots of light and air, big enough to move around in easily but not so large that it added steps to any job. I've always preferred its shape to those long skinny galleys that look so efficient but aren't. Besides, narrow kitchens have no place for one piece of equipment I find absolutely essential—a marble-topped table I can get at from all sides when I'm rolling pastry or making a chocolate roll or even just sitting to shell peas (I hate to face a wall). Moreover, although I'm the world's easiest mark for clever new cooking gadgets, I don't like kitchens that look gimmicked up. A good readable clock, a can opener, racks for dish towels, holders for paper ones and for rolls of waxed paper and foil—all these belong on kitchen walls because they are handiest there. But I'd rather have my pots and pans on shelves, where they're easy to get at without having to act as decoration.

"The small guestroom . . . in white or a tint of lime with fabrics of white, green, and pink."

A kitchen is beautiful to me only if it is designed to work, with counters, sinks and appliances ranged around the walls in cooking-step sequence—counter space next to a refrigerator or an oven, the dishwasher next to a sink. All these seemed so simple and logical that I always imagined there was no other way to do it.

Some months later we got to the point of actually choosing equipment. The ovens and broiler I chose were the electric kind that when set to an extra-high temperature will actually clean themselves. Another company made the two sets of gas surface burners I picked. The refrigerator had the same sort of automatic ice-maker that for years had saved us the bother of filling trays and chopping out cubes. The vertical freezer we liked best for space and drawer arrangement was the same brand as the refrigerator. The dishwashers today are designed to hold more china and glassware, yet they take up no more floor space than the older models.

In some cases, the choice was made for us. Of the several different kinds of ceramic broilers, only one seemed large enough to do meats for party-size groups of people. Only one company made the motor-driven food center I hoped would save so much time and handwork when it came to chopping, puréeing, and mixing; and Margot Larsen had given me the manufacturer's name when she first told me about the warming drawers she'd found so wonderful. We ordered some of these wonder-working appliances in stainless steel—the pantry and kitchen sinks, the refrigerator and freezer—and the rest in white, the appliance color I have always liked best. When it came to cabinets, we selected the enameled steel kind that can be wiped clean with a damp cloth and whose adjustable shelves slide in and out.

The design of the kitchen concerned me, because it seems to me that while contemporary living rooms have been growing more and more relentlessly functional and sterile, kitchens have gotten progressively cuter. There's such a passion for concealment, such concern about looks, that efficiency rates only an afterthought.

In the laundry, too, I wanted an efficiency approach. To any woman who has ever dealt with washing, drying, and ironing, there's an obvious worksaving order:

". . . but in my bath, I planned to use red-striped wallcovering with a flowered border."

first, the tubs for soaking; then the washer, the dryer, the mangle (if you have one), and a place to iron. Next come shelves for folded clean things and a hanging bar for finished clothes. In the new laundry, there will be a center for hanging, pressing, and general upkeep on the other side of the room, plus a sink for hand-washing small things; a hanging rod with a drain below it for drip-drying, and an ironing board (with sleeve boards) for pressing; a comfortable chair with a good light for mending; and a cabinet for soaps, dry-cleaning supplies, shoe-polishing equipment.

I should point out that John and I did have our differences from time to time. But we never really tripped over them, basically, I think, because both of us are perfectionists. And people thus afflicted—perhaps because they so often seem unreasonable to everybody else—have great empathy for each other.

I found that John usually knew the minute I felt that something wasn't quite right. Almost without exception he considered the likes and dislikes Dick and I expressed reason enough for change. He never made us feel we were fussing, no matter how small the detail.

For his part, John was totally unable to pretend he liked something when he didn't. In his book, the cardinal sin is misuse of materials, by which he means the use of any particular substance to do a job for which something else is clearly better suited. He is, for example, opposed to the use of vinyl in a bathroom to replace ceramic tile which, he feels, is far more easily maintained and more sanitary. It follows that he hates fakes, or schwindles (as he calls cheats) in workmanship or material. And I must say I agree with him. It seems a shame that so little imagination has been used to develop, say, a good honest "vinyl" look. I can't believe it will ever really present its best face posing as marble or delft tile or bits of stone imprisoned in jellied chicken consommé.

In our November issue, we complete Dorothy Rodgers' story, including many of the special menus and recipes she serves in the new house.

Three dramatic examples, opposite, of the decorative splash you can create with the big stitch: a rug border done in a zigzag chain stitch is attached to a center of broadloom carpet. Pillow and bench-pad, in vivid geometrics that you can design as you proceed, are both worked in variations of the fly stitch. Op-art impact, left, of valance and headboard upholstery comes from irregular zigzag design in French stitch, combining four colors with white. Sculptured texture of gold-beige-white pillow is created with herringbone stitch. Other white pillow in rice stitch is over-embroidered with French knots.

Actual size of big stitch, below, shows heroic scale of rug yarn and rug canvas. The scale is five stitches to an inch of canvas, compared with needlepoint's 20. Texture and design of this new canvas embroidery are formed by the bigness of the stitch and the way color and shades of color are interplayed.

Big effects with

INSTANT NEEDLEPOINT

By EPSIE KINARD

It's big, it's bold, and its texture is like beautiful ornamental stonework carved in wool. This is the new giant embroidery with rug yarn on rug canvas, shown above, actual size. The sophistication of massive stitches and the interplay of colors on this grand scale are today's turnabout on classic needlepoint. The dramatic impact upon rooms made by the big stitches is shown on these pages with pieces designed and made for HOUSE BEAUTIFUL by Jan Orr. In one week you can embroider a cushion that would have taken you a month in traditional needlepoint. Complete instructions are on page 50.

House Beautiful's Portfolio of

brought to life

Envision the most beautiful flower painting you have ever seen, and then imagine the even more wondrous experience of seeing it as a fresh-flower reality. This was the thought that led HOUSE BEAUTIFUL to countless museums and galleries to find great flower paintings to reproduce.

After selecting four flower masterpieces, right, we commissioned a leading New York floral designer, MacDonald Forbes Flowers, to recreate them. To give the bouquets the freshness of the original, we waited for each flower group to come into bloom in its natural season. We searched out appropriate containers and suitable background materials. As each painting came to life through the artistry of the arranger, photographer Tom Wier captured the subtle moods of the original, at the same time lending each arrangement the unmistakable aura of freshness and reality, as shown on the next four pages.

Painters of Flower Masterpieces

The four artists whose work was chosen each had a different—and highly personal—approach to flower painting. To Vincent van Gogh, flowers were a source of strength, and in the last years, after he went to France, he painted flowers again and again—full, abundant, beaming blossoms—spreading from vases with exuberant vigor, as in "Irises."

Edouard Manet loved flowers simply for themselves—beautiful, rich, dewy blossoms. He painted flowers from simple gardens and grouped those of a single season. Manet loved the summer, when blossoms abounded; to him the beauty of the flower was supreme, and his "Bouquet of Flowers" proclaims this excitement.

Henri Fantin-Latour, a serene, musical man, approached flowers with a quiet reverence and tenderness which emanates from the veiled quality of his "Basket of Roses." Painter of more still lifes than any other 19th-century artist, he arranged flowers, especially roses, in many ways, but always with an inimitable delicacy.

Flowers were ethereal to Odilon Redon, and he usually worked with vases of them at his side. He likened their appeal to that of the human face, and painted them as if they had souls, thus giving his flowers a quality of the transitory. His greatest skill lay in composition, framing large, defined blossoms with smaller, delicate flowers, such as forget-me-nots.

It is possible, in your own home, to recreate flower paintings, whether it is a favorite already familiar or one still to be chosen. The search can be a marvelous venture in itself because it leads to museums, galleries, and libraries to study originals and reproductions. The possibilities are limitless, but the rewards are certain.

THE QUIET REVOLUTION UNDERFOOT

Late Report from the Rug and Carpet Markets

Editor: PHOEBE HYDE

ABUNDANCE. Everywhere, spilling over with patterns, textures, colors. Many designs in the new fibers . . . acrylic, nylon, polypropylene, polyester. But new wools too, with twists looking like breakfast cereal and sculptured multilevel constructions.

THE BIG NEWS. Quiet, disciplined geometric patterns that lie flat. A marvelous look, seized on by discerning decorators. These small patterns a natural reaction to the boldly scaled motifs of recent years. The miniature geometrics widen the decorating outlook, suggest new harmonies.

THE TEXTURES. Running the gamut from thick, tangled shags to luxurious, sheared pile . . . many with a suggestion of pattern created by streaks of contrasting color or combinations of high and low pile.

COLOR. Going two ways. Subdued tones borrowed from 18th-century French needlework, in designs to complement period furnishings. Vibrant colors inspired by the art world . . . striking combinations made possible by developments in dyeing techniques.

BORDERS. Patterned borders coordinated with carpet designs, at each end of a rug, clear around, or possibly at one end of an abstract design.

SIZES. New patterns and textures used wall-to-wall or made into room-size rugs. For another effect, in a large room with polished floors, decorators mix sizes and textures—small geometric patterns kept in off-whites, charcoals, and brown-blacks to allow color or pattern on other surfaces. Also news, and at moderate prices: bold accent rugs—one in a room—creating a smashing focal point. Custom orders of special-design accent rugs now far more widespread.

DISPOSABLES. A whole new category. Highly decorative, in a lighthearted mood, made with synthetic and paper fibers combining quilting, tufting and printing in eye-catching, youth-oriented designs.

ON THE NEXT FOUR PAGES: House Beautiful's selection of the smashing patterns in color and the played-down black-and-white geometrics and textures.

Hidden in a Canadian forest

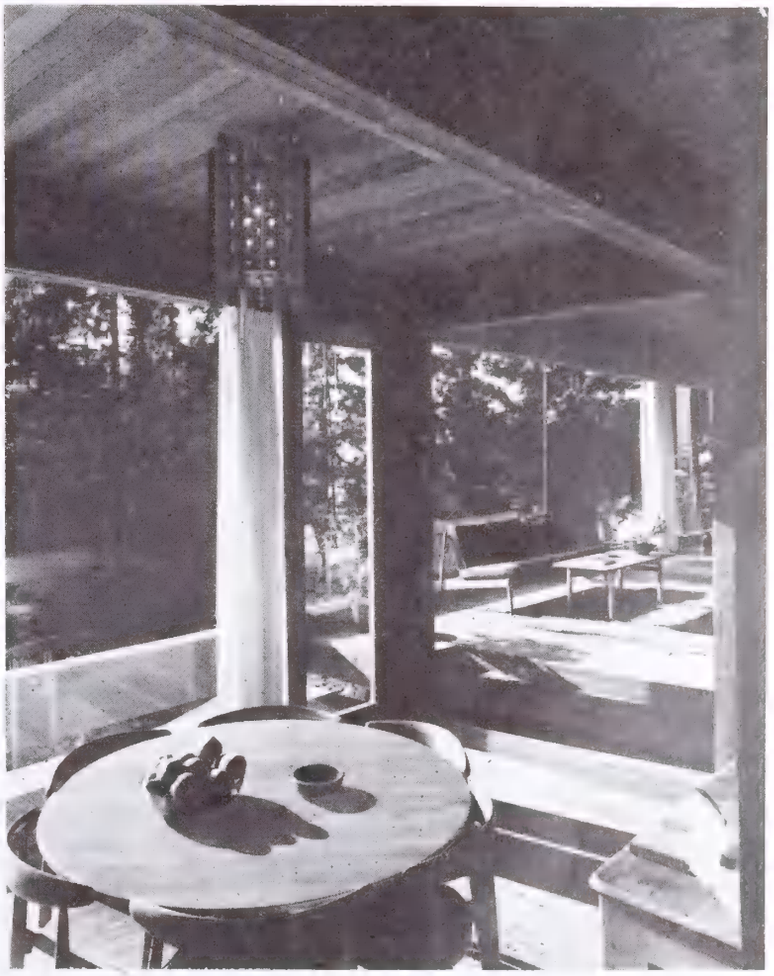
A MAGNIFICENT TIMBER PAVILION

By JAMES DE LONG

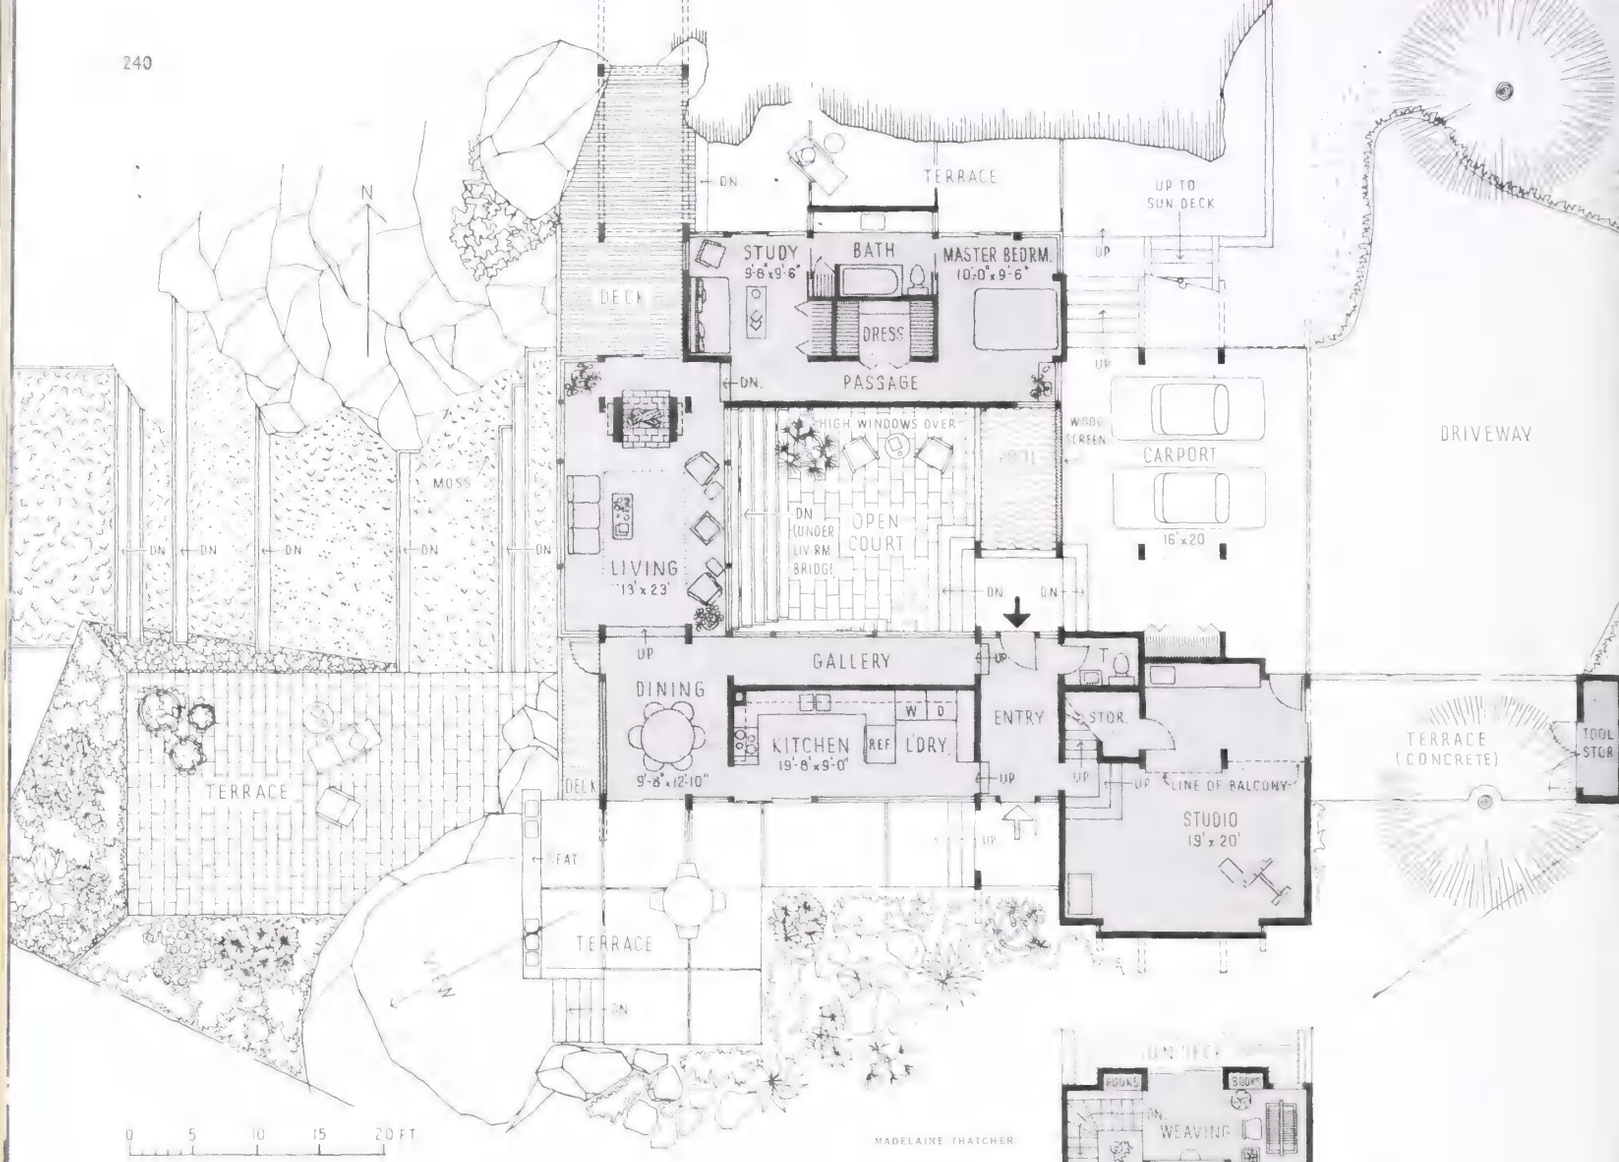
The Canadian province of British Columbia is a great habitat of fir and red cedar. Here, on its home ground, the forest has yielded its timber to the making of an unusual human habitat. In West Vancouver, on a sloping site that faces the shining Strait of Georgia, these golden bars of wood have been stacked like bullion among the rocky upthrusts of the land. They are arranged with the direct precision and straight purpose of primitive architecture, but the sheltering function they perform and the living space they enfold have been translated by architects Erickson and Massey into a home of clear-cut, glass-walled beauty.

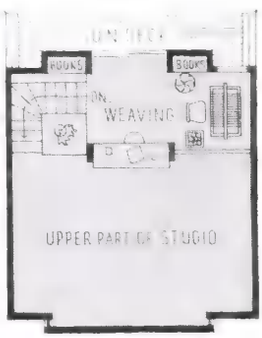
The owners, Professor and Mrs. Gordon Smith, had no qualms about the eloquence of the translation—the architects had designed a previous home for them. This time, the only stipulation was a simple structure for simple living. "The house just expresses itself," Mrs. Smith explains, "but in so doing, it expresses us far better than we ever dreamed." This is due, in part, to the subtle blending of house and site, and to a sure use of wood. Even the terrace paving, below, and monumental steps under the bridged living room, opposite, are made of timber blocks and planks. Continued

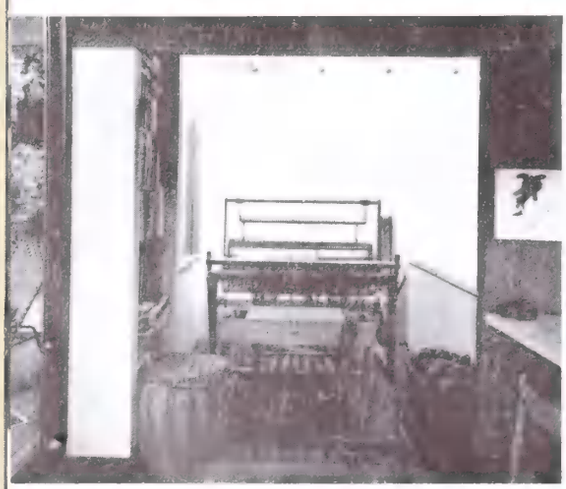
EZRA STOLLER



The bridgelike living room, above and upper right, spans a gap between two rock masses in the landscape and forms an exciting, transparent viewing pavilion that looks two ways—out toward a panorama of Northwestern grandeur, and back down into the quiet pool and descending tiers of the open court that falls away under the house. The sculptural, concrete fireplace has been bush-hammered to expose the colorful stone aggregate and create a rough-textured surface. Compact kitchen, right, doubles as a passage.







The dining area, left, is a smaller stepped-down version of the living room, and shares its views. The ceiling boards here and throughout the house are Western red cedar. The floors are of oak. The brass lighting fixture hanging over the dining table was designed and built by the owner. The master bedroom, above, is small and set apart with its own access to the upper terrace. Wall of the niche behind bed is covered with burlap stained to match the natural timbers. Brass and teak wall hanging by owner.

This house is a superb, three-dimensional exercise in the conquest of uneven terrain. A study of the floor plan, above, shows the gradual, almost imperceptible ascent from the low point of the studio to the high point of the master bedroom—a vertical difference of over five feet, but gently accomplished, a few steps at a time.

The tall, immaculate studio, right and opposite, is an integral part of the house, yet its careful placement in the plan gives it the dual benefits of seeming detachment combined with immediate proximity to the rest of the house. Professor Smith is a working painter, as well as a teacher of art, so the studio is an important, much-used adjunct to the other living spaces. The floor is of easily maintained pure vinyl, and the wall spaces that appear between the rough-hewn structural timbers are plywood covered with whitewashed burlap. Loom space has been provided on the studio mezzanine, left, for Mrs. Smith, so that she and her husband can share their working hours. More photographs on page 270.

First harvest from Ireland's brilliant new design workshop

KILKENNY

From Ireland, we present a renaissance of craftsmanship, a reawakening of old hand skills to serve modern industry with inspiration for machine-made beauty

Editors: MARION GOUGH and JACK HENDRIX

Kilkenny—it's an old Irish word for a new idea coming to exciting fruition in the 13th-century castle of the same name. Just 75 miles from Dublin, in the kind of green and moonglow countryside every real traveler would venture far afield to visit, looms are clacking, the potter's wheel is spinning, the silversmith's hammer is giving shape to precious silver: there are hands that turn wood, print cloth, dip candles. All transpires in the nobly arched and granite precincts which formerly stabled the thoroughbreds of the Dukes of Ormonde. Visitors are cordially welcome.

This is the romantic, if thoroughly hardheaded enterprise known as The Kilkenny Design Workshops, Limited, a venture sponsored by the Irish government's Export Board, conceived as a center where gifted young Irish might renew their not inconsiderable heritage of design talents and craftsmanship. For reference, recall Ireland's renowned linen damask, robust tweeds, feather-soft blankets, lace-encrusted laces, Dublin-made silver, and the Dublin carriage, 18th-century prestige precursor of the Mercedes-Benz: look into the seeds of time or the cases of the National Museum for Ireland's awesome Bronze Age skills with gold and silver, bronze and iron.

Reawakening such marketable gifts, Kilkenny offers Irish industry a wellspring of trained, creative talent and handcrafted models of consequential design, capable of being manufactured in quantity.

Meantime, the skillful of many lands—artists, craftsmen, technicians—have been invited to participate, experimenting, teaching, themselves learning in the process, so that today, in its third year of being, Kilkenny has already become an international meeting ground of fresh young talent, and scholarships here are keenly sought after.

House Beautiful, for the fun and the sheer beauty of it, has photographed, in their lovely native habitat, a generous sampling of products, from terry towels to teapots. We show them on these four pages. In the U.S.A. you will soon see this entire collection at Altman's, New York, in their own Kilkenny Design Workshop, which will be inaugurated on September 27, and will thereafter continue to carry the Workshops' wares. A selection of these products will also be available this autumn at Sibley, Lindsay & Curr in Rochester, and Marshall Field in Chicago. All products of Kilkenny Design Workshops origin are labeled with the distinctive insignia which initials this text. (Photographs of Kilkenny designs on the next three pages)

Banners hung out on the outward walls, below, are in this case lengths of curtain linen, patterns stimulated by an ancient motif of broken diamonds and by the cartwheel windows and arches of Kilkenny's architecture. By Samuel Lamont & Sons, washable, preshrunk, stain-resistant.

The taper in the window, an Irish tradition, is brought up to date in a collection of handmade candles in ceramic holders in one of the castle's distinctive cartwheel window, above. View is toward heroic arches, once stable stalls, now converted into Kilkenny Workshops.

New dinnerware in a courtyard of the Workshops where its patterns were born, below. On a white earthenware body, "Kinvara" has a motif of abstract leaves, in black or blue; "Lismore" is bordered in lacy, stylized flowers, red and rust or blue and green. Both by Arklow Pottery.

Rich as heraldic tapestries, two all-wool woven bedspreads drape the walkway of the John Rothe house in Kilkenny town, top. Irish Tapestry Industries make them in five colorations. Sight-seeing bonuses in Kilkenny are the castle, St. Candice's Cathedral, and this 16th-century house.

Kilkenny's new, meticulously hand-wrought sterling hollowware, a reburnishing of an 18th-century [illegible]

America has virtually every important edible nut at its command, yet most American cooks have yet to discover how rewarding—and how elegant—it is to cook with nuts. It was the Spanish who first served nuts fried and salted (now the ubiquitous American hors d'oeuvre), stirred them into paellas, turned them into sauces, garnished vegetables with them, strewed them over fish, and used them as the base for many a delicious confection.

By HELEN McCULLY

Nuts are so Elegant for Cooking

Filbert Torte with Chocolate Whipped Cream

2½ cups toasted filberts, grated
9 eggs, separated
1 cup sugar
1 teaspoon grated orange peel
2 tablespoons orange juice
1 teaspoon grated lemon peel
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1 teaspoon vanilla
¼ teaspoon salt

Spread the filberts in a shallow pan and bake in 400° oven 10 to 15 minutes, stirring occasionally. Cool, then grate with a hand-operated nut grater. Beat the egg yolks with an electric beater or in an electric mixer until thick and creamy; then gradually beat in the sugar. Continue beating until the mixture makes "ribbons." Then stir in all the remaining ingredients except the egg whites.

Beat the egg whites until stiff and shiny when the beater is held straight up. Whip about a third of the whites into the batter vigorously. Then gently fold in the remainder. Pour into an ungreased nine-inch spring-form pan and bake in a 350° oven for 50 to 60 minutes or until a toothpick inserted in the center comes out dry. Invert cake in the pan onto a rack that has been covered with a fresh dish towel, folded double. Cool 24 hours. Just before serving, cover with the following frosting:

Chocolate Whipped Cream

Combine in a bowl 1½ cups heavy cream, ¼ cup sugar, 2 tablespoons unsweetened cocoa and ½ teaspoon vanilla. Refrigerate for two hours. Whip the mixture just before you are ready to serve; it may darken if left standing.

Brazil Nut Pudding with Apricot Sauce

½ cup ground toasted Brazil nuts
2 cups milk
1 cup fine dry bread crumbs
2 tablespoons butter
2 eggs, lightly beaten
6 tablespoons sugar
½ teaspoon grated lemon rind

Chop the nuts coarsely. Place in a pan and toast in a preheated 300° oven until lightly brown. Then grind very fine in the electric blender.

Heat the milk until a film shines on top, then add the bread crumbs and butter. Cool. When cold, add the beaten eggs, sugar and lemon rind.

Pour into eight buttered ramekins and place in a shallow baking pan. Pour boiling water into the pan to reach half the depth of the molds, and bake in a preheated 325° oven for one hour. Allow to cool for five minutes, then unmold onto a serving platter. Serve hot with Apricot Sauce: Combine a 12-ounce jar of apricot jam with 6 tablespoons of sugar and ½ cup of water in a saucepan. Cook, stirring constantly, over moderate heat for five minutes. Strain through a fine sieve or cheesecloth. Then stir in a tablespoon or so of Cognac, Grand Marnier, or Kirsch.

Black Walnut Cake

2 cups shelled black walnuts*
6 tablespoons all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon cream of tartar
Good pinch of salt
10 eggs, separated
1¼ cups sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla

Grease the bottom, not the sides, of a ten-inch tube and line only the bottom with wax paper. Grease the paper. Set aside. Grate the nuts with a hand-operated nut grater; sift the flour, cream of tartar, and salt together. Combine the nuts with the flour mixture. Beat the yolks with an electric beater or in an electric mixer, then gradually beat in the sugar until the mixture is thick and makes "ribbons." Stir in the vanilla. Combine very thoroughly with the nut-flour mixture.

Beat the whites until they form stiff peaks. Whip about a third of the whites into the batter vigorously, then gently fold in the remainder with a rubber spatula. Pour into the prepared pan and bake in a preheated 375° oven for 50 minutes or until a toothpick inserted in the center comes out dry.

Invert cake on a rack until cold, then loosen sides carefully with a spatula, remove pan, peel off wax paper.

NOBODY EVER TELLS YOU THESE THINGS

By HELEN McCULLY

Is chow mein an authentic Chinese dish? No. The story goes that years ago, long before Chinese restaurants were so well established in the U.S., a group of gold miners barged into a Chinese restaurant in San Francisco after closing time and demanded food. The Chinese cook, having nothing to offer, heated up some leftovers, scrambled them, and served them. Thus, the Cantonese equivalent of a "dog's dinner."

What is Anadama Bread? A cornmeal-and-molasses bread that originated over a hundred years ago in Rockport, Massachusetts. It seems a fisherman, sick and tired of the steamed cornmeal-mush-and-molasses dinner his lazy wife served him without end, one day seized the mixture, added flour and yeast, and baked it, saying, "Anna, damn her." Thus, Anadama bread.

What is the difference between hamburger, ground beef, ground chuck, ground round, and ground sirloin? The U.S. Department of Agriculture points out that each of these names on the label on a package of ground meat has a distinct and different meaning. It is important to note here, however, that nutritionally they all have the same amount of protein, vitamins, and minerals.

Hamburger can contain up to 30 percent fat, which may include the addition of beef fat over and above that attached to the meat being ground. But it cannot be labeled as regular hamburger if it contains extenders such as non-fat dry milk, soybean products, cereals, water, etc. Ground beef can contain the same amount of fat, but usually retailers will limit it to 20 to 25 percent, since only that fat which is normally on the meat is used. It is illegal to add additional fat or extenders. You get somewhat less shrinkage with ground beef than with hamburger, but both are best used in meat loaves, casseroles, sauces, and in Italian and Mexican dishes calling for ground beef.

Ground chuck, meat from the shoulder or "chuck" of the animal, slightly leaner than hamburger or ground beef, 15 to 20 percent fat, is especially good for patties. Ground round, just what its name implies (round steak ground up), has a fat content of about eleven percent, and is therefore less desirable for grinding and making patties. It is excellent for people on low-fat diets. Broadly speaking, however, it is best used in combination with other ingredients. Ground sirloin, the best, comes from sirloin steak and definitely makes a "king" of a hamburger.

No matter what kind of ground beef you buy, look for the bluish-red color that indicates freshly ground meat. And remember, for tenderness and juicy results, cook only to the medium stage even if it is combined with other ingredients, and don't ever pound meat patties into shape. Treat them tenderly—like a baby.

What are food additives? The National Academy of Sciences defines a food additive as a "substance or mixture of substances, other than a basic foodstuff, which is present in a food as a result of production, processing, storage, or packaging." The oldest known additive is salt, which can perform two functions: enhance the taste of the food and/or preserve it.

What is lefse? A Norwegian bread. Mrs. Margaret Clausen, of Jamestown, North Dakota, writes: "There are as many recipes as there are dialects in Norway." Although the recipe was originally made with freshly cooked potatoes, Mrs. Clausen has adapted it to instant potatoes. In addition, it calls for heavy sweet cream, shortening, flour, salt, etc. The paper-thin lefse are cooked in a skillet, on a griddle, or in a lefse baker.

Are pumpkin and squash alike? Botanically, they are both known as gourds, and no one seems quite clear about what constitutes a pumpkin or a squash—to the extent that the U.S. Government permits canners to use the flesh of either vegetable under the name pumpkin. They can be used interchangeably in cooking, and there is a great difference of opinion as to which makes the best eating. In the 1896 edition of Fannie Farmer's The Boston Cooking School Cook Book, the recipes for squash and pumpkin are identical. We're all inclined to say pumpkin (or "punkin") pie regardless of which vegetable is used.

Can evaporated milk and condensed milk be used interchangeably? No. Evaporated milk is whole milk with about half the water removed; then the milk is homogenized to prevent separation, cooked, canned, and sterilized by heat. Sweetened condensed milk is also evaporated whole milk that has up to 40 percent sugar added, which preserves the milk without final heat sterilization. Evaporated milk can be used straight from the can as a substitute for cream, or whipped, or it can be reconstituted by the addition of equal amounts of water, then used as you would use whole fluid milk. Sweetened condensed milk, which is very thick and rich, is used to make ice cream and other frozen desserts, lemon and other pie fillings, cookies, candies, etc. It has excellent keeping qualities but, as is true of evaporated milk, must be refrigerated once opened.

What is a calorie? Food is the source of energy for the body, and the energy value of food is measured in the form of the heat it will provide when it is burned up or oxidized by the body. A calorie is the unit used to measure this energy (heat), as an inch is a unit of length, and a minute is a unit of time. It is defined as the amount of heat required to raise the temperature of a kilogram of water (about one quart) one degree centigrade. You gain weight when your food provides more energy—or calories—than your body uses. The extra energy is stored mainly as fat. About 3,500 extra calories produce a pound of fat.

What is a Dobos torte? A marvelous pastry, the inspiration of a Hungarian pastry chef named Dobos. It has six layers, a rich chocolate filling, and is crowned with a caramel glaze.

Can you take the salt out of over-salted foods? No. Old cookbooks once suggested adding sugar to counteract the salt. It simply doesn't work. Salting should be done by tasting. If a recipe calls for ingredients with a high salt content (anchovies, tuna, etc.), then it's up to the cook to taste as she cooks.

What carpenter's tools do you use in the kitchen? A pair of pliers, to loosen recalcitrant bottle tops, "stuck" pepper mills, etc.; a screwdriver, to pry open boxes, to tighten a loose screw on an appliance, to lend to the repair man who turns up without one; a ruler, to measure pans, to use as a guide in cutting pastry or any dough that requires fairly precise measurements; a ball of soft, white string, to truss fowl, to tie asparagus in bundles before cooking, etc.; a pair of scissors for the obvious uses—cutting string, paper, and so on. ■

For years drips have out-maneuvered fingers, spoons, and under-dishes. They have drooled, dribbled, and dropped on linen, laps, and laces. Now, something new: A pear-shaped bulb through which heavy honey and sticky syrups flow freely and cleanly. Just press down the thumb and up comes the plumb; when the plumb-rod drops, the flowing stops.

The Honey-Bulb doesn't drip, it emits. And it's so simple it works.

Walnut Torte with Butter Frosting

2 cups walnuts or 1½ cups filberts
½ cup sifted all-purpose flour
½ teaspoon powder instant coffee
½ teaspoon cocoa
6 eggs, separated
1 cup sugar
1 teaspoon grated lemon peel
1 teaspoon rum
½ teaspoon vanilla

Grease the bottom of two nine-inch round layer-cake pans: line with wax paper, then grease the paper. Take care not to grease the sides. Set aside. Grate the nuts, using a rotary-type hand grater. Do not blend in the electric blender. Combine thoroughly with the flour. Combine the flour-nut mixture with the instant coffee and cocoa and set aside.

Beat the yolks with an electric beater or in an electric mixer, adding ½ cup of the sugar gradually, until the mixture is very thick, creamy, and light in color. Stir in the lemon peel, rum, vanilla, and the flour-nut combination thoroughly.

Beat the whites until they begin to take a shape, then gradually beat in the remaining sugar and continue beating until the meringue is stiff, shiny, and holds firm peaks.

Add about a third of the meringue to the batter, folding it in thoroughly. Then fold in the remainder carefully but gently until all patches of white have disappeared. Take care not to overmix.

Pour the batter into the prepared pans, dividing it evenly, spreading it to the edges of the pans with a spatula. Place in a preheated 350° oven and bake for 25 to 30 minutes or until the torte springs back when touched lightly at the center or a toothpick inserted in the center comes out dry. Cool for 15 minutes on racks, then turn out and pull off the wax paper gently. Cool completely before frosting.

Brownie Torte

2 squares (1-ounce size) unsweetened chocolate
½ cup (1 stick) butter
1 cup sugar
2 eggs
Good pinch salt
½ cup walnuts, finely grated
1 cup walnuts, coarsely chopped
½ cup fine bread crumbs
½ teaspoon vanilla

Butter an eight-inch round cak pan and line the bottom with wa paper, then butter the paper. S aside.

Melt the chocolate over ho not boiling, water. Work or creat the butter with your hands o preferably, an electric beater u til light and fluffy. Gradually work in the sugar, beating constantly. Then add the eggs, one at a time, beating hard after each addition. Stir in all remaining ingredients. Pour into the prepared pan and bake in a preheated 350° oven for 25 to 30 minutes or until torte begins to shrink, ever so slightly, from the edge of the pan. Cool for about 15 minutes on a cake rack. Then turn out, peel off the wax paper carefully, and place the torte on a serving plate.

Note: This makes a very soft torte and will seem uncooked, which is the way it should be. Serve in wedges.

Almond Roll

Vegetable shortening
7 eggs, separated
6 tablespoons sugar
¾ cup ground almonds or walnuts
1 teaspoon ground ginger
Confectioners' sugar, sifted
1½ cups heavy cream
2 tablespoons finely chopped preserved ginger

Grease a 10-by-15″ jelly-roll pan with vegetable shortening. Line with wax paper, then grease the paper. Set aside.

Beat the egg yolks with an electric beater or in an electric mixer until they are very thick, pale and creamy. Gradually beat in the sugar, beating constantly. Beat the whites until they are stiff, shiny and stand in firm peaks. Whip about a third of the whites into the egg mixture with a whisk. Then fold in thoroughly the remainder with a rubber spatula, taking care not to overmix. Now, fold in the nuts and ground ginger carefully.

Pour the batter into the prepared pan, spreading it evenly to the sides and corners with a rubber spatula. Place in a preheated 350° oven and bake for 30 to 35 minutes or until the cake has lightly browned and springs back when touched with the tip of your finger.

Place the pan on a rack and cover with a damp cloth. Cool thoroughly. Remove the cloth, sift confectioners' sugar over the top. Invert the pan over a large piece of wax paper, then carefully peel off the paper from the bottom of the cake.

Whip the heavy cream and sweeten lightly. Fold in the preserved ginger and spread over the cake evenly. With your hands under the wax paper, roll the cake up like a jelly roll. To finish, sift confectioners' sugar over top.

Almond and Poppy Seed Cake

1½ cups almonds with skins
½ cup (2½-ounce bottle) poppy seeds
10 eggs, separated
1¼ cups sugar
1 teaspoon almond extract
1 teaspoon cream of tartar

Grease the bottom only of a ten-inch tube pan. Cut a piece of wax paper to fit, then grease the paper. Do not grease sides and tube. Set aside.

Grate the almonds with a nut grater; grind the poppy seeds very fine in an electric blender. Combine the two thoroughly. Beat the yolks with an electric beater or in the electric mixer, adding the sugar gradually. Continue beating until mixture is light, very thick, and smooth. Stir in the almond extract and the nut mixture.

Sprinkle the cream of tartar over the whites and beat until the whites are stiff, shiny and hold firm peaks. Add about a third of the beaten whites to the nut mixture, beating them in vigorously. Then fold in the remainder thoroughly but gently. Pour the batter into the prepared pan and bake in a preheated 375° oven for 50 minutes or until a toothpick inserted in the center comes out dry. Invert cake on a wire rack and allow to stand until cool—about two hours.

To remove from the pan, loosen sides carefully with a knife, then invert on a cake plate. Peel off the wax paper with care. A delicious and interesting cake that keeps well if wrapped in Saran.

Almond Paste

Almond paste, also known as marchpane and marzipan, in France as massepain, in Italy as marzapane, is used to make candies, in pastries of all kinds, and in England, particularly, to finish fruit cakes. It is available commercially, much finer in texture than homemade, but the two can be used interchangeably in recipes calling for almond paste.

1 pound (2 cups) blanched almonds
3 egg whites
1 pound (2 cups) confectioners' sugar, sifted
1 teaspoon almond extract

Grind the nuts in an electric blender; beat egg whites slightly, then work into the ground nuts thoroughly along with the sugar and the almond extract.

Marzipan Potatoes

With your hands slightly damp, pinch off bits of the almond paste in pieces about the size of a walnut. Shape into slightly elongated balls. Poke the surface with a toothpick to simulate potato eyes. Roll in cocoa and refrigerate. Makes about 30.

Pignolia Cookies

2 tablespoons kirsch
2 cups almond paste, your own or commercial
1 egg white
¼ cup pignolias

Butter and flour two cookie sheets. Combine the kirsch with the almond paste thoroughly. With damp hands, shape into little patties about 1½" wide, and place on the prepared sheets about one inch apart. Brush tops with egg white, arrange six nuts on each top. Allow to stand at room temperature for two hours. Bake in a preheated 400° oven six to eight minutes or until light brown. Lift off the sheet with spatula. Makes about 40.

Peanut Butter Drops

1 cup sifted all-purpose flour
½ teaspoon ginger
¼ teaspoon ground cloves
1 teaspoon baking soda
½ cup shortening
¾ cup peanut butter
1 cup brown sugar, firmly packed
2 eggs
2 tablespoons milk
1 cup peanuts

Sift flour, ginger, cloves and baking soda together. Combine shortening and peanut butter and work together with an electric beater or your hands until smooth. Gradually work in the sugar thoroughly. Add the eggs, one at a time, beating hard after each addition. Stir in the milk, then the flour mixture and peanuts, mixing together thoroughly.

Drop by teaspoons onto an ungreased baking sheet, an inch or so apart to allow for spreading. Bake in a preheated 350° oven for ten to twelve minutes. Cool slightly before removing from baking sheet. Makes about three dozen.

Sweet and savory sauces that call for nuts

Pistachio Mayonnaise

Blanch ½ cup shelled pistachio nuts in boiling water, then slip off the skins. Pound nuts in a mortar until very fine, or grate in the blender or the hand-operated nut grater. Mix with 1 tablespoon each, strained fresh lemon juice and minced parsley, ¼ teaspoon dry mustard. Stir into 1 cup good mayonnaise. Serve with cold poached salmon, lobster, turbot, or halibut.

Curry Sauce

To your favorite curry sauce, add coarsely chopped, toasted almonds or peanuts. Allow about ¼ cup nuts to 1 cup of curry sauce.

Almond Butter

Make in these proportions: ½ cup (1 stick) salted butter to 12 blanched almonds, ground very fine in the blender. Cream the butter, then work in the almonds. Shape into a roll, wrap in foil, and refrigerate. Slice to serve with fish, asparagus, beans, etc.

Maple Walnut Sauce (for ice cream)

Bring about 1½ cups real maple syrup to the boiling point. Then cook a few minutes to thicken slightly. Take off the heat and stir in ½ cup or so of coarsely chopped walnuts. Allow sauce to cool. Keeps well, if it is refrigerated.

Honey Nut Sauce

Heat ½ cup liquid honey to the boiling point only, then stir in ½ cup coarsely chopped walnuts, blanched almonds, or filberts.

Almond Chocolate Sauce

KitchenAid introduces the Super Disposer.

It's made by the same people who make KitchenAid dishwashers.

It does everything a fine disposer should do. For example, it pulverizes steak bones and chicken bones. Even grinds stringy things like corn husks. Extra-thick insulation makes it quiet.

If it jams, it eliminates the jam automatically.

A handful of ways to use nuts imaginatively

Salted peanuts on ice cream. Serve vanilla ice cream plain, with a generous serving of salted peanuts. Delicious.

Slivered almonds with fish. The next time you serve fillets, garnish them with almonds or filberts like this: Melt ¼ cup (½ stick) sweet butter in a saucepan, add ¾ cup blanched, slivered almonds or thinly sliced filberts and brown lightly. Squeeze lemon juice over the fillets, and top with the almond sauce.

Coat fish with breadcrumbs and nuts. Combine fine, fresh breadcrumbs with ground almonds, half and half. Use when you're preparing fish that calls for a coating. Nice change.

Toasted, chopped almonds with creamed chicken or turkey. Toast, then chop rather coarsely a handful or so of almonds and add to the creamed dish just before serving. Excellent.

Walnuts are nice in chicken salad. Combine coarsely chopped walnuts with the chicken mixture before adding the dressing.

Nuts go well in cream-cheese sandwiches. Simply soften the cheese, then work in finely chopped almonds, walnuts, pecans, or filberts with a dash of salt.

Scalloped onions are improved with the addition of peanuts. Add ¾ cup of nuts, coarsely chopped, to a medium casserole, before baking.

Rice pudding has a new taste when a cup or so of chopped peanuts is stirred into the pudding before baking.

Attractive appetizer. Press diced roasted almonds on all sides of an eight-ounce package of cream cheese. Chill. Serve with plain crackers or toast.

Garnish soups with slivered, toasted almonds—mushroom, pea, or asparagus soup.

Easy frosting. Cream ¼ cup (½ stick) sweet butter. Gradually work in 1 cup sifted confectioners' sugar, ½ teaspoon grated lemon rind, 2 teaspoons lemon juice, and a dash of salt. Then stir in ½ cup finely diced roasted almonds. Makes about 1 cup.

The buying and preparation of nuts for cooking

How to buy nuts

▪ Peanuts in the shell are available salted or unsalted, and most experts consider them the best despite having to shell them. Salted peanuts, out of the shell, come vacuum-packed in jars, cans or transparent bags. Salted Spanish peanuts, the little ones with the red skins, packed the same way, are generally used in making candy. Both types are available "dry-roasted," which means they have been roasted in the oven as against the more traditional deep-fat fried. Obviously, dry-roasted peanuts have fewer calories than fried peanuts. Recently a new low-calorie, high-protein peanut, developed by the U.S. Department of Agriculture, has come on the market. About one third of the peanut oil is removed, but in the process the percentage of protein is increased.

▪ Walnuts are available in the shell in transparent one- and two-pound bags; shelled in three- to ten-ounce or one- and two-pound bags; or shelled in vacuum cans, four- and eight-ounce size. They also come ground, in transparent bags.

• Almonds are available in the shell; whole natural; whole blanched; sliced natural; toasted, blanched, and slivered; sliced blanched; diced and roasted; ground blanched; and smoked, to serve with drinks. All except those in the shell are packed in transparent bags or vacuum cans.

▪ Pecans are available in shell, in transparent bags; wh in pieces; and roasted, plain salted, in transparent bags, uum cans, or jars. Ground, transparent bags only. Also bulk. Also dry-roasted.

How to grate nuts

The manner in which nuts are ated or ground depends on the ipe. For a very fine grind, you n work with the electric blend-but many recipes, notably the te family where nuts take the ace of flour, call for a softer xture—fine, dry, and light. The nd-operated nut grater is esntial under these circumstances the tortes are to have their aracteristic soufflé-like texture.
is inexpensive little gadget begs in every kitchen where good oking goes on.

The yield of whole nuts differs, pending on the grating method.
the hand-operated grater, 1 p or about 5 ounces (by ight) yields 2 cups grated. In electric blender, 1 cup or out 5 ounces (by weight) yields
2 cups grated.

How to chop nuts

This can be done in the electric nder to the degree of coarse-ss needed, but it can also be ne by hand with a good French ife. Hold the tip of the knife in ur left hand and move the han-up, down, and around in a nicircle with the right hand, lling the nuts together with the de as you work.

How to blanch almonds

Bring a saucepan of water to a boil, drop the almonds in slowly, so as not to stop the water's boiling, and boil for about one minute. Drain, then slip off the skins between the thumb and forefinger. If the almonds are going to be used immediately and need to be thoroughly dry, place for a few minutes in a moderate oven in a large pan so they have room to breathe.

How to sliver almonds

Blanch, if necessary, and slice with a small, very sharp knife while they are warm and damp.

How to shell chestnuts

With a small, sharp knife, peel a tiny strip off each side of each chestnut. Place chestnuts in a pan of cold water, bring to a boil, and boil one minute. The trick in getting the outer and bitter inner shells off is to work with the chestnuts while they are still warm. Once they have been boiled, peel them one by one. Any that refuse to cooperate should be put back in boiling water for a minute.

How to cook chestnuts to serve as a vegetable

Simmer the peeled nuts until tender in chicken or beef broth, with a stalk or two of celery. Drain, purée, and combine with butter, heavy cream, and salt to taste. Excellent with roast turkey, goose, or game.

How to cook chestnuts to use in making desserts

Simmer the peeled nuts in sweetened milk flavored with a large piece of vanilla bean. Drain before using. Then follow recipe directions.

How to keep nuts

In the shell, store at room temperature, unless for a prolonged period: in that case, refrigerate. Once cans, jars, or bags have been opened, refrigerate securely covered, or freeze, depending on how soon they will be used. To freeze, place nuts in a tightly covered container or plastic bag, all air squeezed out, tied tightly. After thawing, allow nuts to dry out before using. Unlike most other foods, nuts can be refrozen. ■ of those extraordinary people who really would like the inside of a wall to look just as handsome as the side the public sees—a dream I thoroughly understand. I like to make the lining as pretty as the dress.

There is, however, the question of a door that—as I write this chapter—has been left hanging between us. It's one case where John has very frankly tried to persuade me, and I have used every bit of logic I know to make him see the door (or rather, the lack of one) my way. The entrance hall has an opening on the left that leads to the service area, and another on the right leading to the living and bedroom areas. We agreed that the one on the left should have a door; and John thinks, for symmetry's sake, there should be a matching door on the right. I maintain that a door on the right would always be open and ruin the symmetry anyway. At the present impasse, we've decided on a door frame, but nobody knows for sure whether there'll ever be a door in it. Meanwhile John smiles and refers to this as my "error." He has complete faith that one day I will change my mind.

"A Mack Sennett setting for comic scenes."

We will have to wait and see about one more of John's door theories. Plans for our pool bathhouse call for a shower with doors opening into each of two dressing rooms. Although John himself designed this, he now sees it as a Mack Sennett setting for comic scenes of forgotten locks and impromptu invasions. Since we can't figure out any other way to organize dressing space near the pool, we will just have to wait and hope for the best.

As I've said, John was never reluctant to make the adjustments we requested. Yet once I did find myself uneasy about requesting a change that both Dick and I felt was essential.

Designing a roof for a contemporary house is a special kind of business. John's first suggestion had been one main roof, starting from about eight and a half feet at the front door and sloping up to a height of 16 or 18 feet at the back wall by the pool. I pictured myself in a slant-ceiling living room, and it didn't feel graceful or beautiful or right for me or the furniture. So John came up with a brilliant new thought: We wou have not one roof but sever which not only would add varie of line but would keep the hou from looking top-heavy—a pro lem that often arises with o story buildings. It would perm flat ceilings and allow us to va the heights of the rooms acco ing to their size.

All of us felt we were near t point when we'd be able to s "That's it—no more changes." had settled on a "skin" for t house: redwood, which weath to a beautiful silver and has termites and other wood chewe a repulsively acid taste; lo fieldstone for the chimneys a the low walls outlining the garc areas; and lots of glass to g that feeling of blending the o doors with the interiors.

"Suddenly, there was the house, small but very real."

The floor plans had stayed changed for two weeks, so Jo went to work on a model of t house. When he called to say was ready, we were terribly cited. Really, it was marvelo There it sat in three, albeit sm dimensions. Its H shape was w derfully graceful. The pool w its painted blue water looked j right. Under miniature trees the bright-green grass, there w tiny people strolling (to give an idea of the actual scale). A John had set the whole thing on high stools, so that we look not down on but through its w dows and doors. The slate ro had a kind of strength and warm look of a French farmhou still the design was unmistaka contemporary. The contrasts dark-gray slate against silve gray walls, smooth glass, a rough fieldstone were simply be tiful. I could see espaliered tr against the walls. I pictured gr pots of flowers, tubs of geraniu hanging baskets of begonias a fuchsias. Suddenly, there was house—very small, but very r

Holding our breaths, we agre There would be no more chang John could finish his drawin and Mike Sochacki and his c could go to work on the foun tion. Enthusiastic and hap Dick and I left on a trip to rope.

I had planned to shop for house as we went along—to vestigate tiles in France a Spain, to order rugs in Spain a Portugal. While we weren't a o do everything we had hoped, ve did come away with some unxpected finds. Our first discovery vas something I'd been looking at nost of my life. Our first evening before we dressed for dinner—at La Réserve in Beaulieu on the Côte d'Azur—we rolled down the outside blinds. They were of slated wood and worked something like the top of a tambour desk. When not in use, they remained completely hidden on a roller built into the masonry wall above the window. To lower them, you simply turned a crank, and down they came in tracks set just outside the window. They were the sort you grow so used to seeing in European hotels, apartments, and private houses that you take them for granted. I noticed, however, that Dick was studying them. "How would they be for the house?" he finally asked. It was only then that I really saw what I'd been looking at. For our new house they would offer distinct advantages. They operated simply, shut out light effectively, and provided complete privacy. Beyond that, lowered, they would effectively close a house instantly, without recourse to boarding up.

The next morning, the concierge told us that the company that made them had an office in Nice quite near Beaulieu. One afternoon, we drove over and learned that the blinds could be made in plastic or wood, and the best were of wood imported—they told us proudly—from Oregon; we later learned it was redwood. They could be painted or stained; could be made to operate by hand or electrically (my private dream was a combination of both); and would work in cold climates—a great number had been sold in Scandinavia. We asked to have catalogs forwarded to John and went away very pleased with ourselves.

When I wrote John about the blinds, I asked him about another thought I'd had. It had occurred to me that a pair of antique wooden doors might be extremely handsome for the front entrance and provide added insurance against that too-all-new look contemporary houses sometimes have. John was enthusiastic about both ideas, so we started our door hunt in the South of France, continuing it in Barcelona and Madrid.

Actually, it was Dick who found just what we wanted in an antique shop, while I was laid up at the hotel. They were 17th-century, with a lovely patina and the right proportions. In the same shop we found an antique picture frame, Venetian red and gold, and wonderful for a large mirror.

With floor plans and color samples I had brought with me, we ordered three beautiful rugs in Madrid for the entrance hall and living room. But our trip was cut short, and we had to forgo carpet shopping in Portugal.

"A new kind of epoxy tile as strong as pottery."

My other disappointment was that we were unable to find any sort of floor tiles abroad. Either they were fabulously expensive or took untold months for delivery, or both. So, still floorless, we returned home. There, I called the man in California who had supplied the handmade terra-cotta tile for the Alex Lewyts' house at Sands Point and explained what we wanted: an off-white flooring without the reddish cast of unglazed terra cotta, something completely stain-repelling and nonporous. At last, encouragement. This pleasant man assured me that his company had developed a glaze for terra cotta that was matte finish, nonspotting, and not at all slippery. He also had a new kind of epoxy tile—matte finish and as strong as pottery, yet so much thinner and lighter it did not require heavy supporting construction. And he could promise delivery of either tile in 40 to 50 days. I chipped off a piece of some French stone that was just the color we wanted, and airmailed it to him that evening.

When his samples arrived, the tiles did look just like stone. Their surface was dull, and because they were handmade, they had the slight variation in color I particularly liked. They would never need waxing; when I gave them the toughest stain test I know (crushing a wet teabag and letting it sit on a sample piece), all the liquid stayed on the surface. Later, I took a tissue and wiped it as clean as could be; obviously this tile hadn't a pore to its face. With a classic pattern of squares framed by long hexagons called pickets that John had drawn in two scales (12" by 12" for the living room, 9" by 9" for the entrance hall), we were in business.

We planned to use this miracle tile in pattern for the living-dining area and in plain squares for the bedrooms. In the bathrooms we'd use John's pet ceramic tile in off-white—but only for the floors and essential wall areas (around showers, for instance) since too much of it gives me a hospitalized feeling. For the kitchen and pantry — wherever people were going to be on their feet a lot—I planned to use a vinyl with a cushioned back that is less tiring to stand on than a hard surface.

Somewhat belatedly, we decided on a surface for the living-room buffet counter. After considering slate—impractical because it is easily scratched and must be oiled constantly; marble—troublesome where food stains are concerned (though we did plan to use it on bathroom counters); black tile—the matte finish stains, and the glazed version is too shiny; we ultimately settled on the same kind of tile as that on the floor, but in charcoal.

"A hard-grained American maple seemed the solution."

We also had to decide on paneling for the living room. From the beginning, I had visualized a pale fruitwood, the color of honey and with no visible grain, that would lend a faint sense of color and warmth without demanding attention. Extensive expeditions with John revealed that there was no apple wood; pear wood was scarce, expensive, and not available in solid molding pieces; the walnuts—French and English—were too dark, and even the Italian was not quite light enough. In the end, a hard-grained American maple—which could be stained the color I wanted and then given a wax and oil finish—seemed the solution. (I speak for myself. John, who loves gleaming white walls, was still urging me to use painted paneling.)

Landscape talk would come later, but John and I did make one more esthetic decision in the outdoor department. Like all houses of frame construction, ours was to have a base of concrete blocks to protect it—a not very handsome arrangement that is often camouflaged with stone facing or tactful shrubbery. But John suggested a much more original scheme: a sort of moat about two feet wide to be filled, not with w ter, but with small, smooth bla stones. Eventually, he located supplier who could ship all t stone we needed from the bed a genuine Japanese river.

I knew I couldn't always cou on being that lucky. There wou have to be compromises; in fa there had been some already, I none that we really regretted. T major building decisions were b hind us. My mind was already other things. While Mike and crew were excavating, I w busy planning the decorating. couldn't wait to get started w all my plans.

"I set to work as interior designer."

Putting it into theatrical ter we went into production in fall. And, if the cast was to ha a house to open in, that mea getting to work on two locati at once. Up in the country, th broke ground on November and Mike took over as produc director; down in the city, Jo and his draftsmen embarked the final set of drawings, in wh specifications were detailed do to the last keyhole. I set to w as interior designer.

From the beginning, I plann to furnish the new house mai with pieces we had had all married lives. I hoped they wo look at home in their new pla and dispel that cold, antisep feeling so many recently b contemporary houses have. At same time, I almost looked ward to doing some weeding In 35 years of marriage you lect and become attached t great many things. A decision to be made about each and ev piece: which to keep, which give away or just throw away, which to turn in to an anti dealer for credit.

I went to work with a t measure. I took three-dimensio readings of all the pieces of niture we'd be taking with us that when the time came I co place them on scaled floor pl and know, with reasonable tainty, that when they were there in real life, they would When I'd made a list of pie that would need reupholsterin asked my upholsterer to come and make further measureme —this time to tell me just much fabric it would take to cover each piece. Then I m sured every bit of storage sp in the house—closets, dressing rooms, and cupboards, plus running feet of bookshelf space everywhere—so that when John and I got to the point of allotting specific cupboard and shelf space in the new house, I'd have meaningful standards to go by. These vital statistics went into a special notebook dedicated to essential decorating details. I made lists of furniture that needed repair or repainting, tables and chests with brasses to be lacquered, lamps with shades to be replaced.

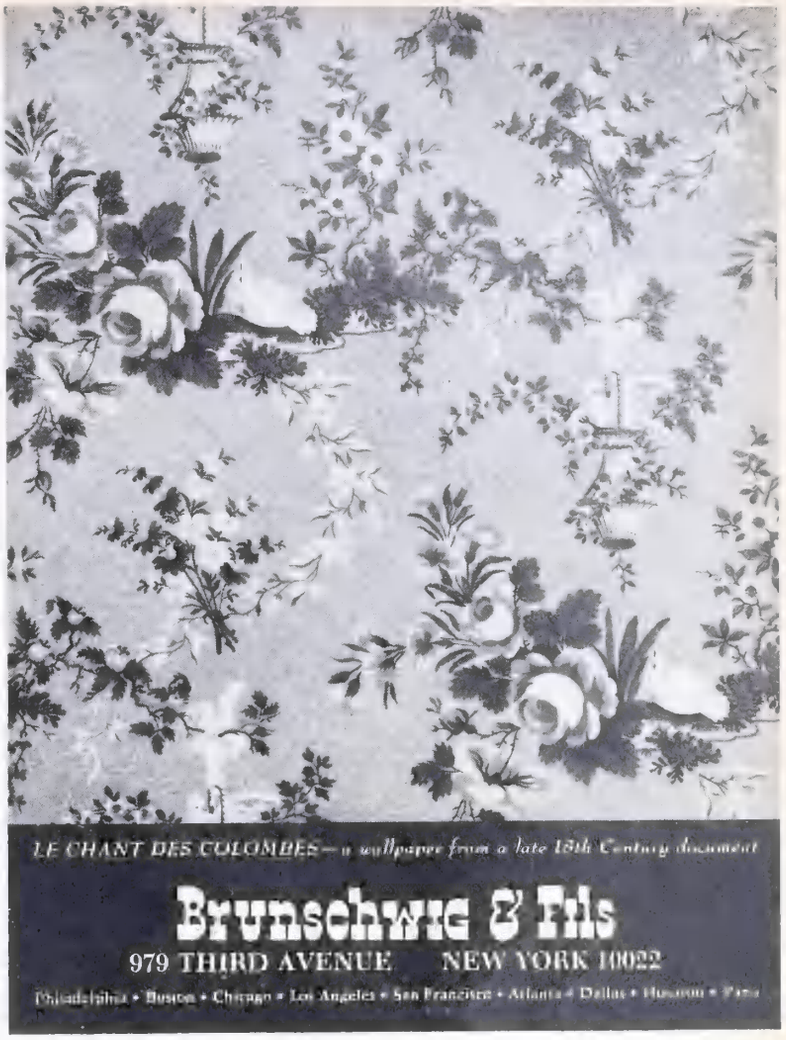
As I went over my lists, I noticed something interesting. Among all the things we had—most of them basically French Provincial in feeling—there was not a chair or table or chest that said "bedroom only" or "living room only." Adaptability like this would make my life a great deal easier in the months to come.

When, before leaving for Europe that fall, we stopped at the site of the new house, a few trees and some brush had been cleared away, and it was possible to imagine that a house might one day stand there. In early November, when we returned, Dick went up alone. He reported that a bulldozer had been in to open the driveway, that stakes marked the spot where the house would actually sit, and that all the dead trees and those which blocked Miss Smith's "vistas" were gone. The views, he said, were beautiful.

"Like an enormous party just hitting its stride."

Late in November, my moment came. And I must say that I was hardly prepared for what I saw when John and I turned into the drive. The front meadow was solid cars—at least 20 of them—and it looked as though an enormous cocktail party was just hitting its stride. The excavation was all done, and in its depths, carpenters, masons, steel people, plumbers, and electricians were all feverishly at work. It was, as John pointed out, no mere coincidence. Somehow, magically, Mike had cajoled them all into working together, which would speed things up tremendously. Dick and I drove up every weekend from then on ("Exciting!" said my diary. "Progress. . . .Exciting!"), and I went to work on the decorating in earnest. I was determined that the minute the house was finished, all its furniture would be ready to move in.

The living room would be wood tones and white and greens (from yellow greens to olives—the colors in the rugs we'd ordered in Spain) with some lively coral kind of red for accent. Dick's room was to be painted pale gray, with rug and fabrics of red, black, and white; and mine, as always, would be blue and white, with bits of the same red to link it to Dick's color scheme. The small guestroom would be painted white or a tint of lime green, with fabrics repeating the white, some greens, and adding pink. And the double guestroom would also have white walls; in it we would use the beds from Rockmeadow that were upholstered in mauve, and let the rug pick up the mauve plus some shades of bronze and brown-green.



"I always seem to want something nobody is using."

Once Christmas was out of the way, I started fabric shopping and was grateful for what seems a growing trend toward special-order service. My peculiar difficulty in decorating has always been that I seem to want something unfashionable, something "nobody is using." But nowadays at many places that specialize in custom orders, you can have any print made up in precisely the colors you want on any fabric you choose—linen or silk or wool, cotton or synthetic. Having several months' waiting time, I took full advantage of these new privileges when ordering fabrics.

In any case, from each trip into the market, I'd trudge home with dozens of samples, coordinate them with the growing collection at home, set some aside to hold and others to return. Then I'd go to my graph-paper floor plan and visualize this pattern here, that texture there, shifting and eliminating further.

I've never tackled any decorating job without benefit of these special scale maps of mine. They help me "see" rooms taking shape before they exist in reality. Letting one quarter-inch equal a foot, I first trace the room's shape on graph paper, then cut bits of manila (it's easier to handle than paper) to represent furniture, and label each one: "desk," "coffee table," etc. When they are placed on the floor plan, it becomes easy to see how successfully colors, patterns, and shapes balance.

Distinctive Dining! CHERRY HALL
by Taylor-Jamestown

Solid native cherry, that aristocrat of cabinet woods, is used for this distinctive Early American dining room suite. All the pieces have the extra size and weight you admire but still retain the graceful proportions of Early American design.

The CHERRY HALL dining group includes a wide variety of buffets, chinas, Welsh decks, tables and chairs. You're sure to find just what you want at your Taylor-Jamestown dealer's, or send 50¢ (in coin, please) for new booklet showing the complete Taylor-Jamestown line of dining room and bedroom groups, desks and occasional pieces. Address Taylor-Jamestown Corp., Dept. HB-10, Jamestown, New York.

You can tell a lot about furniture quality by simply opening the top drawer. If you see the manufacturer's name there—a name you recognize—you can be sure of all this:

That the furniture is built to last. So you're not just making a buy for today, but a sound investment for the future. You can be sure the style and design are authentic, too. And you'll know you're getting good, honest value for your money.

A brand name means quality and integrity. It's the manufacturer's way of telling you that he stands behind his product 100%. With furniture though, you have to snoop to find the brand name. It may be tucked inside a drawer. Or on the underside of a table. Or hidden beneath the cushions of a sofa. Or on the end of a mattress.

That way, the brand name never detracts from the furniture's appearance. But it does add greatly to your confidence and satisfaction.

Traffic lanes become clear, and you can tell at a glance whether a certain chair fits or there's room for a coffee table in front of a particular sofa. Kits made up for this purpose are available in stores, but the pieces are never the exact size of your own furniture; and since they end up merely approximations, I prefer to make my own. With my plans before me, I could picture myself in any room, sit in one chair, then another, look at things from all angles. I was able to discard a number of ideas that, brilliant as they seemed in the beginning, would have been disastrous had they been carried out.

There was, for example, the case of the living-room curtains. I had thought of them in terms of a marvelous big-scale pattern. Making a mental survey of the great expanse of window in the living room, I realized large designs there would be much too distracting. In fact, the more I thought about the vast areas to be curtained throughout the house, the more certain I became that for the sake of a unified look from outside as well as for indoor serenity, they should all be treated in the same way. And I finally decided on the same kind of loosely woven white linen I'd used in the sunroom at Rockmeadow. A soft, informal fabric, it would filter light pleasantly without demanding attention or pulling the eye away from other things in the room, or the flowers, the pool, or the view outdoors.

"I would have to change the furniture shapes."

Because it was to be so large, the living room took the most careful forethought. With my manila pieces on the floor plan before me, I could see I would have to make changes in the furniture shapes I had planned to buy. The effect was too squared-off. So I revised my ideas to vary lines, to include some rounds, some ovals, and some curves among the rectangles.

By now it was March of 1966, and Saturday trips to the house were the rule. Each one was as exciting as a next-week installment of the most fascinating serial I'm ever likely to have a part in. The studs were up, and the roofs. The pool had been dug, and we could see where the windows would be. But the greater the progress, the harder we found it to wait for the walls to appe

We had already made two m jor purchases for them—one f inside, one for outside the hou The first was a painting we h fallen in love with back in ear September. It is a very beaut ful portrait by Picasso of his wif Jacqueline, painted in 1962. Sh was our Christmas gift to eac other and the house, although w planned that she would, in fac spend her winters with us in Ne York. Our December discove was a bronze relief, a unique ca of Giacomo Manzu's 1960 desig for a handle for one of the doo of St. Peter's Basilica in Rom To both of us, the patina of th sculpture seemed to offer th perfect contrast for the gra walls of the house. We decided place it facing the pool in such way that it could be seen fro the living room, and Dick cou also enjoy it from his bedroom.

"A pair of brass candlesticks made into lamps."

There were, of course, le spectacular items to think abo —everything from paper-tow holders to lamps and firepla tools. Having arranged to have the brass-trimmed furniture se off to have its hardware la quered, I wanted to make sure other accessories—I present polishing problems. I had found antique steel fender and some c steel fire tools for the living roo so I sent the bronze andiro off to be plated to match. Alo with them went the andirons a tools from my bedroom, two Ca Cod lighters, and a pair of bra candlesticks I had discovered a trip to Toronto with Dick. Ma into lamps and equipped w tole shades, the brass cand sticks and a pewter pair that had found were very useful a ditions.

But my real Toronto find w an immense British railway-s tion lantern that seemed just t right scale to use on an outsi wall of the garage to help lig the driveway.

Though the building was m ing along at what seemed to be very respectable pace (they w starting to shingle the roofs, a some of the redwood siding h been put up), John and I still h some material decisions to ma There were the floors in the s vice area to be considered. T most important area was kitchen, and that, for a whi gave us trouble. I had originally seen a new kind of cushioned vinyl that was delightful to walk on, but it came in such ugly colors and patterns that we couldn't bear to use it. I also wanted some sort of covering that wouldn't need waxing. I hoped to find a surface with a permanent gloss.

"John came up with something marvelous."

We were about to give up and settle for gravel, when John came up with something perfectly marvelous. It is vinyl with a slightly textured surface flecked in off-whites, and it is cushioned with a foam-rubber substance that makes it wonderfully resilient. What's more, it is guaranteed for five years against any sort of difficulty with installation or wear. We used it throughout the service area except for the bathrooms, the potting shed, and the caretaker's galley. For these, we picked a spattered gray vinyl asbestos tile that wears very well, takes minimum care, and is considerably less expensive than the cushioned vinyl. The only built-in color in the service area would be the lemon yellow of the Formica we chose for the wall space between the cabinets and the countertops in the kitchen and pantry.

I took John to meet my favorite marble man, and we picked out the kinds of marble we wanted for counters: for the guestrooms and my bath, an almost white gray marble with some veining; for Dick's room and the powder room, a darker gray veined with white. We would use one-inch white matte-finish ceramic tiles for wall areas around the tubs where they were needed, and for all the bathroom floors—except mine, which, because it is large, needs a larger-scale tile.

In my bathroom and the powder room, where I still planned to use striped and figured vinyl coverings, I had come to agree with John that walls painted in white or pale colors would be very effective and at the same time would be in complete harmony with the white linen curtains throughout the front of the house. In the service area, we would take advantage of the practicality and easy maintenance of good-looking textured white vinyl.

Our most important decisions had to do with the ceiling heights in the living room, Dick's room, my room, and the double guestroom; all others were to be uniformly eight feet six inches, because small areas and long halls are unpleasant with high ceilings. The carpenters tacked up large pieces of plywood at various heights on some of the roof supports in the living room and in one of the bedrooms so that we could actually see how the ceilings would look. It turned out that the 14′6″ height we had pictured for the high part of the living room would be perfect (the ceiling in the "thrust" area would be lower—only 8′6″); but the 13′ ceilings in the bedrooms, which had bothered me on paper, gave us a sort of bottom-of-the-well feeling, and we decided to lower them to 12′6″. Repeating the two levels of the living-room ceiling, Dick's room and mine each would have a cozy, lowered section—Dick's near the pool, mine near the fireplace.

"We seemed to have quite an international house."

Without any conscious effort on our part, we seemed to have planned quite an international house: the blinds from France; the doors from Madrid; the Manzu from Rome; the rugs from Spain, Portugal, and Hong Kong. The redwood from California, (also the floor tiles), would be roofed with slate from Vermont, moated by pebbles from Japan, and serve as background for the British lantern.

Gradually, everything was falling into place. John and I went over our "specific" sheets once more, and we were surprised to discover how little our original plans had been changed.

At this point, although you could still see through its "walls," the house itself began to seem very real. There it stood on the highest point of the property; we could see that the views were very beautiful. The house seemed almost to be floating, it was so airy and full of light.

Then suddenly, with so many of the problems sorted out, I began to feel terribly impatient. The rooms seemed to have come together beautifully, but I wanted to see how they looked. I could hardly wait to move in, to unpack, to stock the cupboards and set our books on the shelves that weren't yet there. Since that was impossible, I tried the next-best thing: I consoled myself with the thought that our moving day was only a few months away. ■

In November, we will complete Dorothy Rodgers' story, including special menus and recipes she serves in the new house.

Indeed, Tiger Tops perches 20 feet high in the air on stilts of the sal tree, native mahogany. The inspiration of a cosmopolite Tennesseean and two worldly-wise Texans, this jungle hotel offers the creature comforts of twin-bedded rooms with bath, plenty of running hot water, a bar, and food deemed excellent by most who've tried it. On the program: elephant rides and Land Rover junkets through the grass jungle, motor-boating on the River Rapti, with a view of such local color as rhino, crocodile, gaur, leopard, tropical birds, flowers, and the country's distinctive yak and yeti, and every twilight the pièce de résistance—a closeup encounter with the wily tiger at his water hole, observed from the protected vantage point of a slatted blind. Great camera shooting, but no guns permitted. This is in Nepal's National Wild Life Sanctuary.

Royal Nepal Airlines flies early every morning from the big town of Kathmandu to the airstrip at Tiger Tops ($15 round trip). Generally, visitors spend the night and return the following afternoon – usually reluctantly, sorry they didn't plan on a longer stay. Hotel rate, including meals and all tours, is $45 to $50 the day. Information: Tiger Tops Ltd., 1112 Vaughn Building, Dallas, Tex. 75201, or Box 242, Kathmandu, Nepal (air mail 25 cents).

Kathmandu is a tiny capsule remainder of the mysterious East, which has not been overlaid with Westernisms simply because foreigners were denied entry to Nepal until a relatively short time ago. Already it has two modern hotels, the Annapurna, named for the nearby mountain peak, and the Soaltee—Nepalese word meaning "pub in the hills"—which is out of town, with great views of this stupendous scenery, air conditioning, and Nepal's first elevators. But the Royal, despite temperamental facilities, is the place with the personality, a former noble palace converted into a hotel by Boris Lissanevitch, a colorful friend of all the world who has managed to turn his remote Yak and Yeti Bar into the Asian equivalent of a Harry's or Ritz Bar. Kathmandu is a temptation every traveler to India ought to yield to, reachable from Calcutta, Patna, and Delhi by Royal Nepal Airlines; from Calcutta, Patna, Benaras, and Delhi by Indian Airlines. Pakistan International Airlines flies there from Dacca, in East Pakistan, another ancient and exotic city suddenly creeping into Asian itineraries and now supplied with the excellent Intercontinental Dacca Hotel, a place of jasmine, indoor waterfalls, and Intercontinental comforts of home, elegantly purveyed where least expected. Irish great house

Sportsmen with the romantic yen to experience game shooting on the Irish moors are now invited to sojourn for the shoot in one of Ireland's great houses and get a taste of gentle life in the Irish countryside in the purple-gold days of autumn and winter. To introduce sporting visitors to the pleasures of the Irish shoot, the Irish government has been replenishing the stock of pheasant, snipe, and woodcock on certain demesnes and asking the owners to play host to visiting nimrods—and their ladies, of course. We are acquainted with one of these choice seats, Durrow Abbey, near Tullamore in the County Offaly, a great house incorporating the 12th-century cloister of the abbey where the grandly illuminated national treasure called the Book of Durrow was written in the Seventh Century. A Celtic high cross on the grounds is a national monument. Here, in their handsomely appointed home, its owners, Mr. and Mrs. Michael Williams and their four charming children will receive guests during the shooting season, November 1st to February 1st. (Ireland's winter temperature is a mild average 58°, and the mansion is centrally heated.) Guests, provided with transportation and beaters, will have the range of the Abbey's 400-acre estate and 3,000 well-stocked surrounding acres, along with the civilized pleasure of staying with an Irish family, becoming acquainted with the good foods produced on the farm itself—lamb, black currants, and raspberries ranking as specialties of the house.

The young and personable host, an ardent shot himself, is scion of D. E. Williams, Ltd., distilleries that produce Irish Mist liqueur and distribute Tullamore

Dew Irish Whiskey. Like other owners, he offers his hospitality altruistically, and counts his reward in the new friends he hopes to make and the assurance that the government-set tariff will help keep the game preserves well stocked. The rate per gun for a day's accommodation and shooting, with all necessities included except gun and cartridges, is £60 ($168). Those accompanying sportsmen but not participating in the shooting may be accommodated at a daily rate of £10 ($28). Durrow Abbey has facilities for six guests. For detailed information, write Mr. Williams directly.

For information about other Irish private great houses and castles that invite guests in the shooting season (or even out of it), address: Irish Tourist Board, 590 Fifth Ave., New York, N.Y. 10036.

The private yacht

A yacht—synonym for travel in the sumptuous, grand manner—can be yours (for all practical purposes) whether you're plotting a vacation course through the Caribbean, the Mediterranean, the wine-dark Aegean or over the aquamarine waters of the Great Barrier Reef. There are craft to be hired, fully manned, completely equipped, with or without chef, to transport you in private-house-party style to whatever sunny strands beguile — the Dalmatian Coast, say, the Balearic Islands, Corsica, Sardinia, the chalk-white islets of Greece, to places French, from the Riviera to Polynesia. The yachts are indeed private, property of owners who are not currently sailing them, and they may range in category from modest to superbly deluxe. An eight-day cruise in the Virgin Islands can cost as little as $175 per person for a group of six, with everything included and a captain at the helm to sail you where you will. In the Mediterranean, costs can run even less. On the other, lusher end of the spectrum, in a shinier bark, staffed for don't-lift-a-hand service, the tariff might be $1,200 per person per week. Much of the time this kind of gilt-edge vacation is surprisingly within a dreamer's grasp, providing there is time to spare and a few friends to share the cost. To inform yourself, write a firm with offices and agents around the globe—hence global contacts with yachts to hire: Wakefield, Fortune, Inc., 24 West 58th Street, New York, N.Y. 10019.

Fabulous voyage

Classicists, worshipers of Poseidon, lovers of Helos—those who thrill at the sound of Epidaurus, Pergamum, Carthage—there is an itinerary that follows such sea paths as Ulysses must have taken, a modern-day Odyssey in perfectionist style, aboard the Stella Maris II, an air-conditioned cruising yacht. It's a 29-day affair, leaving Naples for 32 ports in North Africa, Greece, Turkish coast of Asia Minor, and the Dalmatian coast of Yugoslavia, returning to Naples. It is exactly as named— A Voyage into Antiquity—as literate as it is luxurious, limited to 150, accompanied by lecturers and guides, scheduled twice in 1968, departing on June 5th and again on October 14th. For more information: Donald L. Ferguson Ltd., Katonah, N.Y.

Service, that fast disappearing commodity in this naughty, push-button world, is probably what really distinguishes the great hotels from the comme ci, comme ca. Invariably, when the wordly wise are gathered together, these names come up as examples of super-service: the Vier Jahreszeiten in Hamburg; the Hotel Bristol in Paris; the Hotel Palais in Biarritz; L'Auberge de la Moutière in Montfort l'Amaury, and the Beau Rivage in Lausanne-Ouchy. ■

Simple timber stairs lead up from the master-bedroom terrace to a spacious, wood-decked lounging area on top of the cantilevered carport roof. Beyond, through the sliding door, is the mezzanine level of the tall studio.

Approached through the forest, the house comes into view as an ordered, quiet abstraction of timber columns and beams. The fixed, fragile screen, below, that separates the carport space from the open court is made of continuous ½" by ¾" red cedar strips strung on lengths of piano wire and spaced with ¼" neoprene washers.

Spring Lake in any of 9 scrumptious color combinations

Too Expensive? Guess Again.

Looks like a lot of money, doesn't it? Well, it's not.

Looks wildly luxurious on your floor too. Yet turns out to be very practical stuff. This Sears carpeting may look like wool, but it's really man-made Acrilan® acrylic. The same fabulous pile used in busy hotels. Resists matting, footprints, furniture marks.

And a dream to keep clean. Stain-resistant. Soil-resistant. A muddy elephant couldn't ruin that deep, dense 100% Acrilan® acrylic pile.

It's called Spring Lake and regularly costs $12.99 a square yard. But it's on sale now through November 30th at just $8.97. No Money Down on Sears Easy Payment Plan. Ask for Sears No. 9252. You can't do better than Sears.

It's on sale at Sears

Imagine jamming a concert piano, a theater organ, and a 10 piece rhythm band into your living room.

The Gulbransen Premiere does it. In a space only 50 by 29 inches.

You'll enjoy the unbelievable resources of this great new instrument. It's an organ, a piano and a 10-piece percussion section, all in one self-contained unit. The new Gulbransen Premiere is designed for the mature player who wants a super instrument. The Premiere offers you:

A concert-quality theater organ that does full justice to the entire organ repertory—from Bach to boogie-woogie. It includes such special effects as chimes, marimba, harp and music box—plus all the other organ voices you expect.

A complete piano at the touch of a tab—reproducing the authentic stringed-instrument sound of a piano solo.

A whole percussion section—at the push of a button. Gulbransen Select-A-Rhythm gives you 10 instrument sounds, from drums to sand-blocks, in 17 different dance rhythms. Combine rhythms to create your own special beat.

From superb cabinetry to solid state circuitry, the Gulbransen Premiere is excitement that lasts. Put the Premiere in your living room, and your place will never be the same again.

Electrac®

by Kirsch

brings the electronic age to traverse drapery fixtures.

The object you see in the back of the traverse rod is a power capsule. It has no moving parts. At the touch of a switch, magnetic power moves it silently along the rod, to open or close the draperies. The control switch can be located in any convenient place.

This is the actual size of the revolutionary Electr capsule. It requires no cords or pulleys; has no whe or other moving parts to go wrong. It needs maintenance of any kind!

There's nothing in the world like Electrac® by Kirsch ectrac is almost unbelievable. It is simple, foolproof, completely aranteed for 5 years—and modestly priced. Kirsch's new elec- c powered traverse rod, Electrac, is the world's first practical usehold application of the linear motor principle, which sci- tists have been trying to perfect for years. The Electrac system self-contained. No special motor installation is required. No rds to break or tangle. Electrac may be used with almost any rangement of windows and drapery panels, and in any length traverse. The permanently sealed, maintenance-free power psule pulls the draperies along the traverse track, in the man- r of a small model railway engine. Nothing is visible from the ont. Electrac uses ordinary 110 v. household current—just plug into a convenient socket. It is completely safe.

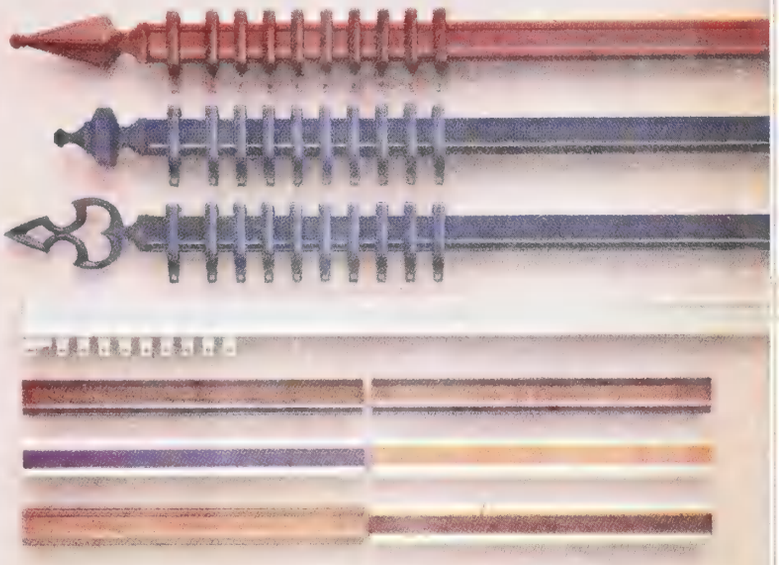
SUPERB CONVENIENCE!



ow you can press a bedside switch and let Electrac show you what e day is like. No need to get up! Or, from one convenient location, u can control the draperies for a single window or any combination windows—including varying widths. Electrac permits never-before- ssible control of complex drapery systems.

"I have not yet, indeed, thought of a remedy for luxury..." BENJAMIN FRANKLIN

Original wood engraving by Bernard Brussel-Sm

"I am not sure that in a great state it is capable of a remedy; nor that the evil is in itself always so great as it is represented.

"Suppose we include in the definition of luxury all unnecessary expense, and then let us consider whether laws to prevent such expense are possible to be executed in a great country, and whether, if they could be executed, our people generally would be happier, or even richer.

"Is not the hope of being one day able to purchase and enjoy luxuries, a great spur to labour and industry?

"May not luxury, therefore, produce more than it consumes, if, without such a spur, people would be, as they are naturally enough inclined to be, lazy and indolent? To this purpose I remember a circumstance.

> "The skipper of a shallop, employed between Cape May and Philadelphia, had done us some small service, for which he refused to be paid. My wife, understanding that he had a daughter, sent her a present of a new-fashioned cap.
> "Three years after, this skipper being at my house with an old farmer of Cape May, his passenger, he mentioned the cap, and how much his daughter had been pleased with it.
> " 'But' (said he) 'it proved a dear cap to our congregation.'
> "How so?"
> " 'When my daughter appeared with it at meeting, it was so much admired, that all the girls resolved to get such caps from Philadelphia, and my wife and I computed that the whole could not have cost less than a hundred pounds.'
> "'True', (said the farmer) 'but you do not tell all the story. I think the cap was nevertheless an advantage to us; for it was the first thing that put our girls upon knitting worsted mittens for sale at Philadelphia, that they might have wherewithal to buy caps and ribbons there; and you know that the industry has continued, and is likely to continue and increase to a much greater value, a answer better purposes.'
> "Upon the whole, I was more reconciled to t little piece of luxury, since not only the girls w made happier by having fine caps, but the Phi delphians by the supply of warm mittens."

"Poor Richard" put his finger on this simple key an expanding economy over 200 years ago. So, isn' strange to find people—well-meaning people—in t country today who still frown on the luxuries m of us work to enjoy? They want the governme to restrict the broad range of products and servic in the marketplace. And to cut back on advertisi because it makes people want things they don't nee

Don't need? Well, of course, no little girl nee a bow in her hair. Yet, Mary Murphy will forev top off the apple of her eye with a ribbon. A where would the ribbon factories be without he And the ribbon clerks?

It is just this very human desire to add the litt frills to our living that has created our jobs and o prosperity . . . the ribbon factories and automob factories and television factories . . . and the mo dynamic economy in man's history. Shouldn't w be careful about how we tinker with the forces th have created all this? Because the simple, troublin truth is, nobody knows for sure how far you c regulate our economy without damaging it.

People, Places, Pleasures

By DUNCAN MacDONALD

Widely known for her radio interview programs from New York, Miss MacDonald is an acute observer of the many worlds of esthetics, entertainment, travel, and the home.

A Man Who Knows the Seasons: With all the pleasing distractions of autumn, people in the cities seldom give a thought to winter until it stops traffic.

Quite different in the country: Robb Sagendorph tells me that with the arrival of November, people in places like Dublin, New Hampshire, talk about nothing but the weather. They have reason. Even with all the new roads and turnpikes and super-highways and snow tires, a sudden snowfall can cut off the fuel that heats the houses and the food that fuels the householders.

Robb knows what the people in Dublin talk about because he lives there, and he is one of those present when the villagers gather at The Dublin Inn to wonder and worry about the winter ahead.

When I visited Dublin in the late summer, Robb told me about these November gatherings of the elders. "We convene in November because that's when we have our first snowfall. The leaves are off the trees. It is bleak. The winter signals are all up, and everyone wants to know only, 'What kind of winter is it going to be?' "

Dublin is fortunate in having as a resident the right man to ask. Robb has published The Old Farmer's Almanac since 1939, and though he could scarcely hope to rival the Almanac's 1815 prediction for snow on July 13th (OFA has been published since 1792), he has run up an astonishing record.

To skip over the centuries, the OFA predicted for Chicago, January 25-27, 1967: "Blizzard, says this wizard." Considering the spinning of the spheres and the infinite complications of the universe, does it not seem fantastic that The Great Blizzard did arrive in Chicago on January 26th?

In addition to the detailed forecasts of New England weather, the Almanac now carries forecasts for all parts of the United States, so that a resident of Moab, Utah, or of Bemidji, Minnesota, can pinpoint the weather for his locality. In its general forecast for the entire country, we learn that "the last week in January may hold a memorable storm of snow from the Great Plains to New England," and "tornadoes hit the South" in early March.

After not seeing Dublin in several years, I was greatly reassured to find it securely there: the familiar red building with white trim that houses the Post Office and the editorial offices of The Old Farmer's Almanac and Yankee. And the large blackboard in the village square with its news of the day in white chalk: the arrival of a distinguished visitor given equal billing with the disappearance of a kitten. In the midst of all our social turmoil, Dublin seems a blessed oasis.

A Man For All Seasons: Speaking of men with a long stride, Fred Zinnemann first viewed the world from Vienna, and now keeps one foot in Mandeville Canyon in California where he has a house, and the other foot in London, where he has an apartment. These are the two main bases of his career as one of our great motion picture directors.

In November, Zinnemann will be in New York—halfway between his two bases—where the Huntington Hartford Gallery of Modern Art is presenting its Tribute to Fred Zinnemann

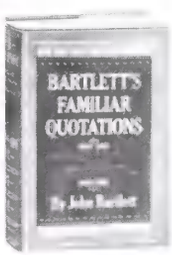
BOOK-DIVIDENDS: A library-building plan every reading family should know about



THE EXPERIMENTAL MEMBERSHIP suggested here will not only prove, by your own actual experience, how effectually membership in the Book-of-the-Month Club can keep you from missing, through oversight or overbusyness, books you fully intend to read; it will also demonstrate another important advantage: Book-Dividends. Through this unique profit-sharing system members can regularly receive valuable library volumes—at a small fraction of their retail prices—simply by buying books they would buy even if they were not Book-of-the-Month Club members.

If you continue after this experimental membership, you will earn, for every Club Selection or Alternate you buy, a Book-Dividend Credit. Each Credit, upon payment of a nominal sum, often only $1.00 or $1.50—somewhat more for unusually expensive volumes or sets—will entitle you to a Book-Dividend which you may choose from over a hundred fine library volumes whose retail prices now average $7. This is probably the most economical means ever devised for building a well-rounded personal library. Since its inauguration, $401,000,000 worth of books (retail value) has been earned and received by Book-of-the-Month Club members through this unique plan.

Chickering does everything a concert piano does only it does it at home.

Home is where Chickering is most often seen. That's because we've designed our largest grand a full 3½ feet shorter than a concert piano, so it fits perfectly in your living room.

And because home is where Chickering is most often heard, we've tuned its volume to home proportions. But the richness of tone and sensitivity of response are worthy of the Philharmonic. That's what you'd expect from America's oldest piano maker.

Of course, Chickering doesn't make the only grands and consoles for the home. But we do make the finest, and music lovers the world over agree. As for appearance, we're highly fashion conscious. You enjoy a choice of twenty different console and grand styles and finishes.

Write for a full-color brochure or visit your local fine piano dealer. Bring home a Chickering that's where it belongs.

November 6th through November 20th. The retrospective screenings will cover his entire work, from the early and seldom seen The Wave, through his award-winning films, The Search, High Noon, From Here to Eternity, The Sundowners, and his latest, A Man For All Seasons, which received the Academy Award earlier this year.

Fred Zinnemann is as forthright a man as you're likely to talk to in a decade. He feels that there is too much emphasis on success, that people should be allowed to fail, that we learn from our failures. He tells what a gamble it was when Columbia Pictures gave him the reins on A Man For All Seasons. He concedes that they had reason for their doubts and that neither he nor they could have foreseen the tremendous public acceptance.

Zinnemann puts the artist's finger on the trouble with present-day motion pictures: "Many of the young picture makers have a built-in contempt for the audience—which shows—and a total preoccupation with their own egos."

In talking with Fred Zinnemann, I learned that next to motion pictures, his most serious interest is skiing: hence the two houses, one adjacent to our great American ski slopes in the West, the other within a short air flight of the Alps. He is also within easy reach of Paris, where he is discussing with André Malraux the movie adaptation of his novel Man's Fate.

Two Seasons For Artists: If some creative people get stimulation from being in a torrent of artistic activities here and abroad, others find themselves able to work best when living a monastic life. Edward MacDowell, the American composer, was one of the latter.

Sixty-odd years ago, MacDowell and his wife Marian found a farm in Peterborough, New Hampshire, and there, as Kay Boyle tells the story, "he was able to triple his normal creative activities. It was there that the hope and the vision came to him of turning the farm into a workplace for other artists."

From his conviction and hope stems the MacDowell Colony, built on the original farm, now expanded to 400 acres, and dotted with studios housing about 30 artists in the summer and a dozen or more in the winter.

The studios are ideally designed for composers, painters, and writers, with each structure placed for privacy, no one being visible to another, nor within hearing distance. No one speaks unless spoken to, not even George Kendall, director of the Edward MacDowell Association, who is normally seen only by those who come to him. A basket of lunch is quietly left on the doorstep at noon, and each rustic cabin has its own supply of kindling and firewood for the chilly New Hampshire mornings.

The requirement for residence is proved professional talent, which does not exclude the young because they may make application by submitting samples of their work. Residence fee is 25 dollars a week for food and housing, and those without such funds may apply for scholarships.

No one could doubt that such a venture operates at a deficit and needs support in several ways: contributions, legacies, benefits. The last brings us to the "Harvest of the Arts," the third benefit for the Colony. This year's chairman, Russell Lynes, announces it will take place at the Hotel Plaza on November 15th; tickets are $50.

Space limits a long and distinguished list of works produced at Peterborough, but a few of the people may be mentioned: Edwin Arlington Robinson, Willa Cather, Stephen Vincent Benet, Elinor Wylie, William Rose Benet, Padraic Colum, Alfred Kreymborg, Aaron Copland, Leonard Bernstein, Blanche Yurka.

Does it not tighten the knot when Thornton Wilder says: "I came here when I had nothing published at all . . . my indebtedness is very long and very deep." ■

Would you spend 99¢ to bring your dishwasher up to date?

The latest deluxe-model dishwashers have a built-in rinse injector for Liquid Jet-Dry. It prevents spots. One 99¢ box of Solid Jet-Dry can bring your dishwasher right up to date. Solid Jet-Dry prevents spots, too. You see, spots are often caused by slow, uneven drying in the rinse and dry cycles. And changing your detergent can't help you. No matter how good your detergent is, it's no good to you in the rinse cycle. It all goes out with the wash water. That's where new Jet-Dry comes in.

It contains a special drying agent that goes to work in the rinse cycle and helps dry your dishes so fast, so evenly, spots don't have a chance to form. Just hook Jet-Dry onto your dishwasher rack. Now your dishwasher is up to date! You get 3 bars of Solid Jet-Dry (up to 100 washings) for only 99¢. (Oh, yes, if you have a new dishwasher with a built-in rinse injector, keep it filled with Liquid Jet-Dry.) Get a package of Jet-Dry at your dishwasher dealer or grocery store today.

SECLUSION IN THE SUN

Clean lines, a handsome cedar shake roof, and a well-controlled contemporary design that provides screened garden areas put this house in a class far above the usual built-for-sale house. Designed by Russell J. Minardi, AIA, for Sunstate Builders, Inc., of Tampa, Florida, the house is not an exception wedged into a row of nonentities. It is one of a large variety of well-designed houses in a builder-sponsored community that rates among the best in the nation. Though set close to the street, the house is afforded a large measure of privacy by alternating screens of stucco-faced concrete and cypress stakes. In the small court between screen and house, there is ample room for gardens. While space inside is not on a grand scale (it has about 2,250 square feet), it is divided with experienced insight into the living needs of a family with children. Heated and cooled by a heat pump, and delivered with such amenities as kitchen appliances (less the refrigerator), a built-in vacuum system, an in-the-round family-room fireplace, (Continued on page 40) plus a built-in bar and automatic blender in the family room, the house sells for $29,848, not including the home site. With a nod toward the sales methods of new car dealers, the builder also offers the house "stripped down" at $24,600. The house still contains the same space inside divided in the same way, but lacks many "optionals." For example, the privacy screen in front of the house is excluded. Asphalt shingles replace cedar shakes on the roof. The vacuum system and fireplace are missing. However, the house is still heated and cooled by a heat pump, and kitchen appliances are included, although a standard oven replaces a more expensive unit that features an automatic oven cleaner.

Soft, vinyl-sealed cork flooring covers the floors in kitchen, above, and the family room, behind camera. Kitchen has luminous ceiling.

This approach to home selling is not unique with Sunstate. You'll probably find that a number of home builders in your own area are taking a basic-house-plus-optionals tack. Nearly all buyers like the idea, since it gives them considerably more control over the amount of money they spend at the time of purchase.

That an architect designed this model home indicates to some extent the determination of the builder to offer a quality product. More evidence surfaces when you consider that professionals were hired to lay out the original community, which is now called Carrollwood. The West Palm Beach firm of Brockway, Weber and Brockway did the planning.

Carrollwood is about ten miles from the center of Tampa, curled around the southwest shoreline of Lake Carroll, one of the area's largest inland bodies of water. An excellent curvilinear street plan, sprinkled with dozens of cul-de-sacs effectively slows the speed of local traffic. Wherever possible, trees were preserved during construction. Paved streets, sidewalks, street lights, water supply, sanitary and storm sewers extend throughout the community, and the area is controlled by zoning.

Two community beaches and playgrounds were cleared by the builder for Carrollwood residents, and the company also built a community center, a six-store shopping area, a kindergarten and elementary school.

About 650 homes have been completed, leaving sites for approximately 200 more. If you intend to move to the area, and want more information, write to Sunstate Builders, Inc., 10301 N. Dale Mabry, Tampa, Florida 33618. ■

MAKING AN ENTRANCE

Nine lively departures from the standard fare in exterior door design

Handcrafted elegance of old Spanish doors is quite genuine at left. The wood is a blend of fir and maple cut from a famous stand of trees near Segovia. And Segovia is where this door is tooled, mortised and tenoned, glued, lightly charred, and stained by local woodworkers. The resulting finish, called envejecido, is a rich, dark, antique-like patina that is highly resistant to weather. The door is finished identically on both sides. Price is around $300 for a standard 3′ by 6′8″ size. Imported by Zeluck.

Typically, Dutch doors have glass lights in the top section. Here's a reminder that this style also includes doors with solid panels throughout. Three more bottom-half designs are available for the door at right, produced by Morgan from top-grade ponderosa pine. It's sold with a water-repellent finish for about $60 to $70.

Spanish influence on American door design is clearly evident and gaining. For example, this handsome, 32-panel door could close off the sacristy in an old Spanish church, or stand forbiddingly before the entry to El General's headquarters. Called the Alamo, it's produced here by Ideal. The door is made of selected western ponderosa pine, assembled with dowel-joint construction, and delivered ready to paint or stain. In the 3′ by 6′8″ size, the Alamo should cost between $80 and $85.

Meet Antron*. The new carpet fiber for enduring eleganc

Consider the elegance of a luxurious carpet. Consider that you're going to walk all over it.
Then consider "Antron".
"Antron" is a nylon carpet fiber. It's beautiful, luxurious and durable.
So durable it's known as the carpet fiber that keeps its new look longer. The secret?
"Antron" hides soil. (Its fibers have been chemically modified by Du Pont.)
"Antron" nylon is now being used by leading carpet makers. For underfoot luxury that lasts.

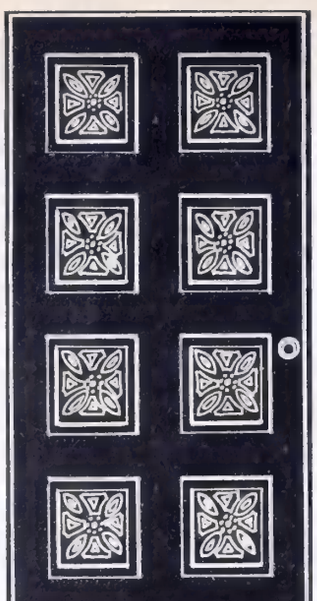
The Voice. Anybody's voice. Your voice. It has a special quality and timbre all its own. But.

If it should become hoarse or if a cough should persist, find out what the reason is. Promptly. It could be a warning signal of cancer. And cancer is easier to cure when it's detected early.

Frank Sinatra knows the seven warning signals of cancer. Do you?

1. Unusual bleeding or discharge. 2. A lump or thickening in the breast or elsewhere. 3. A sore that does not heal. 4. Change in bowel or bladder habits. 5. Hoarseness or cough. 6. Indigestion or difficulty in swallowing. 7. Change in a wart or mole.



If a signal lasts longer than two weeks, see your doctor without delay.

It makes sense to know the seven warning signals of cancer.

The decorative figures in these panels could be seen as easily in Italy or France as in Spain. Carved in solid wood, they impart a distinctly Mediterranean flavor to the door. It's handcrafted by Basque woodworkers who settled in Boise, Idaho. The door is called the Continental, and the firm, Old World Arts. One door would cost between $90 and $120, the variance accounted for by differences in shipping costs. Delivered ready to paint, stain, or antique: it is one of five designs.

What you see at the left may look like an ordinary door, but in fact is quite new. Facing on both sides, edges, and bottom is steel with a bonded acrylic prime coat. The supporting stiles and rails within are Douglas fir. The cap on top is rigid vinyl, and the core is foamed polystyrene. What this adds up to is a very low-maintenance door that is virtually warpless, and which provides high insulating values. Called Ever Strait, it's made by Pease, and sells with frame and all for around $60.

This stately, 15-panel door gets a decorating fillip with the addition of eight rectangular rosettes, put on after the door is installed. The moldings are from a new line of ten designs offered by Morgan for its collection of custom doors. The molding here, called Granada Iron, sells at $2.20 a pair. Highest price for a single rosette is $2.25. The door is built with first-grade ponderosa pine, and treated with a clear water repellent before shipment. For the door, without rosettes, you will pay between $50 and $65.

From one of the most varied lines of exterior doors available in this country comes the impressive door at left. Insets and center design are hand-carved. By Acme Hardware, it's named the Majorca. With the pattern on one side, the door costs under $360, FOB Los Angeles; pattern on both sides—$460. The door is also turned out with a lovely stained-glass center design—at about $50 more.

When beauty and economy are required simultaneously, this Douglas fir door by Nicolai should serve the purpose well. Named the Embassy Romanesque, it will cost about $85 in the standard 3′ by 6′8″ size. Solid panels and dowel-joint construction make it a strong door. Wood surface is prepared at the factory for staining, painting, or antiquing—whatever you prefer for your home.

More of the Spanish influence on door design is evident in this striking yet surprisingly economical unit from Simpson. Called the Caprice, it features a delicate metal and glass grille that is exclusive with Simpson. The door is built with select, vertical-grain Douglas fir, or hemlock: delivered ready to paint or finish, and is approximately $65 for the standard 3′ by 6′8″ size.

THE WALL-TO-WALL "THROW" RUG

LOOMWEVE'S "CANDIDO" CARPET MADE WITH VECTRA FIBER

Throw a party on it. Or an hors d'oeuvre. Or even a cocktail. Most every stain wipes clean with soap and water.

Meet the "people-proof" carpet. □ New Loomweve Candido made with Vectra® fiber gives you everything a carpet should . . . plus a good bit more. Sheer luxury and the amazing ability to laugh off just about every spot and spill in the book. □ Vectra fiber is stubbornly stain-resistant. So spilled drinks, sticky food stains, even household chemicals won't penetrate. Wipe 'em clean with detergent and water. Vectra fiber also makes Candido uncommonly rugged, fade-resistant, mothproof and virtually static-free. □ The luxury you'll just have to see. Candido's lavish, random-sheared, 2-level scroll design gives it a deeply-etched cobblestone effect. In Tropic Green. Palm Green. Shadow Green. Sunglow. Inca Gold. Spun Gold. Gulf Blue. Butternut. Regal Red. Take your choice of 12 and 15 foot widths. □ So check your nearest Loomweve dealer and let him introduce you to Candido made with Vectra fiber. He'll have one final surprise for you. Candido's surprisingly modest cost. And once it's yours . . . feel free to celebrate.
Throw a party on it.

PARTY POINTS

By SUE NIRENBERG

As the glow of the winter holidays comes upon us, the hostess prepares. Guest lists (some mulled over on beach and hammock last August) are assembled, drawn up as carefully and as gingerly as any state document, reworked, edited with husbands in consultation. Deletions are made ("Oh, not them"), names substituted. Wonderful dresses are bought, hems—where last year's dress will do—are taken up yet another inch. Silver is polished, chipped glassware replaced, coasters counted. Vows are made (the annual vow, annually broken) never, never to entertain purely to repay obligations.

Caterers are called. Their enormous warming drawers and coffee urns lie in wait for winter partying. Hostesses have long ago put away their lawn furniture and the ice-tea glasses that also served gin-and-tonics. The month's respite after the Labor Day party—the last of that season—is over. The hostess has restored her spirit, sent her children off to school, inspected her inventory of friends and china, and is ready to march. To give a perfectly marvelous party. Several? Why not.

What an intriguing thing, a party. An extravagance of ingredients to lift the day, enchant the night. A frothy concoction of fine food and wine, flowers, prettily set tables, banter. Discovery, perhaps. A new person. A new point of view. Music, maybe. Dancing, possibly. A house (and host and hostess) polished and gleaming.

Party sizes and shapes are infinite. There are wondrously sparkling balls. Tea parties with cucumber sandwiches and bits of delectables. Open houses after football games, and houses open for no reason at all, where guests of all ages come and go. Buffets. Brunches. See-them-off parties. Glad-you're-back parties. The merest fragment of an excuse can spark the merriest goings-on. A St. Patrick's Day party with corned beef, Irish beer, a pool-table-green cloth, and a mischievous leprechaun for a centerpiece. There are surprise parties—a rash of them, it seems, for the man on his 30th birthday, or is it his 40th? (Never for the woman.) There are last-minute parties—the spontaneous ones that grow out of nothing at all. No one can analyze their success, except that the mood of the moment was ebullient. There is the traditional party—the one that marks the same holiday every year. It has now become an event, anticipated by hosts and guests alike.

In her ponderings on shape and form, the hostess gives thought to the size of the party. The dining-room table dictates the size (of the sit-down dinner, at least), as does the rest of the space, how much help she will have, how much energy and organization she and her husband have. The season also determines the flexibility of how many she can handle. (In the summer, should it rain, is there room inside for the guests?) The hostess, appearing calm and terribly gay, must be able to deal deftly with the mechanics of serving, seating, clearing, timing, introductions, coats, or—if she has help—she must supervise. If she has a caterer, he'll send her off to the hairdresser, preferring apartness, no supervision. Does the family lend itself to partying? Some children help, some hinder, some pass celery, some embarrass. What is it to be, then? Several exquisite small dinners (how big can small be?), or one exuberant stunner? Each size party has its own pleasures and perils, its own very personal logistics. Each hostess must find the size where she functions best and what size feels right.

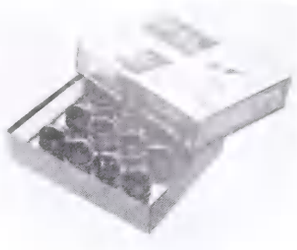
WEST VIRGINIA GLASS CO.
WESTON, WEST VIRGINIA



Look for this seal when you buy West Virginia Glass, fine handcrafted crystal that costs half what you'd expect.

Devoted as they are to orthodoxy, they drink it straight: in a cordial glass; after dinner. There's definitely something bewitching about the brew. Many, charmed by the versatility of this captivating coffee liqueur, are compelled to exult in such devilish concoctions as the Black Russian, Brave Bull, Kahlúa Sour. Still others swirl it into dazzling desserts. Consider the sorcery of this magical mixture from Old Mexico. And while you're at it, consider the source, because what the Mexicans don't know about coffee liqueur doesn't amount to a hill of beans.

Send for Kahlúa's fascinating formulary of drinks, desserts and savories. Yours for the asking.

Musings on a party for six

Small enough to be quite charming, six does not get out of hand. A table, beguiling and romantic, with the prettiest of candles (never dripping) and flowers, the most perfect wine. Anyone can conquer six without a maid, but even with six you must compose the group artfully. There is only one conversation group with six—just in case of awkward silence—to be led, if you can use so mighty a word, by husband and wife.

> "Six is no party. Six is just people for dinner—as much work but less fun than a larger number."

Six is more formal than four and takes on party airs. Six can be the classic seated dinner with or without help. Cope calmly yourself if you stack a tea cart or Hotable to avoid lags. Avoid jumping up during the meal (jumping makes the guests feel that you've been put upon by them). Six is too small for a buffet, and what if you've a penchant for buffets?

> "Six, no. You know the host and hostess, but you might not like the other couple."

A pensive look at the party for eight

A seated dinner and a handsomely set table are still possible but, surprisingly, with the additional two extra people the mechanics of clearing and timing grow more intricate. Take a careful count of your party equipment (see HOUSE BEAUTIFUL's Party Check List, page 104). Everybody expects you to be able to handle eight—silver service (if you're shopping) comes in sets of eight, and you can fill in extra spoons and forks if it's to be a larger number.

> "Eight is fine, but I can't sit at one end of the table, my husband at the other—it's a perfectly awful mathematical imbalance."

Assuming you have the silver, the china, the glasses, the linens, and stamina unflagging, the guest list becomes an exercise now in logic and intuition. There are guest-list rules, of course, and as a hostess, you have to predict probable rapport, but really, can you? The most unlikely people make strange bedfellows, and those who ought to, do not. Eight can absorb leaders and followers, listeners and talkers. You need, for the sake of each kind, a smattering of both. Eight can absorb the quiet couple, the beautiful women always advised by party advisors, and the plain girls (who resent them). You might have one psychiatrist, never two. Stars don't like competition. What about a homogeneous group—the conversation is no problem, no spark need be set, but then it may drift into boredom and a division of men and women.

> "At a sit-down dinner for eight, confinement between two souls not kindred can be a punishment."

Two small, round tables—bridge tables covered with folding wooden tops and gala cloths (not necessarily matching although coordinated) are better than one long table. Gayer, less formal. You may talk easily to everyone at your table without jerking your head from left to right, tennis-match style. For smoothness and flow—if without Help—you must do everything ahead.

> "I'm always peeling something when the doorbell rings."

Forego—you must—the delicious little hot clams (popped into the oven at the last minute) if it means anxiety and a flushed face. Cheese will do, might even be preferred. Celery. Nothing—to ease the conscience of the dieters—may be even better.

> "I don't want those people eating up a lot of old cashew nuts and spoiling their dinner."

Ready the bar, the coffee cups. (And be wary of the person who asks for tea. The true teadrinker—there's one at every party—will not settle contentedly with a teabag. Have tea accessories and a delicate oolong on tap.) Avoid carving, and dishes that require it, because this slows the entire process. While roast beef may be everyone's favorite, it won't be if it arrives cold. Avoid, as for six, jumping up during the meal. Serve the first course, if you have one, at the coffee table or small, auxiliary tables in the living room. One might, if one could, seat eight at a round table, but no round table is large enough to seat eight comfortably.

The most enchanting party is ten or twelve

After eight, a buffet wherein guests help themselves, aided or unaided by Help. The menu might be the same as at a seated dinner, or it might be a large variety. The tables, of course, completely and beautifully set beforehand. When it is time for dessert, the buffet is cleared and dessert plates, dessert, silver, and coffee are set out, and guests may help themselves.

> "A French chef. Formal. Exquisitely served. That's what I call a party."

Ideally, Help serves dessert and coffee. Place cards should indicate seating, the seats assigned on the basis of common interests—seating too complicated now for a graceful wave of the hand. The party is large enough now to seem festive.

> "I hate them. I hate them all. The larger they are, the more I hate them."

Ten, or more, can absorb an off-note or catalyst guest—one whom you might not want at your perfect little dinner for six, but his slightly abrasive or provocative manner is fine at a party. The gracious handling of introductions grows more important. If you can keep your wits and your charm about you, introduce each to the other with a small resume, casually.

> "We're all grown-up people. We can introduce ourselves and find out all about them."

The liveliest mix at any party is single and married, with a range of ages and interests (even incomes), yet there must be a common thread. Attention, attention must be paid when you make up your guest list. It is possible now to sneak in two quiet couples. Ten or twelve is a fine number for spirited conversation —the point of any party—several conversations, in fact, since now the party splits into several groups and guests may wander about finding their niche. A bit of well-tempered coquetry, right out of Oscar Wilde, is a bubbly, Champagne kind of fizz, and a juicy conversation piece for the trip home. Invite, then—be sure to—an outrageous flirt.

> "I hate young girls."

Invite, if you know one, a dotty old dowager. Old people are so amusingly outspoken, and they make—unless incipient laryngitis overtakes them—wonderful raconteurs. Royalty—even dethroned —is nice. Ten or twelve is the most challenging kind of party for the hostess, a test of her mettle, most flexible as far as menu and traffic arrangements. Your choice of large tables, two or three, depends on the number of guests. Or small tables. Think seriously about a bartender. Even an amiable and cooperative husband can become cross when stationed all night at the bar. Have you thought about games or an evening of movies—not of your trip to Europe?

> "Games? Not in twenty years. When they start pulling out pads and pencils, you know the party's going bad—there's nothing to do but cry."

What about something terribly crowded—a real dazzler?

Music? Dancing? A cocktail party (would they count a cocktail party as a dinner return)? It's possible as you get into the Big Party to sneak in those two quiet couples (very much on your mind—such sterling people once you get to know them), as well as the obligations you vowed you wouldn't have.

> "A very large party is a waste of time."

> "I like a party to start at ten, so you can go home, dress leisurely, and have a plate of hot soup."

Professional help is necessary—one's husband no longer adequate—and a blessing. There are caterers who will do a party for 500 in a field, if you have a field that wants partying. They will (if your party is smaller) tend your bar, cook in your kitchen. Or cook the entire meal outside and bring it at five o'clock the day of the party. They will rearrange your furniture, and stack your refrigerator sensibly to get the most mileage out of the space. Best of all, they will send you to your room, and you can steam your face over a sink instead of over a stove. What about the mood of the large party—a mixed bag can be rather attractive, and there's safety in numbers.

Have you given any thought to the seating? There have been lamentations, particularly among men, about the difficulties of balancing plates and the discomforts of standing.

> "I know they say they like to sit down, but they don't."

Women enjoy a very large party. Just by its nature, it's sparkly and gay, prettier, noisier. At a large party, the guest is on his own (the host and hostess cannot possibly watch over so many), and he can make a game, if he is of piquant mind, of finding someone he likes and getting away from someone he dislikes. In this way, a large party is undemanding for the guest.

> "Sometimes a room can be too large. In a small room, people are crowded. I know they say they don't like it, but they do."

A cocktail party? It's fashionable to hate them, or to say you do, anyway, but they do go on just as surely as birth and death, and have spread to Europe. Sometimes superficial small talk is more relaxing than at a smaller party where you must talk.

> "A cocktail party. Obligations only. To think that I am one of them, a crossed-out name on a list."

A cocktail buffet, however, is flexible, allowing for long or short stays, with food planned for both. Different times of arrivals and departures (a convenience during the holiday season) change the pace of the party. The tempo shifts. And timing (is this one of your problems?) is less important than at the sit-down dinner or the smaller buffet.

> "Aimless, boring, shallow, superficial, and—an imposition—frequently foodless."

A party, then—whatever the reason for it, whatever its size, whatever snags may occur backstage (or even on stage, on whatever level you operate—from no Help to a little maid who clatters dishes to a becalming caterer who begs you to leave him be) is simply fun and merriment, a room—somehow, some way—awash with magic. Judge its success, if you like, by the tentative twitterings of first arrivals that turn into a cosy roar. ■

by Dorothy Rodgers

Finishing the three-part story of the house built by Mr and Mrs. Richard Rodgers. In this installment: Agonizing de lays . . . moving in . . . how it worked . . . delights discovered On page 282, how Mrs. Rodgers entertains in the new house

Spring came, the weather grew warmer, and the house began to look very much like a place you might move into one day. The outer walls were up, the roofs were shingled with slate, and by the first of May, Paul Heetmann, our gardener, had flowers blooming in the greenhouse. With the front courtyard brought up almost to grade level, the house seemed to have settled comfortably onto the land. The beauty and dignity of its proportions — of roof to walls to broad chimney — were real, not just lines on drawing boards.

Inside, the walls were going up, and the living-room ceiling, plastered at last, gave three-dimensional reality to the room that was the focal point of the house. Filled with light and air, it had a little of the feeling a floating pavilion must have. The swimming pool, painted white now, made the whole terrace area look nearly finished. Water in the pool from the spring rains heightened the illusion.

In the winter, when bare trees left an open view from the road, friends would drive by and see the several roofs, then call to ask how work on "the village" was progressing. But as the house took form, the brilliance of John Stonehill's design proved itself once more. In spite of its overall size, things were so arranged that you saw only a small part of the house at any one time, and each aspect provided its own delightful surprise: a near view with trees framed by a window or a vista sweeping to the sky.

I waited impatiently to be tol when we could move in. Finally on June 24th, Mike Sochacki, ou contractor, told us that the ser vice wing would be finished o July 8th, and that Dick and could move into the two maids rooms the following week. I wa ecstatic at the news. The kitche and pantry would be complet and functioning. Our temporar quarters would be small, bu bright and pretty; we'd have th terrace, the screened porches and the swimming pool; best o all, I would have time to experi ment and get to know all th wonders of my new kitchen.

I promptly worked out the time table and set the wheels in mo tion for Stage I of the Big Move The local warehouse already had a list of cartons and boxes con taining things we would need for the service wing; all they needed now was the final delivery date I notified the upholsterer, the cabinetmaker, and the carpet company, so that the cotton rugs as well as the repainted and re covered furniture could be sent over that second week in July. And, of course, I set to work on dozens of lists, all headed "Don't forget." There were paper things (towels, cups, plates, napkins), staples (flour, sugar, spices, rice), cleaning supplies (cleansers, soaps, detergents, liquids)— and those were only the beginning.

On June 29th, I put down my pencil and pads long enough to go through the morning's mail— and thunder struck. In my hand

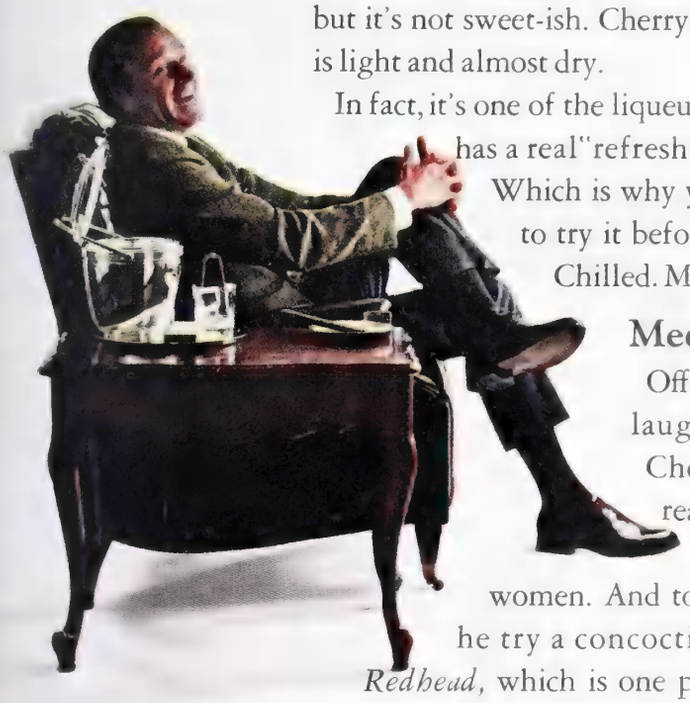
The most misunderstood drink in the world.

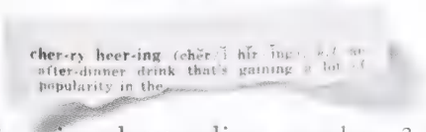


Just because Cherry Heering has the word "cherry" in it, some people think it's a too-sweet liqueur. Which it isn't.

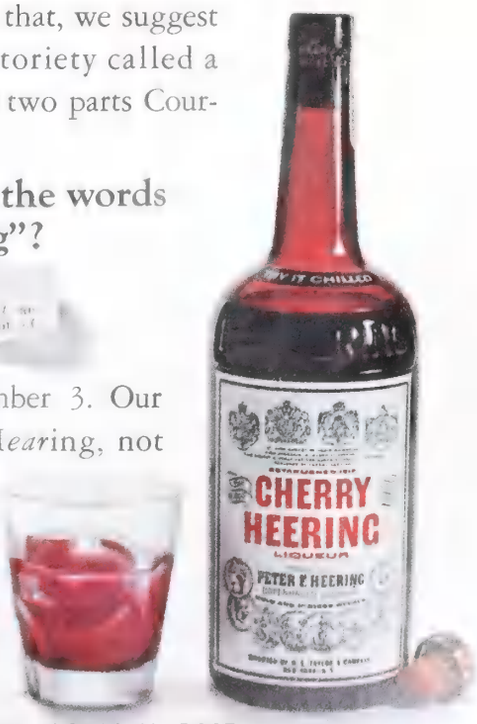
Cherry Heering is different. It's sweet, but it's not sweet-ish. Cherry Heering is light and almost dry.

In fact, it's one of the liqueurs that has a real "refreshing" taste.

Which is why you might want to try it before dinner. During dinner. After dinner. Chilled. Mixed. On-the-rocks. Anywhere. Any way.

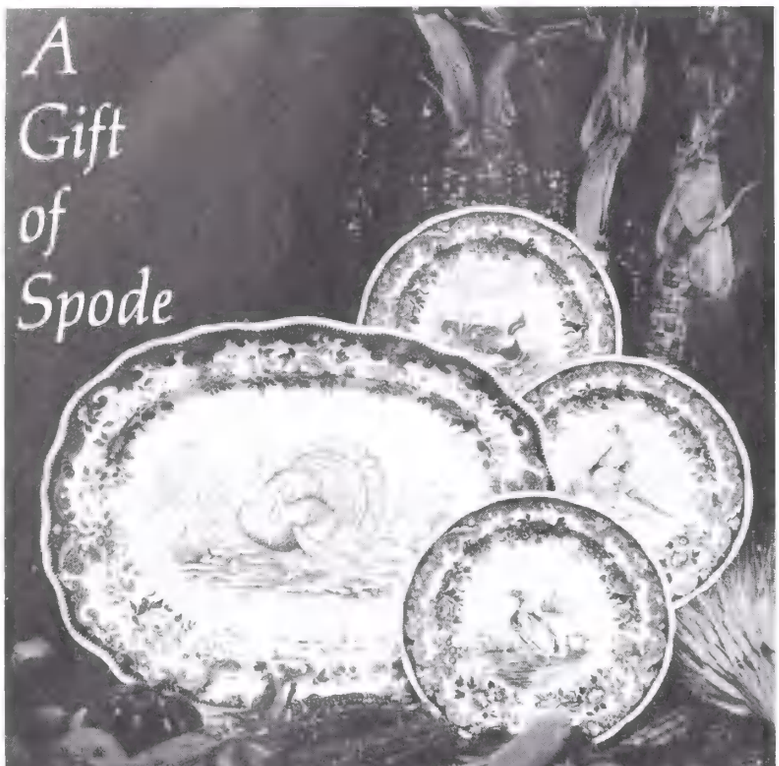


Meet misunderstanding #2



Offer Cherry Heering to some guys and they laugh. They figure: because women like Cherry Heering they won't. They don't realize that women like Cherry Heering because it's good. Not because they're women. And to any man who doubts that, we suggest he try a concoction that's gaining notoriety called a Redhead, which is one part Cherry Heering to two parts Courvoisier Cognac served on-the-rocks.

How do you pronounce the words "Cherry Heering"?



That's misunderstanding number 3. Our name is pronounced Cherry Hearing, not "herring." If we're not the most misunderstood drink in the world, we're surely the most mispronounced.

was a copy of a letter from Mike to John, which stated—rather casually, I thought—that the caretaker could move in on July 15th, that Dick and I could have the maids' rooms on the 23rd of July, and that the house would be finished on October 1st, if the mechanical work was completed by then.

The shock was total: I had seen no warning lightning. I stared. I reread. I despaired then I settled things in a very feminine fashion by bursting into tears. I had been promised that if I worked, and the weather held . . . Well, I had worked, and we had had the warmest winter in memory. We knew, and had been reminded, that some delays were inevitable; and we had been, I thought, rather good-humored about them so far. But I, for one, had just about run out of humor. I wanted our house.

"Surely this is some terrible kind of joke," I wailed to John on the phone. "Mike just can't mean it. He said a house for the summer, and that isn't . . . can't be . . . he couldn't mean October 1st!"

John called Mike, then called me back with reassurance. It wasn't as bad as it looked on paper, he said. The couple could still move in, if not on the eighth, on the day after; and Dick and I could be in the following week. On the surface, everything seemed smoothed out; surely one day's delay was not very important. Still, one large blank remained to be filled in: the date on which the entire house would really be finished.

I said all I could, put all the pressure I could on John and Mike. I wouldn't go sobbing to Dick. It wasn't simply a matter of his being busy; it was also that I knew this sort of thing was just what he'd had in mind when he had offered, so long ago, to go away for a year if I was going to build a house. So my own pride and promises kept me somewhat silent while I tried everything I could think of to move things along.

First, John and I visited the house, and we went over every unfinished detail with Mike. At the end of our consultation I felt better, and although I had still not been given a firm completion date, it seemed that everything was back on the track.

The eighth of July came and went, and the ninth. The things from the warehouse arrived—minus only a few of the cartons we needed and with only a few unasked-for items added—and were stashed in the maids' rooms and in the potting shed, along with some furniture from New York. Nothing could be put in place, of course, but it was there. And teams of men working—laying floors, painting walls, placing cabinets and ceiling skylights gave rise to faint hopes that progress was being made.

Emotionally, it was possibly the most mercurial time in my life. My mood swung from despair to delight and back, depending on the day's news. On Wednesday, July 13th, to take one small example, my diary reads "chaos, delay, disappointment, errors. . . . Very upset. . . . Home, very depressed."

Yet two days later, on Friday the 15th, the same woman, in the same diary, reports, "I went to the country with John, and we worked on the problems of the laundry and kitchen. I had been so upset about minor things. . . . But I have a feeling we accomplished a great deal. I feel much happier about everything." Thus my schizophrenia progressed.

Meanwhile I was waging psychological war. My intuition told me that unless we made a tremendous effort to establish residence, the delaying tactics would continue indefinitely. So, since we had set July 15th as the day to move in, I clung to it right down the line. On the 13th (Chaos Day), still trying to believe we would need them in 48 hours, I brought out two suitcases full of Dick's and my clothes. There was obviously no place to unpack them, since both bedrooms we had planned to use were piled ceiling-high with crates and cartons of things that would be moved out "as soon as" the walls and the floors and the ceilings in the kitchen were finished and the cabinets and equipment installed. But I was determined that I would not take so much as one overnight bag back to New York. So into the potting shed went the luggage to await our arrival.

Just knowing those cases were there helped ease the day's discouragements a little. In the back of my mind was the thought that every time Mike passed them they would act as reminders of our eagerness to move.

We did not move in on the 15th. I could have stamped my feet and shouted and got people to scurry about, but it wouldn't have done any good. The rooms were finally cleared, and there were beds and some of the furniture in them. However, the air conditioning was not hooked up; the hot-water system had just been tested. We conceded and put off the move for a week. With the suitcases in the potting shed establishing a beachhead, I felt that we could afford to be a bit generous.

On Sunday, the 17th, we did have a beautiful picnic. Mary's husband Hank, who had never been able to visit the house before, came along. And all that bright summer afternoon we basked on the terrace, and swam. The swimming was blissful. There were the wings of the house for shelter, yet as you floated in the pool you were hypnotized by the wide sky above and the distant view beyond. That day, for the first time, Dick seemed excited. I suspect that up to that point he hadn't actually been able to convince himself that we would ever move in. Before we left for New York, I went to work in the maids' rooms, which were to be ours for a while. I plugged in the lamps, wound the clocks, rescued the suitcases from the shed, and unpacked.

The 21st—a shiny, clear Thursday—was the day that shall live in glory. I drove up early that morning and, armed with a list that was almost as long as the road from the house to Fairfield, I set out for Mercurio's Market to lay in staples and supplies. I love just about everything that has to do with food and cooking, but I've never enjoyed any shopping trip as much as I did that one. The thought of flour and rice in the cupboards, butter in the refrigerator, and ice cream in the freezer was almost too exciting to bear. I stacked the shelves all the rest of the afternoon. And then, about five, Dick finally arrived.

I wish I could honestly say that he found me fresh and enchanting, waiting to welcome him with a cool drink and a little something supperish (sorrel soup and a filet would ha been nice). He found me ela but exhausted—willing and about able to be taken out dinner. But the glorious fact mained: that night we spent very first night in The House

The next morning I woke five—partly because I was excited to sleep, and partly cause, I suppose, some inter alarm clock told me that workmen would be arriving eight and I didn't want to be h ried through our first breakfa Everything worked—includi the number of footsteps (a ve few) from burners to sink dishwasher to counter. The cu ioned vinyl floorcovering was only wonderfully comforta and quiet underfoot, but I covered it also kept dropp dishes from breaking. I bathed, dressed, and had brea fast served and cleared aw long before the first of the wo men's cars turned into the dri way.

Everything went beautifully us that weekend. The rooms we airy and comfortable: the be marvelous. And although the conditioning still wasn't prepar to function, the weather was clear and cool it didn't matt We shopped and worked a swam. The pool was so acc sible and inviting that Dick, w hadn't been in Rockmeadow pool for years, actually got up seven on Saturday to take first dip.

oven, it didn't; but my second try produced sensational results. Once the dishwasher refused to function because I had overstuffed its detergent cup, and a whole cake of soap did manage to slip into the food disposer when I wasn't looking (cleverly, I did not reach in after it). But generally, things worked beautifully, and I would go off to bed at night with the dishwasher washing, the oven cleaning, and the jets vacuuming the pool. It gave me the feeling that an army of small robots was working for me while I slept.

Without doubt, the "toy" I had most fun with was the freezer. There was a certain joy in just standing and looking at its well-fed interior. To a base of favorite commercially prepared foods like those delicious young vegetables that come in plastic bags ready to pop into boiling water, I had added extra supplies of meat and butter, muffins and bread and rolls. There were lobster and brook trout, frozen chives and parsley and dill. And of course I had stocked up on ice cream and sherbet. But by far the most satisfying section contained a growing collection of home-produced items that ranged from sauces to an ice-cream-filled chocolate roll and frozen pastry shells ready for the oven. There was court bouillon saved from the bass I had done, and all sorts of soup stock frozen in ice trays, then the cubes emptied into plastic bags.

Everything in the freezer was wrapped in usable portions and labeled. I had planned to buy a blackboard on which to keep a list of contents, but John suggested a handier way of keeping track. So I now use a grease pencil called a China Marker (it's the kind hardware stores use to put prices on pots and pans), and I write on the inside of the enameled door of the cupboard next to the freezer. As things are used, I correct the list with the wipe of a damp cloth; nothing could be easier.

Monday morning we stayed long enough to go over a list of needed adjustments with Mike, then started for the city. My feet and back ached, and I was feeling muscles I hadn't used for years. I was really ready for a few days of city rest. Yet, bone-tired as I was, when it came with a white Formica top and

We had no house guests, and we missed having the children out. But our Saturdays and Sundays were pleasant, if slightly hectic. Friends who wanted to see the house came in a steady stream for drinks, lunch and—very occasionally — dinner. Before, after, and during their visits, a parade of workmen passed through on routine or emergency errands. A sample Saturday's list of arrivals included the DeVrieses, the Knopfs, the Darrows, the Herseys, the Pabsts, and the Heyns, plus the TV man, the gasman, the pool people and a policeman who wanted Dick to autograph a record album. The traffic was nothing if not brisk and varied, and Dick and I ran guided tours on the half-hour. To my relief and delight, although the house was far from finished, almost everyone who came to see it seemed to get its message: we had very few "that is a baby" comments.

And, week by week, things were moving ahead. The terrace was finished, the bookcases did come, the floor tiles were laid, the painters did arrive. Our seventh weekend in the house would be Labor Day, and I was told that the Thursday before the living room and the entrance hall would be finished, all ready for furniture.

Having advised the warehouse people in New York and in Connecticut, we drove up from the city late Wednesday night to be there first thing in the morning when the vans were due. I took a flashlight and went in to admire the completed living room, only to discover that all the cabinetwork wasn't finished, there were still doors to be hung, and some of the painting hadn't even been started. Thursday morning the New York van, carrying all the things I'd acquired in the past few months, pulled in as promised on the dot of ten: by one, all its beautifully organized contents were unloaded and set in place. As for the two local vans loaded with things from Rockmeadow, it was five o'clock before they finally lumbered up the driveway. Starting so late, it was a back-breaking task to get bedroom things stored in the shed and the living-room things in place. We were all running so fast that there was no time for stand back and survey, to see if things were turning out at all as I had pictured them.

FRIDAY morning the living room was alive with painters, electricians, carpenters, plumbers, three women hanging curtains, one man installing the extremely complex burglar alarm system, and me. While they fitted, dabbed, and hammered away on the finishing touches, I unpacked books into the shelves, not in any sort of scholarly order, but so that we would have color instead of blank shelves to look at. I had taken all the lamps that needed new shades (it's curious, but lampshade styles do change) to the local lamp shop in a couple of station-wagon loads—a feat that would have been impossible in the city; now they were back and ready to be put into place.

At four o'clock—the witching hour on any construction job—everyone faded away to start his holiday weekend and left me with only a few more cartons to deal with. These held all the ornaments from Rockmeadow—china and small pictures, needlepoint pillows and bits of sculpture—things we had collected, lived with, and loved for years. I placed them around the room—the Judy Brown musicians on the new bar-buffet, the framed Coptic embroidery on the fruitwood piece across from it, a Dali drawing on the table behind the long sofa. I spread the small pillows around, set out cigarettes, ashtrays, and matches. Then Paul brought in pots of plants, including some beautiful geraniums, for the long Venetian-red table, and the living room was finished.

I was almost afraid to look. In spite of my planning, the colors, the scale, the groupings might be wrong. And because I was so anxious to have Dick like it, I was terrified for fear he wouldn't.

When I did look, I was happy with what I saw—and Dick loved it. He would move from one part of the room to another: sit in this chair, then that one, as if he were enjoying the room from all its different viewpoi bined with the hall's generous width makes you feel it is a place to pause and look at things—the painted Swiss piece that held the Hi Fi at Rockmeadow, for instance, and the secretary from the living room with pieces of china in it—not just a long space to pass through.

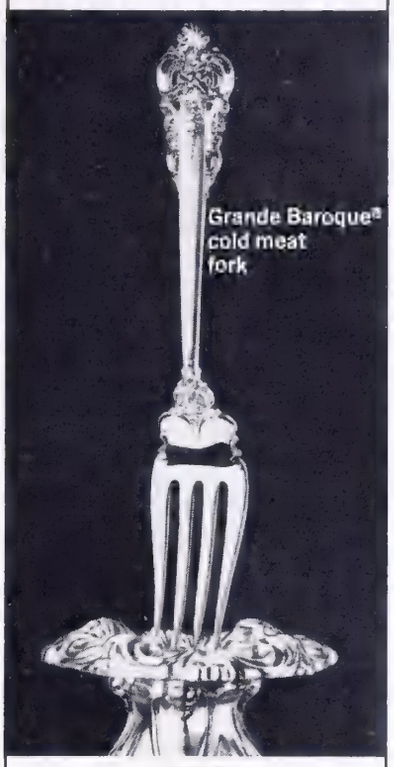
At the end near the guest entrance, there's a telephone with a comfortable chair, a floor lamp, and a small table where guests with phoning to do can have peace and privacy. It is also convenient to the croquet field, in case of calls during a game.

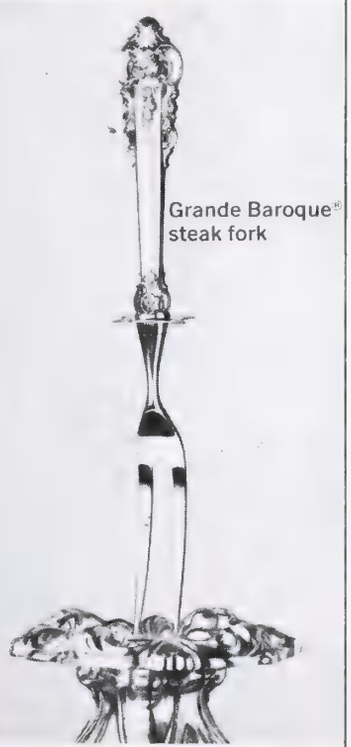
Where the bedrooms were concerned, I had only one minor hindsight regret. We had never considered raising the heights of the washbasins which, since this is a house built for grown-ups, might have made the bathrooms more convenient. Otherwise, things were fine. The overlapping drywall construction had given us smooth, relatively soundproof walls that were considerably less expensive than plaster and which I could be happily sure would never crack. And, though there were still men banging away in the basement, we had our house.

It was a little strange to find myself out of the kitchen and being waited on. (Inez and Margaret had come up with us and, pleased but a bit dazed by the newness of things, were making themselves at home.) But being forced to slow down, I could look around and see it all once more.



I was struck again by how much we owed to John—all the light (incredible through the living room windows in the morning, through the skylights all day) and the patterns that the house makes. One small example is the little storehouse he placed at the corner of the courtyard to give it definition and extend the lines of the house. There is a pervading tranquility that comes not only from the unity of materials used throughout the house but from the serene feeling that grows from having everything on one level: the tile of the living-room floor, the water in the pool, and the flagstone of the terrace.

Everywhere the openness of his design invites you to enjoy both the room in which you are sitting and beauty in the space beyond. A brilliant Alan Davie watercolor in the bedroom hall gives pleasure to people on the screened sitting porch. A Glen Michaels wall sculpture—an intriguing swirl of slate and shale and ceramic, a perfect complement to the house—has been hung on the porch where, seen through the hall and the living-room windows, it is a delight in any weather. For Christmas, Dick and I gave each other an iron sculpture by Somaini which, although abstract, suggests a great bird poised for flight: placed on the corner of the terrace wall, it becomes a thrilling part of the view from the terrace, from Dick's room, my room, and even parts of the croquet field. In fact, the house lends itself so beautifully to outdoor sculpture that we hope to add a number of pieces in the next few years.



I felt an enormous sense of pleasure and independence about the house. Though I certainly didn't plan to run it all by myself, the summer had given me confidence that I could really manage it without a great deal of help. In fall, the water in the pool remained blue and clear even after the filter had been turned off; and, thanks to new construction methods, we didn't have to float logs. The pond in the valley was coming into view, and even with the trees bare, things looked beautiful.

Nothing had been said about winter weekends until Dick mentioned buying a Jeep station wagon that could provide us with all-weather transportation. It seemed that neither of us felt we could bear to be separated from the house from late fall till spring. With each week that passes, we seem to belong to it more. Dick says that on Monday mornings he starts planning the return trip before we are out of the driveway. And, as usual, he is speaking for us both. ■

How to make THE PERFECT POUSSE-CAFÉ

From a famous New Orleans restaurant comes a formula for the classic drink

By ROY ANDRIES DE GROOT

The unique drink of the liqueur world is the Pousse-Café, in which several flavors are put together in a glass, yet do not mix. My recipe came many years ago from one of the oldest bars on Bourbon Street in New Orleans, where the drink originated. There are now dozens of variations but this is the original, from The Old Absinthe House, New Orleans.

Pousse-Café

Each drink is made individually. You need a tall Pousse-Café glass, about five inches high, ¾" at the bottom and expanding to about 1½" at the top. Into this glass you must pour seven liqueurs in an exact order, so that the heaviest remains on the bottom, the next lighter rests on top of it, and each in turn is lighter still. The final result is a gently swaying vertical rainbow of colors.

You have to pour each so gently on top of the previous one that there will be no blurring of the demarcations between the layers of color. There are various ways of pouring: 1. Slide the measured amount of liqueur down the side of the slightly tilted glass. 2. Pour them onto the back of a spoon inserted inside the glass. 3. Pour them down the blade of a knife. 4. Use a large-size eyedropper, a bulb-controlled measuring pipette (from a chemical supply store). I would practice at least once before trying it out at a party.

The other important point is to know the weight of the various liqueurs. This is generally controlled by the alcohol and sugar: the less alcohol and the more sugar, the greater the weight of the liquid. However, various makes of the same flavor may vary in sugar content, so you must experiment before you launch out into your own variations. Here is a specific formula that works (use these exact brands, ice-cold, in this order):

2 tsp. Marie Brizard "Crème de Cacao"—brown, the heaviest
2 tsp. Bols "Crème de Banana"—yellow
2 tsp. Cusenier "Freezomint"—green
2 tsp. Bosch "Anis del Mono"—clear
2 tsp. "Cherry Heering"—red
2 tsp. "Galliano"—bright yellow
2 tsp. "Cointreau"—clear, the lightest
1 tsp. heavy cream.

Gently pour the liqueurs into the Pousse-Café glass in exactly the order listed above. Top with the cream. Drink the Pousse-Café without shaking it, so that you taste the various flavors separately.

Mr. de Groot has told the complete story of cordials and liqueurs in an article starting on page 262.

Special reasons for serving Almadén

. . . keep cropping up

They crop up every year: Cabernet Sauvignon. Pinot Chardonnay. Pinot Noir. Grenache. All of the famous European varietal wine grapes . . . and each promising the superb character demanded for Almadén wines. How can we be so sure of that?

Because we grow these grapes ourselves. We need not rely on other vineyards. Our unique advantage lies along the cool slopes of California's Gavilan Range: Almadén's Paicines Mountain Vineyards, the world's largest vineyards of fine wine grapes . . . where ideal soil, climate, elevation and care assure outstanding wine grapes. And, eventually, outstanding wines.

So next time you have dinner guests, reserve a special place . . . for your favorite Almadén wine. And notice how the compliments keep cropping up.

KitchenAid introduces the Super Disposer.

It's made by the same people who make KitchenAid dishwashers.

It does everything a fine disposer should do. For example, it pulverizes steak bones and chicken bones. Even grinds stringy things like corn husks. Extra-thick insulation makes it quiet.

If it jams, it eliminates the jam automatically.

A COOKBOOK SAMPLER

An editor's choice from the fall's crop

By HELEN McCULLY

Although "instant" seems to be a word that is in our kitchens to stay, it is encouraging to note that a number of the new cookbooks are based on foreign cuisines that call for serious cooking. Despite the excellence of many modern foods on the market, we like to think women use them intelligently but also know the infinite pleasure of cooking from scratch—no matter what the "language."

In The Complete Book of Mexican Cooking (M. Evans and Company, $7.95) Elizabeth Lambert Ortiz, English by birth married to a Mexican, has done an extraordinary job. Probably the first book ever published, in English or any language, that explores the whole subject of Mexican food in depth, this is no mere compilation of recipes but, more precisely, an exhaustive study of Mexican cooking from the time of the Conquest (1529) up to modern times. As Mrs. Ortiz points out the present-day Mexican kitchen has been influenced by a collision of cooking worlds—the Aztec, Spanish, and Arab. Later during the brief reign of Maximilian and Carlotta, by sophisticated dishes of French, Austrian, and Italian origin. Mrs. Ortiz not only discusses fully and individually the many ingredients important to the authentic Mexican cuisine—corn, chiles, beans, tomatoes, herbs, etc.—but gives sources, nationally, for those not readily available in the supermarket. All recipes, all authentic, have been thoroughly tested by the author. Here is one interesting fish recipe which calls for fresh orange juice.

When we hold a preview we invite 1500 critics.

Each time we design a new pattern, Bill Wallace leaves home.

Bill's in Market Research, and he wants to know how the world's going to like our baby. So he checks . . . with women of all ages, all incomes, all over the country.

Bill's so fair it hurts. Empress, for example, he tested in a group of 24 patterns, including many from the competition. His critics got no clues; only questions. Which did they want most? Which least?

More of the ladies wanted Empress than any other pattern. But if they hadn't . . . if enough of them had panned it . . . we'd have chucked it. With a twinge, we admit; it takes months to worry a pattern into being.

But we'd have chucked it.

We figure 1500 critics like you can't all be wrong.

What makes Empress lovely is its serenity, a kind of simple elegance. But what makes it lovely longer is this: in producing DeepSilver, we open a well in the backs of the pieces you use most, right where the wear is heaviest. We drop in an extra block of sterling. And then we plate with more pure silver than any other leading silverplate.

After that, we feel secure enough to say, "If any piece of DeepSilver fails to give satisfactory service with normal use and care, during your lifetime, we will resilver it at no charge."

This is what makes DeepSilver worthy of our Maker's Mark. And if you've learned one thing from us, you've learned to look for the IS mark when you shop.

Pescado Naranjado
(Fish in Orange Juice)

6 individual cod or halibut steaks
Flour
Salt
Freshly ground pepper
Good handful of parsley sprigs, finely chopped
3 cloves garlic, crushed
¼ cup olive oil
Lemon juice
Juice of 4 medium oranges, drained

Dust the fish steaks with flour which has been seasoned with salt and pepper. Mix the parsley, garlic, and olive oil together. Add a good squeeze of lemon juice. Spread the mixture over both sides of the fish steaks and arrange fish in a greased ovenproof casserole large enough for the steaks to lie flat. Pour the orange juice over all; cover; and bake for 20 minutes in a preheated 450° F. oven, or until the fish flakes easily with a fork. Serves 6. Note: Arroz Verde (Green Rice) is a pleasant accompaniment.

A Taste of Portugal, a cookbook by Shirley Sarvis (Charles Scribner's Sons, $5.95) is interesting not alone because of the recipes but because Miss Sarvis gives her reader a regional guide to Portuguese menus. Thus, the traveller would find it as useful as the woman who wants to try her hand with some of these fascinating dishes. Throughout the book, the author has injected colorful bits of information that contribute greatly to the book's interest. "You might know," Miss Sarvis writes, "in this land where custards are so constant, someone would have condensed custard to its richest." Here it is and, despite its name, it is a pudding.

Bolo de Principe
(Prince's Cake)

5 eggs
1¼ cups sugar
Grated peel and juice of 1 lemon
Grated semi-sweet chocolate (optional)

Beat eggs and sugar until sugar is dissolved. Beat in lemon peel and juice. Pour into a shallow baking dish (3 to 4 cups, so pudding is about 1 inch deep). Set into a baking pan with hot water about ½ inch deep in bottom. Bake in a slow oven 325° F. for 30 minutes or just until set. Remove from water; cool on a rack. Spoon into dessert dishes; sprinkle with chocolate. Makes 5 to 6 servings.

Nika Standen Hazleton has added two books to her culinary laurels: The Best of Italian Cooking (The World Publishing Company, $5.95) and The Swiss Cookbook (Atheneum, $5.95). Mrs. Hazleton can certainly speak with authority on both these cuisines since she was born in Italy and grew up in Switzerland. What's especially useful about the Italian book is her interesting notation on the origins of Italian food and the fact that culinary Italy is divided into two parts: the Northern, or butter region, and the Southern, or olive-oil area. She gives detailed information on how food is served in an Italian restaurant as well as in the home, and covers, briefly, Italian wines. The recipes, which are representative of all regions, open with Antipasto Combinations and end with All Soul's Day Macaroons.

In The Swiss Cookbook Mrs. Hazleton gives a colorful, fascinating and highly personal "cook's tour" of Switzerland, plus basic information on Swiss cooking as it is practised in Swiss homes and good Swiss restaurants. This is a book to read but also to take into the kitchen and use. The following recipe, a familiar, national dish, is perfectly delicious.

Minced Veal Bellevoir from Zurich

The dish must be prepared quickly and just before serving or the meat will toughen.

- 1½ pounds veal cutlets
- 6 tablespoons butter
- 3 tablespoons minced shallots
- 1 cup brandy
- ¼ cup flour
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ¼ teaspoon white pepper
- 1⅓ cups dry white wine, heated
- 1 cup heavy cream, heated
- 1 tablespoon minced parsley

Trim the meat of all fat and gristle. Cut against the grain into strips ¼ inch wide and 1 inch long. Heat the butter in a large skillet or chafing dish. Add the shallots and cook 3 minutes, or until soft and golden. Add the veal. Cook, stirring constantly, for 2 minutes. Flame with brandy. When the flame has died down, sprinkle the flour over the veal. Stir in the salt and pepper. Add the hot wine and heated cream. Cook over low heat, stirring constantly, until the mixture comes just below the boiling point and thickens. Sprinkle with the minced parsley. Serve immediately. The classic accompaniments are Kartoffelrosti (Fried potato cake) and a tossed green salad.

It has been said that the Greek cuisine almost depends on the lemon, and a quick glance through Adventures in Greek Cookery by Stella Kopulos and Dorothy P. Jones (World Publishing Company, $4.95) indicates that there is some truth to the statement. As the authors point out, Greek cookery reflects the currents of history (hence the many popular dishes that bear Turkish, Persian and Arabic names) and falls somewhere between village simplicity and Athenian elegance. This well-planned book with well-written recipes—from hors d'oeuvre to beverages—includes a great deal of basic information such as Greek customs, holidays and shopping notes. It's interesting that Mayoneza, the Greek mayonnaise, like the French Aioli calls for potato but not for garlic.

Mayoneza

- 3 egg yolks
- ¾ cup olive oil
- Juice of 1 lemon
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 boiled potato, mashed

Beat the egg yolks until very thick. Add the olive oil in drops while continuing to beat. Add the lemon juice gradually, then salt and mashed potato. Beat until very smooth. This is best served fresh but can be kept in the refrigerator a week. Makes about 1½ cups.

Raymond Oliver, famed restaurateur and owner of Le Grand Vefour, a Paris restaurant that rates three stars in the Guide Michelin, has written Gastronomy of France (The World Publishing Company, $19.75), which has been selected as one of the Wine & Food Society series. Much more than a cookbook, although it contains a large number of classic recipes, it is actually a study of the sociology of taste—a comment on the social uses of food and a thorough treatment of the origins and history of French culinary art from its primitive beginnings to the point at which it reached its fullest flower in mid-nineteenth-century France. An elegant book, lavishly illustrated in color and black and white, Gastronomy of France is a book for the discerning palate and for those who take these matters seriously.

Michael Field, who likes to write about food as much as he likes to cook it, both of which he does well, has conceived a most interesting idea in Michael Field's Culinary Classics and Improvisations (Random House, $6.95). His basic premise is that as a nation we have neglected the transformation of left-over, cooked food from one form to another. What Mr. Field is saying, in his rather involved title, is you don't have to "eat

"up" a cooked turkey or roast of beef, in the same form, meal after endless meal. However, he adds correctly, there are "a wealth of dishes which literally demand previously cooked food as a base." To cite a few of his improvisations: Bigos (leftover pot roast), Moussaka (leftover lamb), Fricadelles (leftover veal), Miroton (leftover pot-au-feu), Red Flannel Hash (leftover corned beef). The author starts off in this book with a classic recipe, then offers at least four and up to ten (all listed for easy reference) improvisations. Mr. Field makes "leftovers" an obsolete word. So, before your holiday bird starts to become a crashing bore, improvise with . . .

Turkey Paprikash

3 tablespoons butter
½ cup onions, finely chopped
1 medium green pepper, cut into very thin slivers (about ¾ cup)
1 tablespoon flour
1 tablespoon imported Hungarian paprika
1½ cups turkey stock or canned chicken stock
⅛ teaspoon sugar
Salt
1 egg (yolk only)
½ cup sour cream
¼ teaspoon lemon juice
2 cups cooked turkey, cold, cut into 1½ inch dice
2 tablespoons fresh dill or parsley, finely chopped Cooked noodles with butter
Breadcrumbs, buttered

Melt the butter in a small enamel frying pan, add the chopped onions, and cook over low heat for 8 to 10 minutes, stirring occasionally until they color lightly. Stir in the thinly slivered green pepper and cook 3 to 5 minutes longer; allow them to soften without browning.

Combine in a small bowl the flour and paprika, then, off the heat, mix this thoroughly into the sautéed onions and peppers. Now with a wire whisk beat in, little by little, the turkey or canned chicken stock, return the pan to the heat and, still beating, bring the sauce to a boil. It will get quite thick and smooth. Turn the heat down to barely simmering, add the sugar and a little salt and let the sauce cook slowly for 10 minutes or so. At this point mix the egg yolk with the sour cream and stir it into the simmering sauce 1 tablespoon at a time. Under no circumstances let it come to a boil. When the sauce is quite hot, fold in the diced turkey, and season with the lemon juice and more salt if you think it needs it. Heat the turkey through without letting it actually cook, however, or it will certainly become stringy or tough. And if it must wait for any length of time, keep it warm over hot water in the top of a double boiler.

Serve the paprikash sprinkled with the chopped fresh dill or parsley and accompany it with hot buttered noodles to which you have added crisp buttered breadcrumbs.

The first big, all-purpose cookbook in some time is The General Federation of Women's Clubs Cook Book, America Cooks (G. P. Putnam's Sons, $6.95), edited by Ann Seranne. The very fact that Miss Seranne had a hand in it is almost a guarantee of excellence. All the recipes were contributed by members of the Federation with, in most cases, the name and locale of the donor. In addition to the recipes, and there are 3500 (selected from a million), the reader will find pointers about meal planning, nutrition, seasonings, canning, home freezing, pot and pan dimensions, etc. There is even a calorie chart.

Miss Pauline Trigere, the well-known fashion designer, no slouch in the kitchen herself, wrote the introduction to Come Cook with Me by Maurice Brockway (Atheneum, $4.95). In answer to Mr. Brockway's invitation she says, "Avec plaisir." Happily for the author he was taken in hand as a youngster by the family cook Hettie, who taught his taste buds to appreci-

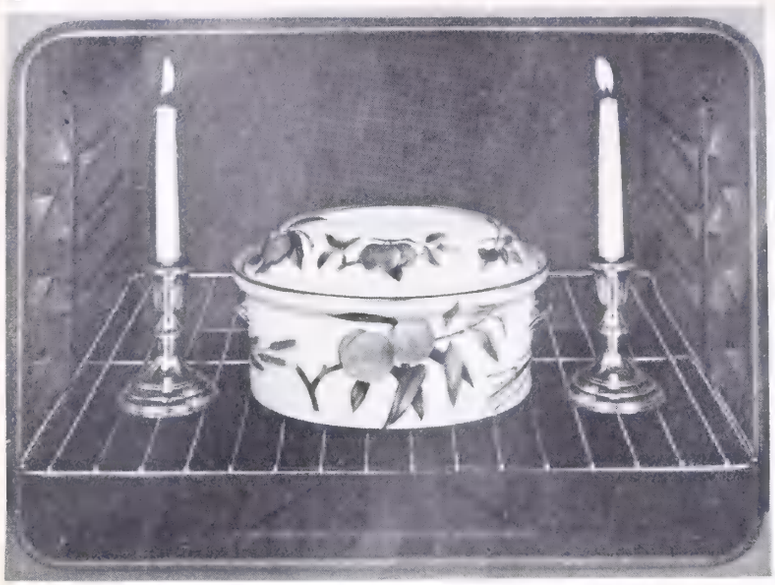
The Towle Reputation:

When everyone's patterns begin to look alike it could help you make up your mind.

It usually happens two weeks after you start shopping around. Suddenly, "Heritage Rose" looks exactly like "Moonlight Fantasy," "Moonlight Fantasy" looks like "Sunset Sonata." And they all look like carbon copies of "Rococo Rhapsody," or whatever.

Don't panic. You have just reached the turning-point in a silver shopper's life. The point where she begins to suspect that there's more to selecting sterling silver than just the pattern.

And there is. Because behind every piece of silver, there's a silversmith. And each silversmith has his own personality. His own traditions. His own reputation.



The Towle tradition, speaking for ourselves, goes back over 275 years. In fact, we're still located near the same little river in Newburyport, Massachusetts where we started in 1690. We still follow the same rules of our craft, even though doing so much work by hand may seem a little eccentric these days. And we still keep our shop small, because that's the best way to assure high standards. (We have only 325 workers. Many of these craftsmen have never worked anywhere else).

When all the patterns begin to look alike, stop and think about what we've just told you. Then start choosing again. Perhaps you'll begin to see the difference.

For color folders showing these and other Towle patterns, write Towle Silversmiths, Dept. B3, Newburyport, Mass.

ate good food. From there he went on to larger, not necessarily greener, fields, such as the Hotel Plaza in New York and the newly defunct Ambassador. This book, as much for reading as for cooking, is a result of a life-long preoccupation with food.

Charlotte Adams who has, almost literally, traveled the world to enlarge her cooking knowledge, has combined many of her favorite recipes in a new book, Cooking with Style (Doubleday, $4.95). Designed primarily for entertaining, the book contains a number of interesting menus, ever the bugaboo of all cooks, as well as New York sources for unusual ingredients. An attractive melange of recipes from the French, Spanish and Italian cuisines, it also includes such familiar home-grown products as Grasshopper Pie and Veal Birds. If oyster stew is your custom on the eve of the big holiday feast, why not try Mrs. Adams' recipe?

Gourmet Oyster Stew

2 dozen raw oysters with liquor
1 teaspoon celery salt
½ teaspoon paprika
1 pint milk
1 pint light cream
½ teaspoon Tabasco
Butter

Put oysters with their liquor in the blazer of a chafing dish. Add celery salt and paprika. Heat until the edges of oysters curl slightly. Add milk and cream and heat to serving temperature. Remove from heat and stir in Tabasco. Put a good pat of butter in each bowl and ladle in the stew. Serve with pilot or oyster crackers. Serves 4.

The wine book of the year, some say of two decades, is Wine (Simon and Schuster, $10.00) by Hugh Johnson, formerly Secretary-General of The Wine & Food Society and now Travel Editor for London's Sunday Times. By any standards, this is a remarkable book. The enthusiast will find answers to many of his questions; the beginner can slake his thirst for knowledge; even the man who is indifferent to wine can hardly read this urbane prose without becoming first interested and then fascinated. The author ranges through history and the lore of wine making (How did Dom Perignon discover the secret of making champagne? How do they make the legendary Tokay? What role do American wines play in the history of French wines?) and seems to have answered every conceivable question. This beautifully illustrated book is a joy—learned, thorough, and witty.

. . . and two books of special note

Modesty prevents Helen McCully from reviewing her own books, but we at HOUSE BEAUTIFUL take pride in calling your attention to the two she has written. The first, Nobody Ever Tells You These Things About Food and Drink (Holt, Rinehart & Winston, $5.95), is of particular interest to readers who have followed her column for the last three years. With over 1,000 entries, it delivers a wealth of fascinating and practical knowledge on every cookery subject. Well-indexed for easy reference, it should be a staple in every good cook's library.

Miss McCully's second book, The Other Half of the Egg, (M. Barrows & Co., $5.95), was written with Chef Jacques Pépin and is aptly described in its subtitle, 180 Ways to Use Up Extra Yolks or Whites. Charmingly written and illustrated —with an amusing introduction by William North Jayme, a noncook whose innocent question triggered the collaboration— it is composed of a glossary (which sensibly comes first), a section in honor of the yolk, and one on the white. At the end, a chapter unites them and, among other things, takes the terror out of the soufflé. A wonderful book for the gourmet cook or the complete amateur, if one still exists, who can barely boil water. ■

OFFER YOUR GUESTS SHERRY INSTEAD OF A DRINK.

Some people don't really want to drink when they drink.

They'd like to sip something. Not a cocktail or highball, but not a "Shirley Temple" either.

They're looking for something light and a little dry; something sophisticated, but not ultra chi-chi; something they can handle straight, or on the rocks, just like a drink.

What they're looking for, we submit, is La Ina.

La Ina is Pedro Domecq's dry cocktail sherry, imported from Spain. It's the most popular dry sherry in the world.

Put a glass of La Ina into your guest's fist. It'll give him something to juggle while he's trying to light his wife's cigarette.

He'll even drink it.

And if you find the La Ina bottle empty before the party's over, it's your own fault.

LA INA

Take cast iron, white porcelain, black Teflon, Siamese teakwood and Irish hands...

And what have you got?

A work of art.

The Iron Age of Cooking is in its glory.

It's a revolution in cookware ... and the Irish started it.

If you ever cooked with iron, you know the marvels of it. It takes little heat, and cooks the food so gently and evenly that every bit of the flavor simmers in the pot.

But there used to be a catch. Or two.

1. It wasn't such a beauty.

2. What a pain it was to clean.

The Irish changed all that with Waterford Club Colorcast.

They sculpture each piece with great purity of line and enamel it with white porcelain. They add handles of Siamese teakwood. (That takes care of Catch No. 1.)

As for 2, the Irish have figured out how to apply black Teflon of such toughness, you can practically hit it with a shillelagh. Nothing sticks.

Born in the Emerald Isle, Waterford Club Colorcast is born to be loved.

DECORATOR'S DIARY

A solution for getting the house and its furnishings into clean, fresh condition for holiday entertaining

"Without question," said Margery Hazlitt, over the phone, "the latchstring is going to be out in this house this season." But in the timbre of her voice I detected something less than enthusiasm.

"You don't seem overjoyed."

"Overjoyed! I'm desperate. And that is why I called you. Just listen to this domestic social schedule: The chairman of the garden club has suddenly darted off to Jamaica, leaving me to take over the November meeting; the entire Hazlitt clan is due to show up for Thanksgiving dinner; Mandy has decided that nothing but social ostracism will befall her unless she gives a bridal shower for her best friend on December third; Bill keeps reminding me that we must put up the manager of his London office, who'll get here with his wife around the 15th; then there's Christmas, of course, and judging from Bobby's letters he's invited every exchange student at Yale to spend the holidays with us."

"Well, as long as I've known you, you've never had it any other way; what's new about this?"

"I'll tell you what's new. I've just taken a good look at my own house. It's only two years since we practically did the whole place over, but it suddenly seems so soiled and tired-looking I'm downright ashamed of it. The wall-to-wall carpeting is a sight. And heaven alone knows I work hard enough trying to keep things clean. A slave to the vacuum cleaner, that's me . . ."

"And it's a very good thing that you are," I broke in, "because regular vacuum cleaning gets rid of the gritty, tracked-in dirt that gets ground into your carpets and wears them out just as surely as spiked shoes do. Your big problem is air pollution."

"Air pollution! You forget we're air conditioned."

"Well, even so—you really can't quite prevent air-borne dirt—atmospheric soil, as the experts put it—the dust you're always wiping off mirrors and table tops and window sills—sometimes it's so fine you're not aware it's all around you unless you see it floating in a ray of sunshine. Dust motes, my grandmother called them, but since her day they've become sootier, greasier, and stickier, latching onto all our furnishings, but particularly onto the soft fabrics and carpets. Vacuuming alone simply won't remove this kind of soil."

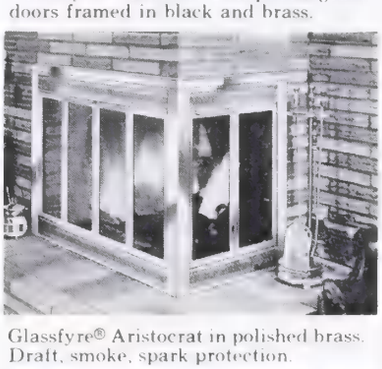
"But, I suppose you're going to tell me, shampooing will! I've got to work fast. I've already sent the draperies to the cleaner's. I can wash my windows, my curtains and my woodwork, but what about the upholstery and my precious heirloom Kirman and this 50 square miles of tacked-on carpet you encouraged me to install? Even if I had the time, I wouldn't think of ripping up my wall-to-wall, sending it off, and having to have it tacked back into place."

"Do calm yourself. Shampooing is, of course, the answer to your upholstery and carpeting cleaning. But it can be done at home."

"Oh, you're not telling me anything I don't know—the question is how will it be done? Nina Murray's carpeting was shampooed right on the floor. It looked clean for about a week, and then was almost as dull as it was to start with and harder than ever to clean. She said she thought the shampooers just scrubbed the dirt down to the carpet backing and made a hidden mud that started to show when the carpet was dry."

"And Nina could well have been right. Because lots of shampooing processes do exactly that. But the one I'm thinking of extracts the dirt from carpets and fabrics with an almost dry foam that draws dirt up so it can be sponged away. And if that sounds like every cleaning method you ever heard of, it isn't. The process is called Duraclean and only licensed, trained cleaners can do it. It's done at home in a few hours."

"And what about my Kirman?"



"The system works as well on Orientals and loose rugs as on wall-to-wall and upholstery. And if I were you, I'd hang up right now and call the licensed cleaner listed in the yellow pages." —M.G.

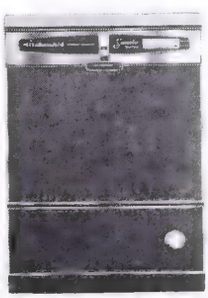
The dirty hand-washed dishes.



They may look clean. But hand-washing can't get rid of bacteria and contact-type germs like a KitchenAid dishwasher can.

You see, a KitchenAid doesn't only wash dishes. It sanitizes them, too.

Yes, sanitizes.

The final rinse water is preheated to a steaming 180° in KitchenAid Superba dishwashers which have an exclusive cycle called SaniCycle.

Water this hot destroys contact-type germs. And countless bacteria. (Water this hot would destroy your hands, too.)

Now, we don't make any wild health claims for SaniCycle.

But we do know every time you sanitize your dishes with SaniCycle, you're giving your family extra health protection. As well as really clean dishes.

happy ending Real coffee is hot, black, and served with exactly the right measure of sterling silver. With coffee spoons that don't dwindle down to diminuendo and slip through strong men's fingers. Little spoons that come on strong and solid. The way Lunt has always made them. Perfect in detail down to the last marvelous fillip of miniature-carving. In the same patterns as your Lunt sterling teaspoons and tablespoons, but with tiny, finicking differences in proportion only a superior silversmith could figure out. They make coffee taste better. (And you can prove it. Just pour the world's best espresso into a paper cup and approach it with a plastic spoon. See?) Lunt makes spoons for coffee lovers. And silver lovers. And silver lovers who are coffee lovers.

NOBODY EVER TELLS YOU THESE THINGS

—about food and drink

By HELEN McCULLY

From the kitchen of our food editor come helpful answers to some of the common but often puzzling questions in cookery

What are crudités? Crudité, from the French, means raw. Culinarily, les crudités means raw food. Especially, fresh vegetables —radishes, baby carrots and turnips, scallions, green pepper rings, thinly sliced zucchini, cucumber strips, tomatoes, etc.— that taste good served raw as hors d'oeuvre, with salt or mayonnaise.

What does brasserie mean? It's the French for brewery, brewhouse, or beershop. In modern terms a brasserie is a café or restaurant where sturdy foods, with all kinds of drinks—not only beer—are served. France is cluttered with them, the most famous being the Brasserie Lipp in Paris, familiar to many Americans. The first brasserie in the United States, which turned up in New York a few years ago, is open 24 hours a day, 365 days a year.

How much gelatin do you use to "gel" 2 cups of liquid? One envelope of unflavored gelatin. If sugar is one of the ingredients in the recipe, it should be counted as part of the total liquid because, when dissolved, it liquefies. Note: One cup of sugar dissolved equals one cup of liquid.

What's the difference between mix and blend in cooking? None. But with the advent of that remarkable piece of equipment, the electric blender, "blend" has become, to many cooks, synonymous with blender. For that reason, it would seem to make sense if all recipes specified "mix" to indicate combining two or more ingredients thoroughly.

Is there any way to prevent garlic from drying up? Yes. Separate the head into cloves, pop them into a jar, cover tightly, or tie securely in a freezer bag and freeze. Net: Fresh garlic when you need it.

How can you tell when grapes are fresh and ripe? Grapes, picked fully ripe and sweet, should be firmly attached to the stem—gentle shaking will tell the story. They should be fresh, plump, smooth, well colored, with no stickiness. White or green grapes are at their best in sweetness and flavor when they begin to turn amber. Grapes should be refrigerated and used as soon as possible after purchase. When grapes are used as a garnish, they are more attractive in little clusters on the stems.

Grapes are washed, if at all, just before using. In Europe, grapes are usually served with a crystal bowl filled with cool water, and you dip the grapes into the water before eating. It's not only an attractive idea but a sensible one.

What are the varieties of grapes and how are they used? Almost all table grapes are grown in California. The first to turn up in any difference between beet and cane sugar? None r. In Today's Food Market, published by Kansas State , it is noted: "Beet and cane sugar are identical in composition."

They add: "If the properly formulated, then a longer bake at a lower re ought to produce a crack-free surface."

For l, artichokes are in season from September through are at their peak from November through January.

The cedure works for other fabrics."

Music for the Celebration of Twelfth Night in the manner of Colonial Williamsburg

In Virginia, "Nothing is now heard in conversation, but the balls, the Fox-hunts, the fine entertainments, and the good fellowship, which are to be exhibited at the approaching Christmas." So wrote Philip Fithian in December, 1773, at the beginning of the holiday merriment that reached its climax on the evening of January 6th in the festivities of Twelfth Night.

Lavish house parties were the rule of the day, and even in a small house there would have been an enormous amount of food for this celebration. Lively music was played as the guests gathered and entered into spirited conversation.

Actual programs of music from Colonial Williamsburg are scarce. We do know that the music would have been very much like that of London in the same period. There is no record that either Bach or Mozart was performed in 18th-century Williamsburg, but as musical giants of the era, both are played now in candlelight concerts at the Governor's Palace.

Music before dinner on Twelfth Night might well have been that of the Italians who were greatly admired—Vivaldi, Corelli, Geminiani, or Torelli. This same music is available today, both recorded and in sheet form. Vivaldi's Concerto in C for harpsichord and strings is on Amadeo (S6100), his sonatas for cello and harpsichord, opus 14, are recorded on Harmonia 30638. Corelli's Concerti grossi, opus 6, may be heard on Vox VBX39, Epic LC3264, and Angel (S-36303); his Concerti grossi, opus 5, are on Everest 6163 (3163); and his Concerto grosso, number 8, known as the "Christmas Concerto," is on London 9275 (6206). Geminiani's Concerti grossi, opus 3, are on Dover 5209, Amadeo (S)6100, and CBS 32110004.

Torelli's Concerto for solo violin and guitar is recorded on Bach 5043; his Concerti grossi, opus 8, is on Epic LC-3217.

Johann Christian Bach, a German who settled in London, wrote a considerable amount of music familiar to the Colonial Virginians. His Concerti in D and G for harpsichord are on Bach 616 (5040), and Concerti for clavier may be heard on Harmonia 30512.

The harpsichord music of Scarlatti, Purcell, and Handel was well liked among the Colonial Virginians. Recordings include Epic LC3911 (BL 1311) and LC3898 (BC1298); Odyssey 32260007; Deutsche Grammophon Gesellschaft 39122 (139122), and Angel COLPH-310.

At the appointed hour, it is likely that everyone joined in a grand march to the dining room. This might have been done in the pompous splendor of a march by Henry Purcell, or to the more rousing music of Jeremiah Clarke, a prolific composer of that period.

Background music during the dinner, as we know it today, was quite uncommon, but afterwards, musicmaking was the main event. Colonial Virginians loved music. They played instruments, they sang, and they danced, often until the small hours of the morning.

The ladies usually played the spinet or harpsichord; gentlemen were more likely to play the violin, French horn, or flute. However, many other instruments were used, including the piano, organ, banjo, guitar, German flute, harmonica, barrel organ, bassoon, recorder, viola da gamba, clarionet, clavichord, drum, fife, pedal-harp, oboe, tabor, trumpet, viola and virginal.

After-dinner music likely would have begun with performances by a few persons, but later in the evening there would have been dancing and singing by everyone. Henry Purcell was a favorite composer, and today a vast amount of his music is available on recordings. A collection of Purcell's music may be heard on Nonesuch 1027 or (71027), including a sonata for trumpet and strings, pieces for harpsichord and incidental music for "The Virtuous Wife," and "The Gordian Knot Untied." Dido and Aeneas was popular in that period and is performed at Williamsburg today. It can be heard on a number of recordings, including Angel (S)36359, Oiseau 50216 (60047), and Odeon ALP-1026.

Handel was equally favored by the Colonial Virginians. While it is not likely that music from his oratorios would have been used, his songs, sonatas for recorders, and excerpts from operas were performed frequently. Handel's concertos for recorders and strings, along with those of Telemann and Vivaldi, may be heard on Mercury SR 90443. Sonata number 2 for flute, oboe, cello, and harpsichord is on Odeon (S)91063. Any of Handel's flute sonatas, and Concerti for oboe and flute are appropriate fare for an evening of 18th-century music.

The music of two other composers popular in the 18th Century has been recorded by Archive on ARC (7)3264: Thomas Arne's Concertos, numbers 4 and 5, and William Boyce's three symphonies in eight parts, numbers four, five, and eight.

Music from John Gay's "The Beggar's Opera" was well known in Colonial Virginia and could have been performed as part of the entertainment for Twelfth Night. It can be heard on London A-4245, and Everest 6127 (3127). It is quite possible that even a Buxtehude cantata might have been performed as the major entertainment of the evening.

THE festivities of Twelfth Night in Colonial Williamsburg could not have been complete without dancing. While the minuet was popular, it was not the slow, stodgy music we tend to associate with it. It was moving, quite in keeping with the tempo of the times in the bustling town. Dancing teachers, like music teachers, traveled from plantation to plantation, to teach a wide variety of dances. Even today it is easy to imagine the rustle of the ladies' silk and brocade dresses, and the courtly elegance of the men suited in satin as they danced the minuets, reels, country dances, jigs, and, toward the end of the century, the French quadrilles.

As the evening wore on, there would have been much singing. The songs might have been traditional or topical. Seasonal songs and hymns that could have been a part of the Twelfth Night music include the "Coventry Carol" ("Lully, lulla, thou little tiny child"), "O Come All Ye Faithful," "While Shepherds Watched," "The Holly and the Ivy," and "The Boar's Head Carol." These may be found in many anthologies and hymnals; for example, The Penguin Book of Christmas Carols, edited by Elizabeth Poston, and The Oxford Book of Carols.

VERY late in the evening, gentlemen left alone must have sung some of the more lusty drinking songs. Some of these are included in the book "Songs from a Colonial Tavern," a collection assembled by Tayler Vrooman and published in 1964 by Colonial Williamsburg. The arrangements are for medium voice and piano with chords for guitar. Mr. Vrooman performs many of these on Decca DL4546, a recording called "Songs from a Colonial Tavern."

This music of the 18th Century comes to life in an unusually exciting manner when it is performed today in the authentic settings at Colonial Williamsburg. There are regularly scheduled concerts at the Governor's Palace and at Bruton Parish Church, as well as impromptu performances in the taverns where lively folk ballads may be heard on occasion during the year.

Typical programming for one of today's candlelight concerts at the Palace or at Bruton Church might include Torelli's Concerto for orchestra; Handel's Concerto grosso in G Major, or his Sonata in g minor for viola and pianoforte; Bach's Cantata Cuopre tal volta il cielo for string quartet and bass, with continuo and baritone; Purcell's "Golden Sonata" (Sonata in F Major) for two violins, violoncello and pianoforte; or G.G. Ferrari's Sonata in C Major for harpsichord and pianoforte.

This year the programming at Colonial Williamsburg will focus on music the weekend of December 1-3, beginning on Friday with a candlelight concert in the elegant ballroom of the Governor's Palace, by musicians costumed in the manner of two centuries ago. On Saturday, strolling minstrels will entertain during luncheon, and in the evening there will be a concert by the College of William and Mary Choir. The activities Sunday will center around services at Bruton Parish Church. For complete information about this year's music weekend at Colonial Williamsburg, write to Mary R. Thompson, Box B, Williamsburg, Virginia 23185. ■

THE ART OF SCRIMSHAW

. . . developed on the rolling ships of old New Bedford has almost disappeared. Only a few men still follow in the footsteps of the seamen who painstakingly and with great delicacy engraved the ivory from the whales they captured.

The decoration is an old whaling ship. Mountings are heavily gold-plated. A museum-quality gift, boxed with short history of scrimshaw.

This Woman Is Slimming Her Waistline-

By Blowing Out the Candles On an Imaginary Cake!

OVER 100,000 COPIES ALREADY SOLD!
Why such run-away sales? BECAUSE IT WORKS
Read the thrilling details on this page!
Try it—entirely at our risk!

he will perform this ingenious EFFORTLESS EXERCISE for inute— no longer—and from that moment on she will stand hter, and look slimmer and younger than she had in years.

difference in her appearance will be al- xactly as if she had gone on a strict diet to two weeks—but she will have accom- the same slim waistline in seconds.

then she will go on, to attack the pre- wrinkles that make her look years older er calendar age—by concentrating this ot on her face but her feet.

vill learn how to float the upper part of ly in air—so that it actually feels weight- that she can work or play all day with lf the energy requirement (and only half dness) that she felt before.

then she will loosen and strengthen the wer area of her back—and for the first her life "iron out" those ridgy washboard highs that no other exercise could ever all by doing nothing more than perform- simple gesture for one additional minute HER ANKLE.

rhaps the Easiest Exercises Ever ed, They Will Give You a New Face a New Figure If You Give Them Triumphant Minutes Every Day!

repeat again, in five minutes this woman ive given herself ■ beauty treatment far effective than the most expensive beauty in the world. And it will have cost her g.

no external treatment ever invented could ve her the thrilling new energy and day- sistance to weariness and fatigue that she in in these five minutes.

can it be done? As simply as this: woman is a pupil in perhaps the most fas- g look-younger, feel-better program ever ed. Over twenty classes teach this pro- n the city of Chicago alone. Over 100,000 have already bought this program, in book o use in the privacy of their own homes.

ns of doctors have already recommended gram to their own patients for the health alone: to give these people desperately- sleep without tranquilizers or drugs...to rengthen torturous backs...to bring back ural energy drive and vigor that these men omen may have thought they had lost name of this wonder-working program is DYNAMICS. In essence, it is a series of FFORTLESS EXERCISES – designed to the natural strength and beauty of both ce and figure.

now available to every woman who is will- gamble a five-cent stamp—no more—and a veekend of her time to prove its incredible in her own home.

is what the first weekend alone will give you. It starts with the most vital beauty-restorer of all—sleep.

The Way Most Women Sleep Ruins Their Faces By Age Thirty. Here's How a Simple Shift in Your Sleeping Posture Will Take Years Off The Appearance Of Your Face and Neck.

The book starts by reminding you of an inescapable fact:

Most women's beauty is destroyed – not as much by age or dirt or exposure to weather—but by the way their face and neck are squeezed up into a wrinkled ball when they fight themselves to sleep every night.

Yes, for seven or eight hours every night, the way you sleep presses wrinkles into your face—makes you seem years older than you have any need to look, once you have been taught the RIGHT way to sleep.

Therefore, the very first thing this amazing BODY DYNAMICS program does for you is this: It teaches you a simple three-minute ritual that transforms sleep from a beauty-destroyer to a beauty treatment.

This ritual is composed of two steps. The first step shows you how to send automatic "Sleep Signals" to your mind, your back and your heart —so that you simply turn off disturbing tensions, and let your body get ready to float effortlessly into deep sleep.

The second step arranges the parts of your body ■ new way in your bed. So that your body sinks so deeply into your mattress that sleep must come. So that the small of your back is completely unburdened at last. So that there is not a single pressure on any nerve center in your entire body.

And—most important of all—so that now your head is perfectly aligned on your pillow—with the neck muscles relaxed and yet strengthened...the chin completely uplifted...every inch of the skin of your face smoothed and glowing and toned. ...The entire face, neck and chin being given an eight-hour beauty treatment.

You will learn this simple ritual the very first evening you pick up this book. You will wake up the next morning more refreshed than you have known in years. And you may gasp in joy at the new youth you see in your face in the mirror that very same morning.

But this is only the first gift you receive from this amazing book. Here are just ■ few of the others:

Your Own Breath is the Best Streamliner— If You Use it This Way

On page 62, for example, you're shown an Effortless Exercise that causes you to breathe a new way—and that forces those protruding hips and abdomen of yours to draw themselves in, automatically.

On page 45, another Effortless Exercise teaches you to walk like a queen, instantly. Use this technique to draw admiring glances to yourself, from the very first moment you walk into a new room.

Page 54 is sheer gold. Because it gives you another Effortless Exercise that takes the continual ache out of your lower spine from the very first day you try it. You'll be astounded at the thrilling new freedom for working, playing, bowling, golfing, dancing, living that this simple "unlocking" motion gives you.

And page 57 puts to work your Built-In Posture-Corrector to help you get rid of this sway-back, hollow-chest, slumped over shoulders that have plagued you for years. And, at exactly the same time...

Your Body's Built-in Relaxers and Strengtheners Are Now Put to Work for You for the First Time

For example—

On page 33 you discover a six-second motion with your mouth, that instantly relaxes the overtense muscles of your chest, heart and solar plexus – and drains hyper-tension out of your body like water running from ■ sieve.

On page 69 you discover how to turn the everyday movements of life into complete exercises by themselves. So that every time you sit, or stand, or reach out to pick up an object, you are effortlessly exercising and streamlining your body—keeping yourself in top condition without even realizing it.

On page 113 you use, for the first time, your body's own built-in vibrator—that has you bursting with energy every morning in seconds...that calms you down after a full day's work—in two or three thrilling minutes—and gives you a new spurt of vitality for the evening's fun.

A Final Word of Warning

All these, and much more, are contained in Gertrude Enclow's revolutionary new Body Dynamics—yours to read from cover to cover without risking ■ penny.

Two words of caution must be added, however:

1) It is a short book. It has only 128 pages in all. If you are ■ fast reader, you can finish it in ■ single weekend. Do not, therefore, expect ■ huge weighty tome, full of useless theory. Every page of this book is packed with practical, step-by-step direction, that you can use immediately to give you the strength and health and beauty that are locked up inside your body today.

2) And most important of all—do not be misled by the ease and simplicity of the movement given you in this book! Since most of them can be performed sitting down or lying in bed...since most of them have been mastered by men and women as much as ninety years of age...since none of them even cause you to "work up ■ sweat"—you may think for the first day or two that they can not really be doing you that much good.

HERE ARE 70 COATS OF ARMS LISTED HERE...

THERE ARE OVER 500,000 MORE COATS OF ARMS IN THE ARCHIVES OF SANSON INSTITUTE

D HOW THE SANSON INSTITUTE HAS PRESERVED RECORDS FROM OVER 20 EUROPEAN COUNTRIES

860, Mr. William Hubert Seddon of Sheffield, England began a library of coats This collection of books, written in the mediaeval language of the "Heralds", ght to the United States and from this collection the archives of the Sanson of Heraldry in Boston was begun. Representatives of the Sanson Institute tantly searching for still older sources and additional reference volumes in revive interest in the art of heraldry and its meanings. A trip to Holland, a nd in Brittany, ■ visit to a small village library in southern Italy . . . all have ed to the compilation of what is recognized as one of the most complete libraries in existence. The Sanson Institute research staff has been trained to carefully and correctly the mediaeval heraldic language and to interpret cally the meanings and descriptions of these Coats of Arms. Modern techno- dvances were called upon to execute the monumental task of attaining the ability to research, draw, and catalogue over 500,000 names and Coats of Arms, as well as their interpretations and reference sources. Many of our reference books are centuries old (some dating back as far as the 1600's). The Sanson Institute, through its knowledge of heraldic practices can determine by accepted formulae ■ coat of arms applicable to ■ surname exactly the same as yours or an older form of that surname from which your present name may have emerged. Utilizing their highly skilled and specialized personnel to give meaning to the knowledge which has come down from the Middle Ages, the Sanson Institute can now offer you a most decorative and colorful coat of arms which was earlier granted to a distinguished person whose surname was the same as, or an earlier form of, your family name . . . a replica of an antique that will be ■ welcome addition and conversation piece in every home.

IT'S FREE FROM BARWICK.

A book which takes all the confusion out of buying carpet. Once you read it, you can march fearlessly into any carpet store and know just what to look for. (And what to steer clear of.) You'll learn which are best for your own particular needs. You'll know one texture from another. You'll have a good idea how much money you'll be spending. Or how little. And—you'll have a whole batch of fresh new decorating ideas.

This valuable book comes from the Barwick Carpet people. Naturally. Who else makes so many different kinds of carpet. And puts so much research behind each one. For example, the carpet pictured above is Private Party from Barwick's famous Acrilan® collection. Acrilan acrylic fibers make a carpet a lot more than just beautiful. You can count on its being easy to clean and extra long-lasting. Read all about it—and lots more. And then—what you don't know about carpet won't matter.

The Skinny_____. Is it a blanket or a coverlet?

A lot of people aren't quite sure.

It looks like a coverlet, but it's really the inny Blanket.

That's what causes the confusion. The inny Blanket isn't fluffy so there isn't any fluff to oud the print. The pattern comes up clean and sp. It's as bold and colorful as overlet. So a lot of people use hat way, too.

For just that reason, we t a delicate fringe on the beau- ul new prints in our new Heri- ge Collection.

The one shown here is e Western Heritage. It com- nes quaint Spanish haciendas th rolling stage coaches and gged covered wagons to relive e days of America's spirited ove west.

Federal Heritage blends rring American eagles and deral shields to portray the gor of a young country starting grow.

New England Heritage ntrasts the simplicity of sturdy ltboxes with hearty revolutionary emes recalling the birth of a great tion.

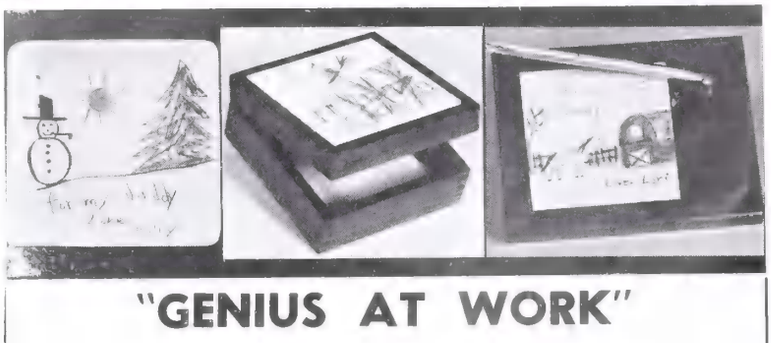
Southern Heritage takes us ck to the days of gracious ante- llum plantations with pretty belles surrounded by garlands of cotton blossoms and magnolia.

You wouldn't want to hide a blanket like this under a bedspread. And you don't have to.

The Skinny Blanket, whether it's one of the Heritage Collection or one of our seven lively solid colors, is made by Chatham's unique Fiberwoven® process. A new way of making a blanket that makes it just as warm and snug as any ordinary blanket but without the fat, the fluff, and the problems.

As a result, the Skinny Blanket only shrinks slightly, even after 50 washings. It won't shed or pill all over the place like ordinary blankets either. You can wash it and wash it and it won't lose the rich, vibrant print it starts out with. And you won't have to watch it go to pieces in little balls of fluff under your bed.

All this doesn't really clear up the question of whether to call it a blanket or a coverlet. But it should clear up the question of what to put on your bed.



The Heritage Skinny Blanket, both a coverlet and a blanket from $14.98*. Other Skinny Blankets start at $8.98*. And they all carry the Good Housekeeping Seal.

Chatham. We're the only ones who make the Fiberwoven Skinny_____.

FURNITURE CRAFTSMEN SINCE 1865

Ozite introduces the soft, warm, quiet, easy-to-install tile that never needs waxing or polishing...because it's carpet!

We took a cold, hard look at tile . . . and decided it was cold and hard. (Ask any youngster who's bumped his noggin on it, or found it too cold to play on. Or ask any woman who's spent hours getting heel marks out of it before she spends more time putting wax on it.)

So when something is cold and hard the trick is to make it soft and warm. And if it's quiet and better looking in the bargain, so much the better. This is new Ozite Carpet Tile made of Vectra fiber . . . the best idea in floor covering since outdoor-indoor carpet. And we invented that, too!

Ozite Carpet Tiles are 12-inch squares of long-wearing Ozite Carpet, with soft rubber back for extra plushness. Amazing Vectra fiber resists stains from food, drink, even household chemicals.

Ozite Carpet Tiles bring new warmth, comfort and quie the kitchen, bath, rec-room, nursery. So easy to keep fr and new—just vacuum clean.

And, they are easy to install. Just spread on Ozite adhes with a paint brush . . . then lay the tiles in place. You can it in minutes, and it's virtually mistake-proof!

Choose from 16 exciting colors: about 79¢ a square foot colors also available in broadloom widths.

Where would you use Ozite Carpet Tiles made of Ve fiber? "Use your imagination!"

"Please take care of my sister..."

TAICHUNG, FORMOSA—Two-year-old Su Ying, her parents dead, waits for her brother who will never return.

Little Su Ying was abandoned in the alley behind our Babies' Home in Formosa. She was frightened, cold and hungry.

But as you can see in the picture, someone had tried to make her look pretty. Her hair was combed and her dress, even though torn, was clean.

In her hand she clutched a note written by her brother:

"Please take care of my sister. Our parents are dead for many weeks. I am twelve and can no longer find food for this small sister. To my ears came news of your House, so I bring Su Ying to you."

Will you help us give Su Ying —and youngsters equally as needy —a chance to grow up in an atmosphere of love?

For only $12 a month you can sponsor such a child and receive his or her photograph, personal history, and the opportunity to write letters.

Your child will know who you are and will answer your letters. Correspondence is translated at our overseas offices.

(And if you want your child to have a special gift—a pair of shoes, a warm jacket, a fuzzy bear —you can send your check to our office, and the entire amount will be forwarded, along with your instructions.)

Since 1938, thousands of American sponsors have found this to be an intimate, person-to-person way of sharing their blessings with youngsters around the world.

And your help is desperately needed. Overseas, our staff reports boys and girls still search garbage dumps for food . . . babies abandoned in the streets . . . blind children locked in cellars . . .

Little Su Ying and children like her need your love. Won't you help? Today? Thank you.

Remedios Guanzon. Father dead. Mother blind.

REMEDIOS GUANZON, FILIPINA, AGE 5. Father dead. TB. Mother blind. Earns a few pennies begging. Brother is a scavenger. Remedios guides blind mother's hands to spots on clothes that require particular scrubbing. Family lives in one small room. Must crawl through small opening to enter. Walls from material found at city dump. No facilities. Help to Remedios means help to entire family.

Thousands of children as needy as Remedios anxiously await "adoption" by you or your group. Choose a boy or girl from Greece, South Korea, Viet Nam, Hong Kong, the Philippines, Colombia, Ecuador or Peru. Your child and his family receive a monthly cash grant, as well as counselling, medical care, blankets, household equipment, clothing—and primary school education. You receive a case history and photograph. Each month you write and receive a letter (original and translation). Learn how your "adoption" benefits the entire family. Soon, through the regular letters and progress reports, you and your child develop a warm, loving relationship.

CHECK YOUR CHARITY! We eagerly offer our financial statement upon request because we are so proud of the handling of our funds.

PLAN is a non-political, non-profit, non-sectarian, independent relief organization, approved by the United States Government, registered under No. VFA019 with the Advisory Committee on Voluntary Foreign Aid of the Agency for International Development and filed with the National Better Business Bureau in New York City.

AMAZE YOURSELF, YOUR FRIENDS

THE HARTLEY COURSE IN OIL PAINTING GUARANTEES YOU WILL PAINT PICTURES SKILLFULLY . . . OR YOU PAY NOTHING!

Here at last is a complete step-by-step learn-at-home course in oil painting especially designed for beginners by famous artist, Paul Hartley. The Hartley Course starts you painting canvases right away and in 24 days or less you may do oil paintings you'll be proud to hang or give as gifts. You don't need talent—just the desire to paint!

NOTHING ELSE LIKE IT!

This is NOT just a book—or "paint-by-numbers" game—but a home instruction course that uses methods proven at Paul Hartley's school where men and women with little or no "talent" discovered the satisfying thrill of oil painting in just days.

HOW TO PAINT IN OILS—EVEN IF YOU "CAN'T DRAW A STRAIGHT LINE"

Here's how the Course works. You turn to the first of its 24 large illustrative plates . . . and to Lesson One in Instruction Book #1 (there are three) which deals with the first plate. Follow directions on which brush to use, how to hold it, how to paint darks, lights, middle-tones, etc. . . . When you're through with Lesson One, you'll be able to achieve—on your own canvas and in your own style—the painting shown in that first illustration. Then you go to the next illustrations and the next lessons.

A REWARDING SPARE TIME HOBBY

You can take as much time as you like to complete the Course. But even if you just spend a couple of hours a day on it, you'll be a real painter in as few as 24 days! The combination of pictorial illustration and step-by-step instruction is swift and easy—gives you everything you need to know to create each effect—how to mix and apply colors, use perspective, get shadows and reflections, etc. Everything you need to know is told you simply and clearly—just as if Paul Hartley himself were standing at your elbow every moment, coaching you.

UNCONDITIONAL GUARANTEE

No if's, and's or but's—you must be painting in oils within 24 days, or send the Course back and pay nothing! Mail the coupon below to start you off right on the world's most enjoyable and satisfying hobby. You get a set of full-color and monochrome illustrations—plus instruction manuals that tell you what to do from the first brush strokes to the completely finished painting!

The full cost of the complete HARTLEY COURSE is only $29.95 and you can pay this in three easy installments. SEND NO MONEY NOW: you'll be billed for the Course, plus a small handling and shipping charge. Moreover, under our Unconditional Guarantee, even after the invoice is paid, if you are still not completely delighted with the Course . . . if you are not skillfully painting in 24 days as we have promised . . . you may return the Course for full refund.

PORTRAITS IN OIL

"EVERY PAINTING A MASTERPIECE"

● Magnificently painted on canvas from old or new photos, by outstanding European and American artists. A superb living likeness in full color is executed in rich oils.

● 12 portrait painters to choose from

Van Dyke Oil Portraits from photographs, are indistinguishable from those done from life. It is of special advantage to those who are not available for personal sittings. All that our artists require (besides the photograph), to create a superb living likeness is a description of the color of the subject's hair, eyes, complexion.

No longer need you envy those fortunate enough to own a family portrait . . . you, too, can now own one. Like them you can see immortalized, for all time, the loved and never ageing personality of your wife, husband, children, parents, grandma or grandad, each faithfully captured at a particular moment of their lives.

Van Dyke Oil Portraits are TRUE WORKS OF ART, painted from your photograph and not on top of an enlargement of your photo as is the method of other commercial portrait services. The latter commercial method has a life span of about two years, while our genuine PORTRAITS IN OIL will last for many centuries.

AN ORIGINAL BY Heth

IF HE COULD TALK . . . This old sea dog would tell of whaling ships and bygone days, he'd recall four masted schooners, probably oyster pirates too. The artist carefully duplicated early woodcarvers styling even adding the touch of many years.
Six inches tall, hand cast in sculptured stone, and magnificently finished the color of old sea worn wood.

the honey-bulb

For years drips have out-maneuvered fingers, spoons, and under-dishes. They have drooled, dribbled, and dropped on linen, laps, and laces. Now, something new: A pear-shaped bulb through which heavy honey and sticky syrups flow freely and cleanly. Just press down the thumb and up comes the plumb; when the plumb-rod drops, the flowing stops.

The Honey-Bulb doesn't drip, it emits. And it's so simple it works.

A complimentary jar of Orange Blossom honey accompanies your order.

ADDRESS BOOK

By EPSIE KINARD

Who in your little black book is sufficiently skilled in the Oriental arts to restore a valuable 19th-century Coromandel screen, badly faded and with one panel cracked, a Portsmouth, Ohio reader asks.

The House of Screens, 1709 Second Avenue, New York City, designers and makers of traditional and modern screens, is on record for its successful restoration of one of the world's finest Coromandels. Sent to these specialists with a rotting frame, lacquer falling off, and some major landscape decorations barely visible, the screen's restoration involved the renewal of teakwood, many coats of lacquer, and artist-trained retouching.

This house also recovers, relines, and redecorates antique screens and will hunt down a rare fabric or paper that might be needed. Their rejuvenation treatment is applied with equal artistry to Oriental and 18th-century Spanish, Italian, English, or French antique screens. To get an idea of the scope and cost of restorations, write stating your problem.

I have a priceless letter written by Abraham Lincoln in his own handwriting which I'd like to display in our library, a St. Louis, Missouri reader writes. Is there anyone who could create an American environment for it?

Such is the specialty of The Picture Decorator, Inc., 740 Madison Avenue, New York City, whose clients include many private collectors of Lincolniana. A meaningful picture, made for one collector, hung on the wall of his studio when I visited it. Built around a military appointment signed by Lincoln in 1864, the famous document shared a gold-bevelled platform with an incised steel engraving of the Great Emancipator, mounted on green velvet, in a gold-leaf frame.

Valuable letters, memorable lines of verse penned by famous poets, old whaling maps, and Early American prints come into The Picture Decorator as crumpled relics, but they go out as vivid impressions of historical periods. Write for an estimate.

Where can I have down-filled pillows made to measure so my beds will have a decorator look when the covers are pulled over them, a Dallas, Texas reader writes.

The Norman Dine Sleep Center at Wuensch-East Orange, 33 Halsted St., East Orange, New Jersey, makes custom-size down pillows for twin, double, queen, and king-size beds which are measured to the width of the bed. Because pillows are made in pairs (except for twin-size beds), they are neater and more flexible for sleeping comfort than a bolster. These pillows are covered with a choice of linen-finished ticking or satin, with down-proof lining. Write for estimate.

Where do you find Early American wallpaper printed with tiny sprigs and other designs to use to line hutchbacks, armoires, drawers, and antique trunks, a reader of Hyattsville, Maryland asks.

Produced by F. Schumacher & Co. and available at wallpaper and department stores are many 19th-century wallpapers which are as authentic as documentary fabrics. Among these are "Old Stonehouse," a lacy print taken from an early wallpaper: and historic "Calico," a Newport Restoration print in a color choice of sprigs and flowers on an off-white background.

The Address Book recommends products and services only after thorough investigation, but due to the special nature of much of the work and the uncertainties of transportation of fragile objects, HOUSE BEAUTIFUL cannot be responsible for, or guarantee, the results of the work.

At the Buffet de Gare, you may anticipate such fare du pays as snails Bourguignon, sausage with Chablis, coq au Pommard, a local bouillabaisse of fresh fish called pauchouse, quenelles de brochet (the world's most whisper-light fishcakes, made of pike), and wines grown hereabouts with familiarly illustrious names like Gevrey-Chambertin, Romanée-Conti, Pommard, Richebourg, Clos de Vougeot. Next morning at 10:23, take Train 25 to Lyon, now indisputable capital of Burgundian cuisine, arriving at 12:02, in time for a leisurely luncheon at the station until the 5:14 P.M. departure to Avignon of "Le Mistral."

Editor's note: Lyon is a sort of convergence point for all great French food and drink, from the truffles of Périgord and pâté de foie gras to the plumpest of chicken and the freshest of freshwater fish, all deluged, in a manner of speaking, with the wines of Burgundy and the Rhône Valley, fresh fruits included. A few hours' stopover in Lyon would also provide a choice of a luncheon experience at a renowned city restaurant such as Chez la Mère Filioux, Mère Brazier, Mère Guy (very, very special) or Morateur where concentration is on local charcûterie, and quenelles, another incredible version of the fishcake. You might also—but take care to book in advance—drive 15 miles south to the town of Vienne and La Pyramide, considered by many the best restaurant in the world, available to you, your palate, and your checkbook any day but Tuesday. However, the Buffet de Gare would be kinder to your time schedule and your budget.

"Le Mistral" arrives in Avignon at 7:11 P.M.—time to nip into the station restaurant for an evening meal. Avignon, which was the medieval citadel of the Popes who started the making of the area wine, Châteauneuf-du-Pape, also introduces you gently to Southern French cuisine. If you're lucky enough to get a reservation for the night at Le Prieuré, across the Rhône in Villeneuve-les-Avignon, you will find yourself on the premises of another noteworthy restaurant, all in the garden ambience of an old priory.

On the morrow, take the 2:18 P.M. train for Marseille, arriving at 6:35 P.M., the apéritif hour, which hereabouts features vermouth cassis, while dining volves about bouillabaisse, gouste, fennel-grilled fish, the garlic and black olives Provence. EVERY TIME WE MAKE A BOTTLE OF CAROUSEL, WE LOSE A BOTTLE OF CHAMPAGNE.

That's the price we pay for making Carousel Wine with champagne grapes.
The more champagne grapes we put in our wine, the less champagne grapes we have left for our champagne.
But we figure this wine is worth losing a little champagne over.
Carousel Red is a delectable medium dry table wine.
Carousel Pink is pleasingly (but moderately) sweet.
And Carousel White is just plain fruity.
In fact, all three Carousel Wines have a sort of heavenly champagne grape taste.

The House that LOVES COMPANY

With Thanksgiving and Christmas and New Year's and all the gala visits orbiting near, we have gathered up for this issue a spate of houses that patently love company: three historical American houses in which House Beautiful has dressed the rooms and set the tables for appropriately great occasions (with furnishings, vintage '67); several contemporary houses, searched out, which, by their expansive architecture and cordial furnishings, make them particularly hospitable. We have chosen those chapters from Dorothy Rodgers' forthcoming book, The House in My Head, wherein this surpassing hostess discusses her theories, plans, and regimens for entertaining. We have photographed three handsome and capable kitchens that are expressly engineered for Company-As-Usual and included a treatise on that treasure in the larder, a ham. We begin with a collation of the new and beautiful silver, china, and crystal . . . designed to shed its sparkling ambience of hospitality. The House That Loves Company is ready for it.

Cordials and Liqueurs

MOST LUXURIOUS OF DRINKS

By ROY ANDRIES DE GROOT, author of "Feasts for All Seasons"

> "'Drink this, my friend, and you will never forget it!' Then, drop by drop, with the minute care of a lapidary counting pearls, the priest . . . poured into the glass a green liqueur, gilded, warm, scintillating, exquisite. The first sip bathed my stomach in sunshine. 'It is the elixir of Père Gaucher,' he said, triumphantly. 'They make it at the monastery of the Prémontrés. . . .'"

Thus the great French writer, Alphonse Daudet, begins his famous short story, which tells how a poverty-stricken small monastery in the South of France quickly achieved wealth and world fame after one of its young monks had succeeded in re-creating from an old family recipe an alcoholic cordial distilled from the aromatic herbs growing on the local hillsides. Daudet's details are obviously fictional, but the underlying theme is true. Some of the greatest liqueurs were invented by monks and are still made from secret recipes in distilleries controlled by church organizations. These herbs and spice cordials and the fruit liqueurs are among the strongest and sweetest, the most luxurious and velvety, the most extravagantly colorful and irresistibly complex of spiritous drinks.

Is there a difference between a "cordial" and a "liqueur"? Some experts say that the word "cordial" properly belongs to the ancient herbal drinks, originally made not for pleasure drinking, but as medicines and pick-me-ups for ailing monks. The Oxford dictionary defines "cordial" as a medicine, or beverage which invigorates the heart and stimulates the circulation. Later, when commercial producers began concocting fantastic essences of fruits and flowers, more for the pleasure than the health of the drinker, these were called "liqueurs."

There are right and wrong times, and ways, to serve cordials and liqueurs. A sweet drink should obviously not be served immediately before a main meal. Even after dinner, if served too soon, a very sweet liqueur can bring an uncomfortable feeling of oversaturation. Better, at that point, to serve a dry Cognac. This general rule, of course, is flexible, since some liqueurs are drier and lighter than others.

One ideal use, I think, is for the guest who drops in (or is invited in) for a short visit. "Cordial and Cake" is ideal for mid-afternoon. Another charming invitational variation is to say: "Come in tonight at nine for coffee and cordials." After a formal dinner, the strategic moment at which to bring out the liqueurs is often an hour or two after the meal, when the guests are showing the first signs of being "talked out." The liqueurs can re-spark the party with their brilliant range of colors and festive ambience. (Continued on page 317)

GREAT CELEBRATIONS
in historic American houses

Nostalgically, we evoke three major feast days of Early America—Thanksgiving, Christmas, and Twelfth Night—then, as now, days that lit up the calendar like golden beacons on a wintry night. The following ten pages reenact these celebrations, with all the season's timeless garniture, in three grand old houses wrapped in history, surprisingly furnished in modern simulations of furniture their early owners might have cherished, made by H.T. Cushman Mfg. Co., Pennsylvania House, and Kittinger.

Thanksgiving in Ipswich ...CIRCA 1640

Spice-scented, welcoming warmth—the harvest festival brightly burnished in the John Whipple House in Ipswich, Mass., 20 years after the first Thanksgiving Day. For this one occasion, it is furnished in reproductions of Early American oak from the Stone House Collection of H. T. Cushman Mfg. Corp., a division of General Interiors.

The firelit oak dropleaf, below, decked for the great feast, a velvet-tied sheaf of cinnamon at each place. Compatible, although they span two centuries of design—ladderback chairs, a Windsor, a wing, an oak fireside bench of Jacobean ancestry, and a serving cart on casters (also shown lower left, opposite). Antique accessories are pewter, iron, and crockery.

The holiday guestroom, opposite, fragrant with the nostalgic Thanksgiving pungence of chrysanthemum and clove-sweet pomander balls, offers the sheltering comfort of a four-poster dressed in crewel, a birdcage tilt table set for breakfast, and a just-large-enough bachelor chest. All are oak. Rug and accessories are antique. Details of furnishings on page 50.

Christmas in New Hope... CIRCA 1735

History, legend, and genial ghosts of Christmas Past surround London Purchase Farm in New Hope, Pa., setting of the yuletide scenes on these four pages. Lately the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Welling, this massive-walled fieldstone manor house is said to have been Revolutionary headquarters for Colonel Henry Knox: Washington may well have been a visitor on the Christmas of 1777, before he crossed the Delaware.

The old house, left, was begun in 1735. Something of the patina of that prosperous time is captured here, with present-day cherrywood furniture reflecting the native American version of Queen Anne design for which Philadelphia cabinetmakers were well known. All major pieces are from the American Cherry Collection, made by Pennsylvania House, a division of General Interiors.

Holly, ivy, box, and bay, traditional Christmas greens such as early householders gathered from their own lands, deck these particular halls, the simplest of satin-tied box wreaths hung at windows (left). In the old custom, candles—now chunky modern ones, garnished with nuts and fruits—shine out through the night during the whole season.

Christmas Eve, in the parlor, opposite, presumes that all bustle is over, save for a last-minute gift wrap, with no more to do than to savor the peace of a lovely room in fireglow, chairs and sofa ready for relaxation, the future-heirloom highboy in holiday polish. In this last quiet moment before the gifts are given, the air is redolent of laurel and balsam. The tree—our own forgivable anachronism—is hung with glitter balls, candy canes, festoons of cranberries. (Continued overleaf)

Christmas in New Hope...

Merry Christmas dinner at London Purchase Farm, above, and the family —bibbed high-chair member included— gathers around a cherry drop-leaf table glittering with the household's festive treasures. All looks as it might have looked when Washington and Hamilton took their supper there. Woodwork, floors and atmosphere are certainly the same. Antique high chair excepted, the furniture is modern reproduction, as nostalgically 18th-century as the laurel rope festoons on the old stairway and the mistletoe kissing ball hanging at the window.

A sugarplum-tree centerpiece, shown in detail opposite, blossoms with barley sugar flower clusters, its twiggy branches rising from a bed of rock candy that glistens deliciously, like white ice.

Early-morning coffee, left, before the old tiled fireplace in the master bedroom, is served in modern Lowestoft. Well-laden stockings and a tree of boxwood sprigs and lollipops invite the children to a small and precious celebration in Mother's room before the big day's merrymaking starts.

Twelfth Night in Williamsburg... CIRCA 178

In Colonial Williamsburg, the restored Robert Nicolson House, left, is furbished and firelit for a musical "rout" on Twelfth Night—surely not for the first time, for its 18th-century owner was a genial host, and Twelfth Night was the gala finale to the rollicking Christmas season, much like our New Year's Open House. All the furnishings are authorized Colonial Williamsburg reproductions, the mahogany furniture made by Kittinger, a division of General Interiors.

In the music room, opposite, there would be singing around the harpsichord and dancing on the waxed deal floor (the Turkey rug rolled back). There would be syllabubs and jellies, and cakes eaten in the hand, good Madeira for the gentlemen and topical talk before the corner fire place. Without doubt there would be hand done needlepoint on the mahogany Queen Anne chairs and bench, and on the hand kerchief drop table a bunching of drie flowers, all just as pertinent to an "Ope House" today, all availably reproduced even to the colors of the wall paint.

The sound of music came from th harpsichord, fiddle, and such exquisitel made imported instruments as the 17th century Venetian guitar, or chitarra ba tente, below. This, as well as the pewte silver, brass, and porcelain was loane from the Colonial Williamsburg Collectio

Twelfth Night in Williamsburg...

The company's pleasure in the living room is conversation around the punch bowl, opposite, in the fragrant glow of bayberry candlelight. On the mantle, a seasonal trophy of pine cones, apples, and magnolia leaves, crowned with a pineapple, symbol of hospitality. The sofa's prototype is Chippendale; the mahogany armchair and the game table that holds the punch bowl are Queen Anne. Like all Colonial Williamsburg reproductions, they are faithful copies of choice originals.

A slant-top desk, left, harks back to a New England cabinetmaker influenced by Chippendale. The wallpaper, a document by Katzenbach and Warren, is a pattern of lacy stripes and mauve-tinged mallow flowers, copying an English-made original found in an 18th-century Polish castle.

His Lordship's chair, below and opposite, by now an American classic, is a high-back Hepplewhite, sometimes called a Martha Washington chair. Gaming guests are provided with a set of checkers, laid on an American Chippendale card table.

OPEN HOUSE WITH CLOISTERED PRIVACY

Inspired by a Pompeian villa, this California home was designed for contemporary entertaining, and rises on the site of an outworn family residence

By JAMES DE LONG

Once there was a family of five who lived in a big house on a quiet, curving hillside street in the university town of Berkeley. It was full of useful nooks and crannies and the gabled charms of a golden past. But the three daughters grew, and one day the nice old house turned into a burden ("suddenly it became just four stories of repairs and housework") and could no longer meet the demands of changing times and an entertaining, indoor-outdoor way of life. What then? The site, with its serene view of the Berkeley Hills and a tree-filtered glimpse of San Francisco Bay, was irreplaceable. And besides, there was this tennis court. . . .

So the family decided to stay where they had always been. But in order to live happily ever after, they had to take down the old house and build anew. With this thought, and a picture of a house from the days of Pompeii that suggested the simple, open-aired kind of living that they wanted to express, they went to Architect Joseph Esherick. He met their needs through inspiration, rather than imitation, and produced this stately, unembellished residence that handsomely fulfills their keynote requirement: gracious, easy entertaining at any scale, and in any season—sit-down dinners for a few, round-robin tennis tourneys for 30, house-and-lawn galas for a hundred. More

The soaring, colonnaded loggia, left, comes forward to the broad entrance steps to welcome guests, and is flanked by fences of wood-framed, plastered panels that screen the busy interior activities from the street. The close-barred, wrought-iron gates secure the entrance, but do not visually interrupt the long line of sight down the colonnade and through the house to the view beyond. The garage, above, is below street level, and supports a private wood sunning deck next to loggia.

The airy, elegant volume of the high drawing room, at left, is enhanced by tall, transomed glass doors that swing out onto the wood-decked balcony. The doors on the west wall, to the left in the photograph, are provided with solid wood shutters to block the afternoon sun. The oak parquet floor is patterned into four-foot squares by teak divider strips to underscore the spacious proportions of the room. A potpourri of furnishings and accessories of various origins is brought together with a consummate sense of scale and rightness for the room. The cane-seat chair in the foreground is 18th-century Florentine; the walnut-and-black leather sofa is early 19th-century Venetian; the brass-and-glass coffee table is 20th-century Andrew Delfino; the desk in front of the window is French; and the tall cabinet against the far wall is reproduced from an 18th-century Venetian design. The rugs and the painting are Oriental. Closeup of drawing-room corner, above, evokes Mediterranean impressions. Richness of texture, sophisticated pattern, and that very special personableness your own hands confer on needlework—this is cherishable beauty to create for those very special people on your Christmas list. From Sweden, expressly designed for House Beautiful, come a tablecloth and place mats woven of fine Nordic linen, already marked with urbane motifs, waiting for you to embroider, thread and stitchery instructions included. A happy secret: The effects are lavish, tremendous—but the stitches are simplicity itself.

A Table EMBROIDERED is a Table REMEMBERED

"Vete"—a circular tablecloth, above, in stone-beige Swedish linen, restrainedly patterned with sprays of wheat and radiating stripes of stitchery. It comes ready to be embroidered with monochromatic stone-beige threads of fine linen-flaxen strands grown strong and supple in the midnight sun of northern summer. Outline, Couched Rumanian, and Straight Stitches create its almost sculptural dimension. The cloth, when you hem it, measures 51" in diameter.*

"Kronor"—a place-mat pattern, opposite, suggesting the flowered crowns of medieval Nordic queens, so stylized as to be usable with either contemporary or traditional tableware. Linen mats, which are 17" by 14" when hemmed, come in gold, stone-beige, or red, to be worked monochromatically in tones of the same color. This opulent look requires only three stitches: Outline, Chain, and Satin.*

"We would have not one roof but several, to keep the house from looking top-heavy."

by Dorothy Rodgers

In this issue we complete in two sections the story of the house built by Mrs. Rodgers and her husband, composer Richard Rodgers. On page 70, the house is finished and they move in: on these pages, how they entertain in the new house with favorite menus and recipes.

Our first party in the new house was the most informal we have ever given. In the then tileless, rugless living room, beer flowed like champagne, and there wasn't a slice of pâté or a cucumber sandwich in sight. The buffet—three boards on sawhorses—groaned with grinders, salads, smoked fish, cheeses, sausages, and hearty stacks of bread. Most of our 60 guests wore overalls. It was our roof-tree party.

Late in the spring of 1966, on one of our weekly visits, I had spied a strange skeleton of a tree high on the ridge of the newly finished slate roof. There were a few wrinkled oranges tied to its pitiful bones, and the whole thing conjured up vague recollections of an old custom having to do with the closing-in of a house. Seeing where I was looking, Mike Sochacki, our contractor, asked if I knew what the "roof tree" meant. I was ready to launch a vague guess when he answered his own question: "It means a party," he said.

It did indeed. Friday, June third, by a little after three, the plumbers, painters, carpenters, electricians, engineers, stonemasons, steamfitters, and John Stonehill and Oliver Lundquist (our architects) and Alice Orme Smith (the landscape architect) were all milling around wishing us well. By the time those first guests drove off, I could hardly wait for the day when others would be arriving.

From the beginning, I had looked forward to entertaining in a more informal way in the new house. The first big step was our decision not to have a separate room for dining. The problem was to find a graceful way to set and clear the table. Folding doors near the pantry gave us a small area out of sight in which tables could be set before the meal. But the pass-through in the wall between the pantry and the living room provided the most important part of our answer.

When I have help, the food and wine are placed on the buffet counter, where things can be kept hot in chafing dishes or on the built-in electrically heated tray; then the doors on the pantry side are closed, the ones in the living room are opened, and guests can serve themselves. When I do the cooking and serving myself, the doors on both sides are left open to simplify things. In either case, once the meal is over, everything is put back on the buffet, the living-room doors ar closed, and the clearing away is done fro the pantry side.

With this sort of buffet arrangemen we can eliminate formal service and tabl settings that call for place plates an finger bowls—which always seem inap propriate in the country. The table, o tables (each one seats only six), are se with linens, flatware, butter plates, sal pepper, cigarettes, and ashtrays. And every thing else—glasses, plates, food, and win —is arranged on the serving counter.

We can handle the changing c courses in either of two ways. Th tables can be cleared onto the buffe counter, in which case the doors on th living-room side are closed, and desse and coffee are brought in on a two-tiere cart (this way, we can move to anothe part of the room). Or the cart is use for table clearing while, opening the pan try doors only part way, our maid Ine removes the main-course serving dishe and sets out the dessert things.

Behind the scenes, the kitchen ha turned out to be not only handsome, bu wonderfully efficient. Of all its appliance unquestionably the one that has made th greatest change in my cooking habits the vertical freezer that stands next to th refrigerator.

It is a common misconception that foo can't be as good after it has been froze as before. True, only pastry dough actually improved by freezing, but foo frozen promptly and quickly (both ar very important) will retain its freshnes And it is a pleasant feeling to have a stoc of your own home-cooking ready to serv on short notice.

I've learned to use the freezer in dozen ways. Leftover sauces, for instanc can be frozen in ice-cube trays, the stored in plastic bags to be used as yo need them—perhaps a couple of cubes o hollandaise to put on leaf spinach or t enrich a sauce.

A look at the list of the freezer's con tents encourages me to become creativ and invent new dishes from what I hav on hand. One rainy morning when Dic and I were alone, we decided to see wha could be rustled up without leaving th house to shop. I came up with all kind of things from the freezer—some cra meat, a bit of sauce left over from a poached chicken, a package of spinach and a package of frozen crepes I had bought to try out; and in my reserve of canned goods I found French mushrooms in cream. I heated the crabmeat and mushrooms together, added the sauce from the chicken, some sherry, and a bit of salt and pepper. Then I filled the thawed pancakes with some of the mixture, rolled them, put them in a baking dish and into the oven just long enough to heat them. I served the rest of the crabmeat mixture as a sauce and sprinkled some ground nutmeg on the spinach just before serving. It was a very good lunch indeed.

I try to be very careful about marking containers and packages with tape, and keeping the list of the freezer's contents up to date—a chore that is easy to forget but essential. It helps to list foods by classifications: soups, fish and seafood, poultry, meats, breads, fruits, vegetables, desserts. And I make note of quantities—especially useful information when it comes to leftovers. "Four to six servings" tells you what you need to know.

When I was doing the cooking, I found that I liked to do as much as possible on Mondays. This usually meant making some soups, preparing tart shells, baking a chocolate or ginger roll, perhaps making some sherbet or an ice-cream bombe and freezing it in a mold. Often I would prepare a beef or veal or lamb casserole, so that when the weekend arrived, I would not have so much to do.

I try to freeze things in useful quantities. Whether two-, four-, or eight-portion packages are most helpful depends on the size of your family and the kind of meal. I freeze many foods in small containers so that I won't have to thaw more than we need when Dick and I are alone. When there are more of us, I can always take out two or more packages. Things I plan to serve to guests—sherbet or a chocolate roll, for instance—I freeze in larger quantities.

I've found that a little leisure invested in preparations can pay huge dividends when I'm expecting guests and pressed for time. At Middy Darrow's suggestion, I now mix butter with flour or tarragon, lemon, or parsley and freeze small amounts in individually labeled packages when I have time. Parsley or dill or chives from the garden, chopped and frozen in small containers, save time and trouble and add fresh flavor that's hard to come by when they are not in season. Even whipped cream can be frozen: small dabs placed on a sheet of wax paper until they freeze can then be stored in a plastic container: they won't stick together, and they will thaw in ten or fifteen minutes.

In addition to things you make at home, there are, of course, excellent commercial products that are not only delicious but great timesavers. Many frozen vegetables seem tenderer and smaller than those available in the market: frozen tiny peas and baby lima beans are just as I like them best. And foods frozen close to where they grow retain a flavor that's often missing in so-called fresh vegetables after they have been shipped and stored. Among frozen fruits, raspberries are excellent for sauces, and strawberries for a soufflé or a mousse.

To supplement foods in the freezer, I keep a varied supply of canned goods. When you want to invite unexpected guests to stay for lunch or dinner, it is comforting to know that, starting with a can of minced clams, pasta (elbow macaroni, spaghetti, or linguini), and a nice chunk of Parmesan cheese (ungrated, it keeps for months in the refrigerator and tastes much better than the ready-grated kind), you can put together a delicious dish. Even canned truffles needn't be prohibitively expensive when you know the trick of using one truffle and covering the rest with Madeira to preserve them. And many canned soups are first-rate—especially when you combine them or add some herbs or wine. For dessert emergencies, I usually keep one or two cans of lichee nuts and some crystalized ginger—two very different Chinese delicacies that can be used many ways (on vanilla ice cream, for example). Mixed with summer fruits, the lichee nuts add a subtle flavor that intrigues people because they don't recognize it immediately.

Don't necessarily be bound by printed recipes. By using what you have on hand or what is readily available, by making intelligent substitutions, by thinking about different ways of serving what are unappetizingly referred to as "leftovers," you can discover the pleasure of inventing your own dishes.

Over the years I've discovered, or developed, a few cooking idiosyncrasies of my own. I find I use relatively little cream and milk and almost no heavy cream; even in soups I use light cream or creamy milk, partly because we like foods that are not too rich, but also because it's simply more considerate in these days when almost everyone is careful about diet. We don't deep-fry, and I prefer a light salad oil to olive oil which, to me, has a stronger, heavier flavor. I use cornstarch, which imparts a lovely translucent sheen, instead of flour to give substance to dark sauces. I have an extravagant tendency to use chicken, beef, or fish stock in place of water whenever possible. And since neither Dick nor I likes garlic, my recipes call for shallots instead.

While it is almost a cliché to say that hot foods should be served hot, I find cold meats and fish are often served so rigidly cold that much of their flavor is lost. I like to serve them at room temperature or, if they are glazed with aspic, only just cold enough to prevent the aspic from melting.

I have my own pet timesavers, too. Though I know that some gourmets consider it a crime, I buy prepared mayonnaise. And in spite of my mother's good example (she used to order a veal knuckle, a shin bone, the shank and marrow bones, and start stock from "hello-hello"), the chicken and beef stock we use in sauces and soups are also bought ready-made. However, the chicken soup we serve is made at home, and when we have duck or turkey, I like soup made from the carcasses and meat that is left over.

The menus and recipes that follow have been adapted for informal entertaining and to simplify life. I have tried to keep the recipes uncomplicated and easy to prepare. They are all dishes we have enjoyed at home.

I have suggested crisp, crusted breads because I don't happen to like soft rolls or plain white bread. I do like croissants and popovers if they are well-made and light; and good old-fashioned rye bread with caraway seeds, pumpernickel with certain dishes (smoked salmon, for example), sesame crackers, bread sticks, and, occasionally, pappadums. (It is important to vary the breads you serve.)

I've been deliberately vague when it comes to wines. The right choice is a matter of menu and budget. But what makes the greatest difference is your own knowledge of what you and your husband and guests like best. And that, of course, makes your menus personal. The following ones are merely suggestions.

A Few of My Favorite Menus and Recipes

*Spring Soup
*Lamb Curry in Crepes
Chutney
Croissants
Sliced Tomatoes with Basil and French Dressing TAVEL
Sour Cherry Tart

As an alternative, use a combination of chicken and lobster in the crepes, with curry sauce. Or try substituting strudel dough (which can be bought commercially and kept in the refrigerator for weeks or in the freezer for months) for the crepes. Fresh basil is particularly delicious on raw sliced tomatoes.

Spring Soup
(6-8 Servings)

2 bunches scallions, trimmed and chopped
2 large carrots, sliced thin
¼ pound butter (1 stick)
½ pound fresh or frozen asparagus, cut into ½-inch pieces
2 cups peas
6 cups strong chicken stock

Sauté scallions and carrots in the butter over a low flame for 2 to 3 minutes. Add the asparagus and peas and sauté 3 to 4 minutes more. Add chicken stock; bring to a boil, lower heat and simmer for ½ hour or until vegetables are tender (not mushy). Serve hot. Soup may be frozen if desired.

Lamb Curry in Crepes
(8-10 Servings)

Crepes

¼ pound plus 1 tablespoon butter (1 stick and 1 tablespoon)
4 large eggs
¼ teaspoon salt
1½ cups club soda (1½ eight-ounce bottles)
1½ cups flour

Clarify the butter and keep warm in top half of double boiler. In an electric blender, put the eggs, salt, club soda, and flour. Blend until smooth. Heat a 5-inch crepe pan (or small frypan) and brush with clarified butter. Pour 2 tablespoons batter onto center of pan and tilt, allowing batter to spread over entire pan. Cook crepes quickly on both sides. Repeat process until all batter has been used. Keep crepes warm while making lamb curry.

Lamb Curry

- 3 pounds stewing lamb
- 1 quart beef stock
- 1 carrot, peeled
- 1 medium onion, peeled
- 4 sprigs parsley
- 1 tablespoon salt

Remove fat from stewing lamb and cut meat into 1-inch pieces. Cover with beef stock. Add the carrot, onion, parsley, and salt and bring to a boil. Lower heat and simmer for an hour, skimming every 15 minutes. Drain, and reserve meat.

Curry Sauce

- ¼ pound butter (1 stick)
- 4 medium apples, peeled, cored and chopped
- 2 large white onions, peeled and chopped
- 6 stalks celery, chopped
- 2 tablespoons butter, melted
- ¼ cup flour
- ¼ cup curry powder
- 4 cups chicken stock, heated
- ½ cup light cream

In a large pot, melt ¼ pound butter. Add the chopped apples, onions, and celery stalks and cook for 10 to 15 minutes or until soft. Blend the melted butter with flour and curry powder; add to apple-onion-celery mixture and cook for 3 to 5 minutes, stirring constantly. Add hot chicken stock and simmer over low heat for 30 minutes, stirring occasionally. Cool slightly and pour into blender. Blend until smooth. Pour sauce back into pot. Add the light cream and stir well. Add cooked lamb and cook just long enough to reheat meat and sauce. Fill crepes with mixture; roll up and arrange on warm serving dish. Pour remaining sauce over all and serve with chutney.

MENU 2

Jellied Madrilène
Butterfly Steaks
*Spinach and Cheese Pie
Italian Bread
Mixed Green Salad
RED BURGUNDY
*Strawberry Mousse

Butterfly steaks are minute steaks that have been split but not completely severed. They should be grilled, of course; they cook very fast because they are so thin. Serve them with lemon-and-tarragon butter. The Spinach and Cheese Pie can be made with strudel dough or with phyllo, the Greek pastry dough (both are available commercially). It is tricky because you must work quickly with the dough. But it can be made in the morning and reheated, if necessary, at the time of serving.

Spinach and Cheese Pie
(8-10 Servings)

- 4 ten-ounce packages frozen chopped spinach
- ⅓ cup oil
- 2 medium onions, chopped
- 1½ teaspoons dried dill weed
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ¼ teaspoon pepper
- ¾ pound feta cheese, crumbled
- ½ pound butter, melted (2 sticks)
- 20 phyllo pastry leaves (¾ pound)

Preheat oven to 350°. Cook the spinach according to directions on package, and drain thoroughly. Heat the oil and sauté chopped onions until translucent. Stir in cooked spinach, dill weed, salt, and pepper. Add crumbled feta cheese and toss lightly with spinach mixture.

Grease a 13-by-9-by-2-inch ovenproof serving dish with some of the melted butter. (Since phyllo requires fast handling to prevent dough from crumbling, have all ingredients ready. It helps to put phyllo leaves on a damp towel while working with them, but they can be patched if necessary. Phyllo dough may be bought at any Greek bakery.) Spread 10 phyllo leaves in baking dish, brushing each leaf lightly and quickly with melted butter. Add spinach-and-cheese mixture, spreading it evenly over the leaves. Top with 10 more phyllo leaves, again brushing each lightly and quickly with melted butter. With a sharp knife, cut diagonally into portions. Brush top leaf with melted butter. Bake at 350° for 35 to 45 minutes or until pie is golden brown. Serve at room temperature.

Strawberry Mousse
(6-8 Servings)

- 1 cup strawberries (1 10-ounce package, frozen)
- 4 teaspoons gelatin (1 envelope plus 1 teaspoon)
- 2 cups heavy cream, stiffly whipped
- ½ cup confectioners' sugar
- 1 teaspoon vanilla extract

Thaw strawberries; drain and reserve juice (1 cup). Soften gelatin in 1 cup strawberry juice and set aside. Whip heavy cream until stiff; fold in the confectioners' sugar and vanilla extract. Heat strawberry juice with gelatin until gelatin is completely dissolved; cool. Blend with strawberries and fold into cream mixture. Pour into lightly buttered one-quart mold and refrigerate for two hours or until set. Unmold onto chilled serving dish. (Do not freeze.)

MENU 3

Black Bean Soup
*Endives in Ham, Cheese Sauce
String Beans, Almond Slivers
French Bread
POUILLY-FUMÉ
Baked Apple
*Gingerbread

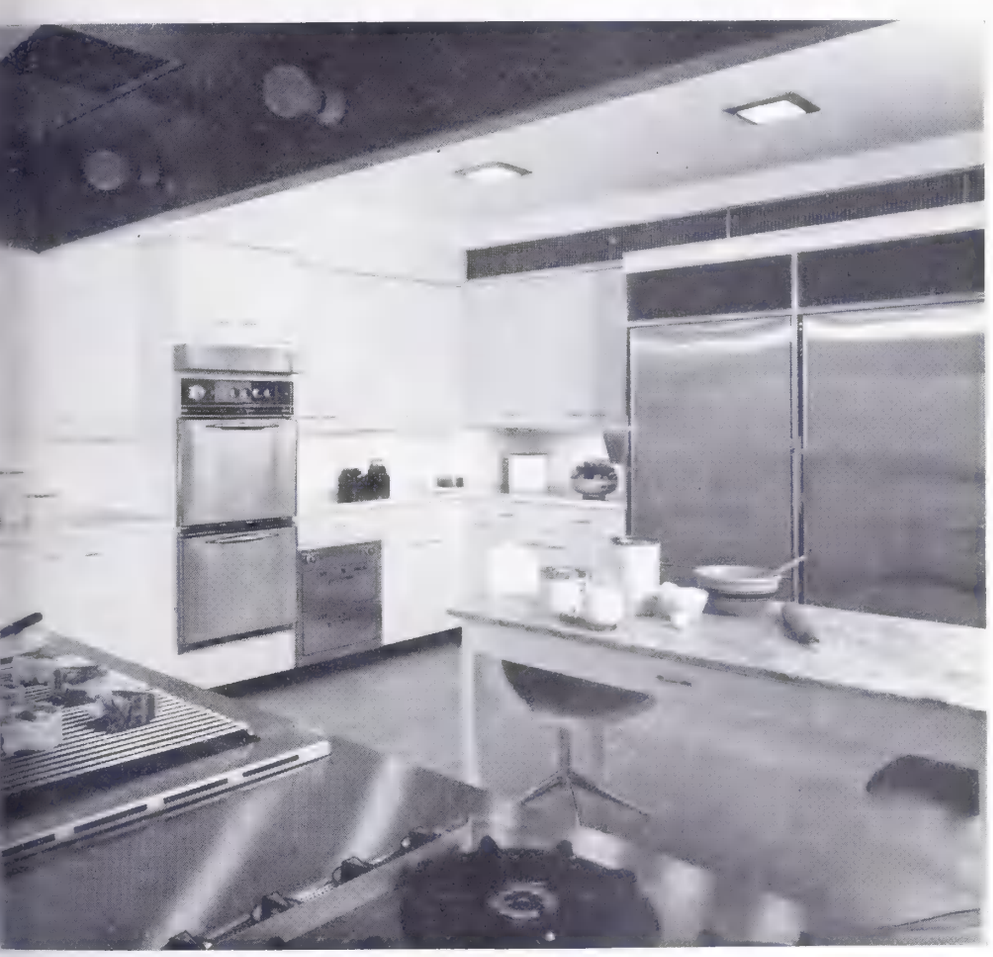
I usually add a slice of lemon and some dry sherry to the soup. The endive dish is Belgian in origin, and it's very good. Try substituting lecks for the endives on occasion. The gingerbread recipe comes from our cook, Margaret Feely. She says it's Irish gingerbread, and I say it's great.

Endives in Ham, Cheese Sauce
(6-8 Servings)

- 8 medium-size endives
- 1 cup chicken stock
- Juice of 1 lemon
- Salt
- 8 slices boiled ham, trimmed of fat and thinly sliced



Remove hearts from endives, wash carefully, drain, and braise in large skillet in the chicken stock, lemon juice, and salt. Bring liquid to a boil; cover skillet, lower heat, and simmer for 2 minutes. (Endives should still be firm.) Drain. Wrap each endive in a thin slice of boiled ham.

"Here we tried to duplicate the Rockmeadow measurements almost exactly, because the kitchen there had seemed just about perfect to me. It was almost square—about 14 feet by 15 feet—with counters, sinks, and appliances ranged around the walls in cooking-step sequence, with lots of light and air, and big enough for my absolutely essential marble-topped table."

FURNITURE FOR THE INSTANT ECLECTIC

Editor: FRANCES HEARD

Presenting a new collection of furniture, a grouping of styles and periods that harmonize well with each other. From this diversity—including many strongly individual pieces—you can achieve a kind of instant eclecticism

For those who dare to take short cuts, who dare to reach for the quick solution to furnishing one room or a whole house, here is a new concept—"Rapport" by Drexel—shown on our cover, here, and on the following pages in a house decorated by House Beautiful. Though the furniture represents a variety of styles and periods, it is all from one Drexel collection designed to give the look of individual pieces selected over many years. It's today's manufactured version of the eclecticism of knowledgeable connoisseurs.

The "Rapport" collection consists, quite simply, of a large group of single pieces of furniture for living rooms, dining rooms, and bedrooms, designed to coexist in harmony with each other without losing identity. In the group are upholstered pieces, tables, chairs, cabinets, chests, accessories such as mirrors, a canopy bed, and headboards.

Some of the pieces, such as the coffee table shown on the opposite page, are distinctly modern. Others, such as the cabinet on the following page, are reminiscent of the baroque periods of 18-century Europe, when exuberant curves and painted embellishments were the favored style. Still other pieces have some of the spirit of Queen Anne furniture in England or a classical flavor stemming from Greece. The precise historical origin doesn't really matter. What is important is the appeal of designs freely mixed with verve and imagination to produce a sense of animation attuned to today.

Finishes are a key element throughout the "Rapport" collection. Woods include ash, walnut, and pecan in a light or dark finish. Painted finishes available for several key pieces add pleasing contrast. These include a pearl beige with clay trim: chalk white with almond trim used on side chairs in the living room, opposite page; mimosa yellow with gray-and-white trim found on the cabinet, next page; and a palmetto green with blue accent.

The freedom of choice offered by such a collection is unusual. Because of the diversity of designs, there is little chance of look-alike rooms. There is no limit to the color choices for wall and floor treatments. For the house shown here, our decorators chose a warm scheme of yellows and off-whites to emphasize a hospitable spirit.

In living room, at right, a pair of tailored sofas, $562 each, and a pair of pull-up chairs on ball casters, $209 each, grouped around a 40-inch square coffee table in a tortoise-shell lacquer finish, $100. Gilt-framed mirror, $150, hangs over ash commode with carved front, $220. Side chairs in white finish with almond trim, $102. Leopard-spotted pillows and zebra-printed drapery fabric are keyed to the sunny yellow theme used throughout the house. Walnut end table, seen on our cover, is $70. Above left: Walnut bookcases, in 40-inch widths, $200 each.

Harmony in diversity, a mingling of styles that mix freely rather than match precisely—a dramatic new look in manufactured furniture inspired by the eclecticism practiced by skilled collectors of increasingly hard-to-find one-of-a-kind antiques. Examples here from the home decorated by HOUSE BEAUTIFUL with Drexel's "Rapport," a collection designed to blend a selected group of diverse furniture styles, wood finishes, and painted pieces.

Dining room, left, aglow with burnished tones of yellow, holds T-square modern table in a rich tortoise-shell lacquer finish, ringed with tall, chalk-white chairs. Table, 62″ long extending to 106″, $200. Chairs in painted finish, $102 each. Cabinet, carved and decorated in European baroque tradition, $700.

Bedroom, right, mixes a king-size canopy bed, trimmed with brass-finished rosettes in the classical manner, with prettily curved French-influenced desk, in walnut. Bed, $400; desk, $270. Walnut desk chair, $92. Upholstered chair, $197. Yard-square upholstered ottoman seen at the foot of the bed, $135.

Close-up, lower right, shows warm finish on pecky pecanwood bed. Two-drawer bombé commode beside bed, $140. The red lacquer breakfast trays form a cheerful accent for the yellow-and-white scheme.

Nothing small and simple like the Mad Hatter's tea party for Alice, where four guests (seated) were served only tea and, graciously, "the best butter." Miss Merrill's teas are superb, their preparation more elaborate than for the sit-down dinners (no more than twelve) she likes best.

Marvelous collection, opposite, of family china and crystal is displayed in glass cabinets, the doors framed in fine walnut. The delicacy of French blue and lemony yellow, colors that Miss Merrill loves and uses in more formal rooms, gives this kitchen, despite its serious equipment, the warmth and charm of a personal touch.

The Gauls, the French claim, invented ham, and the Italians adopted it. The facts are the Elder Cato wrote very specific instructions for the curing and smoking of fresh ham way back in 149 B.C. It's possible the French popularized the ham. Jambon de Bayonne, their best known, a cured ham, is customarily served as an hors d'oeuvre; Parma, the great Italian ham, also cured (we know it as prosciutto, which means ham), is served in paper-thin slices with fresh figs or melon as a most elegant first course; Westphalian ham, smoked and dried, Germany's contribution to these gastronomic delights, can be served as you would prosciutto, although it often accompanies freshly cooked new asparagus with melted butter or cream sauce. England's delicious York and the famous Prague of Czechoslovakia are both smoked and, unlike the others, are always cooked before eating. The English finish ham much as we do, and serve it hot or cold—if hot, usually with a Madeira sauce. In Prague, ham is always served cold, sliced thin, accompanied by pickled cucumbers. In addition to our modern hams, Americans can count our Virginias among the great hams of the world—particularly the Smithfields.

THE GALA HAM

Baked Ham, American Fashion

Choose a 10- to 12-pound ham, bone in, one either cook-before-eating or fully cooked. With a sharp knife, loosen the skin for about two inches at the shank end, then, with a scissors, make a sawtooth design around the edge. Scrape off any paper labels.

Place the ham, fat side up, on a rack in a roasting pan in a preheated 325° oven and bake 3½ to 4 hours. A half-hour before the ham is cooked, take out of the oven and with a sharp knife score the fat in a diamond pattern. Insert whole cloves in each diamond. Finish with Apricot Glaze.

While the ham is baking, heat a 12-ounce jar of apricot preserves until melted. Then push through a sieve. Spoon the apricot purée over the fat of the ham. Return ham to the oven for the remainder of the prescribed cooking time, or until the glaze has set. (See page 313 for other glazes.) Place the ham on a hot serving platter and allow to stand 20 to 30 minutes before carving. Garnish with fresh watercress or parsley.

Gala ham, garnished in the American manner, carved in the French. Spode game platter from Copeland & Thompson; sterling-silver flatware, "Diadem," and gravy boat, both from Reed & Barton.

RICHARD JEFFERY

Baked Virginia Ham, Traditional Style

Scrub the ham thoroughly under cold running water with a wire brush to remove the "mold bloom." This calls for care and elbow grease. Place in a very large boiler, cover with fresh, cold water, and soak overnight. The following day, lift out of the water and wash again to get rid of any mold that may have escaped you. Rinse out the boiler, add the ham, skin down, cover with fresh cold water, and bring up to the boiling point. Reduce heat to simmer—the water should just shiver—cover with the lid, and cook, allowing 20 minutes per pound, counting from the time the water reaches simmer. If the water boils away, add more boiling water so the ham is completely covered at all times. When the ham is cooked, lift from the boiler and, while still warm, pull off the skin.

To glaze or not to glaze

Southern aficionados don't. They serve the ham cold without adornment. For glazers: Stud the fat with whole cloves, cover with one of the glazes (page 313), and place in a large roasting pan in a preheated 350° oven for about 30 minutes, or until glaze has set.

Baked Country Ham, à la House Beautiful

Scrub the ham, and soak as instructed in Baked Virginia Ham, Traditional Style (above). Then place in a fairly shallow roasting pan, large enough so the ham, skin side down, can lie as flat as the shape permits. Add to the pan one full bottle Madeira wine and three cans (10½-ounce size) condensed beef broth. Cover the ham tightly with heavy-duty foil, making sure it is as secure as if it were a lid. Place in a preheated 350° oven and bake 20 minutes per pound.

At the end of the baking time, remove ham from the oven. When the meat is cool enough to handle, but still warm, pull off the skin.

Glaze with Apricot Glaze, above, and return to the oven for 30 minutes, or until glaze has set. Place on a large platter and cool to room temperature. Serve with scalloped oysters. See any good cookbook. More recipes overleaf.

Baked Ham, French Fashion with Cream and Mushroom Sauce*

1 10- to 12-pound cooked-before-eating ham, bone in
2 tablespoons butter
1 tablespoon vegetable oil
2 large carrots, sliced thin
2 medium yellow onions, sliced thin
Few stalks parsley
1 bay leaf
6 or 8 peppercorns
Big pinch thyme
6 whole cloves
1 bottle port, less ½ cup
3 cans (10½-ounce size) condensed beef bouillon

Prepare the ham the way chefs do, with the shank showing (see page 315).

Heat the butter and the oil in the roasting pan. Then sauté the carrots and onions, giving them an occasional stir, until lightly browned. About 10 minutes. Add all remaining ingredients, except the ham, to the pan and bring up to a boil slowly. Place the ham in the pan. Spoon some of the liquid over it. Place in a preheated 350° oven and bake, basting every 20 minutes with the pan liquid, for 6 hours.

Because the ham is cooked by this long, slow method, the fat turns a beautiful rich color and there is no need for glazing.

Remove the ham from the oven, place on a warm platter, and allow to stand 25 to 30 minutes. Just before serving, garnish with a big bouquet of fresh watercress.

Meanwhile, make this sauce:

Cream and Mushroom Sauce

6 tablespoons butter
1 tablespoon vegetable oil
2 pounds fresh mushroom caps, sliced
3 tablespoons minced shallots or green onions
Salt
Freshly ground pepper
3 tablespoons flour
2 cups heavy cream

Dump a couple of trays of ice cubes into the hot liquid in the ham pan to degrease it. When the fat has congealed around the ice cubes, discard.

Place the pan over a high heat and boil down rapidly until there are about 3 cups left. Add the ½ cup port and cook a couple of minutes longer. Strain into a saucepan.

Heat 3 tablespoons of the butter and the oil in a wide, heavy, enameled skillet. Add the mushrooms and sauté, giving them an occasional stir, until they have browned lightly. Stir in the shallots or onions and sauté another minute or so. Mix in salt and pepper to taste. Set aside briefly.

Work the flour into the remaining butter to make a paste. Then drop by bits into the hot liquid, whipping constantly with a wire whisk. Whisk in the cream, then stir in the mushrooms. Bring up to a boil, then simmer for 5 minutes. Taste for seasoning.

If the sauce must stand, seal with Saran to prevent a skin forming on top. Reheat when ready to serve.

This makes enough sauce to serve 12 or more. It can be frozen, in which case bring to room temperature, then heat over simmering water.

Sliced Ham in Cream Sauce

1 shallot cloves, minced, or 3 tablespoons minced green onions
2 or 3 crushed juniper berries
6 tablespoons wine vinegar
2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons flour
1 can (10½-ounce size) condensed beef broth
6 tablespoons dry white wine
Generous ½ cup heavy cream, heated
4 large slices baked ham, ⅜ inch thick
Baby potatoes, boiled and peeled (allow 2 to 3 per person)
Minced parsley

Combine the shallots, juniper berries, and vinegar in a small saucepan and bring to a boil. Continue boiling until all the vinegar has evaporated.

Melt the butter in another saucepan, stir in the flour and cook over low heat, stirring constantly, until the roux has turned light brown. Add the beef broth, bring up to a boil, whipping constantly with a wire whisk, then simmer, still whisking, until the mixture thickens. Whip in the wine, then stir in the shallot mixture. Cook, giving it an occasional stir, for 30 minutes, to eliminate the taste of raw flour.

Turn the sauce into a heavy saucepan generous enough to hold the ham slices. Mix in the cream. Then add the ham slices.

If the dish must stand, seal with Saran to prevent a skin forming on top.

To serve, bring up to a boil but do not cook further. Transfer to a large, hot serving platter, surround with freshly cooked, peeled baby potatoes, and garnish with a nice sprinkling of minced parsley. Serves 4.

Ham Slices Baked in Maple Syrup

2 ham slices, 1½ inches thick
Whole cloves
1½ teaspoon allspice
1 cup real maple syrup

Slash the fat around the ham to keep the meat from curling up, then stud the meat with the cloves. Place in a roasting pan just large enough to accommodate the meat. Mix the allspice into the syrup, and pour the mixture over the meat.

Bake uncovered in a preheated 300° oven for about 1 hour or until the meat is very tender when pierced with a fork. Baste every 15 minutes.

If the sauce becomes too thick — and it may — stir in a little boiling water.

Serves 4 to 6, depending on appetites. Extremely good with whole baby potatoes and either Broccoli or Asparagus Hollandaise.

Ham Mousse

3 envelopes unflavored gelatine
2 cups Sauce Velouté (see below)
1 pound (2 cups) diced ham
Salt
Freshly ground white pepper
⅛ teaspoon cream of tartar
3 egg whites
1 cup heavy cream, whipped

Stir the gelatine into the hot Sauce Velouté and cook over a medium heat for about 2 minutes, stirring constantly, until gelatine has dissolved. Combine with the ham.

In the electric blender at high speed, blend half the ham mixture at a time. Pour into a saucepan and taste for seasoning. Keep the mixture warm over medium heat.

Sprinkle the cream of tartar over the egg whites and beat with a rotary or electric beater until the whites stand in stiff, shiny peaks when you hold up the beater. With a rubber spatula, fold at once into the warm ham mixture, carefully but thoroughly. Refrigerate, giving mixture an occasional stir, until cool and almost beginning to set.

Fold the whipped cream into the cooled mixture, then spoon into a 6-cup mold, lightly brushed with vegetable oil. Refrigerate until firm. At least 3 hours.

To serve, unmold on a chilled serving platter and surround with a garland of fresh Bibb lettuce. Serves 10.

Sauce Velouté: Melt 3 tablespoons of butter in a heavy saucepan over low heat. Stir in 3 tablespoons of flour and cook slowly, stirring constantly, until the fat and flour froth—about 3 minutes—without browning. Take off the heat, add 2 cups condensed chicken broth, whipping vigorously with a wire whip to incorporate the roux thoroughly. Place over a moderately high heat and cook, still stirring with a whip, until the Velouté comes up a boil. Boil 1 minute, stirring constantly. Take off the heat and season to taste with salt and freshly ground pepper.

Crepes au Jambon

Crepes:

2 eggs
½ cup all-purpose flour
Pinch salt
1 cup milk
¼ cup (½ stick) butter, melted

Filling:

Thin slices ham, boiled or baked
1 cup heavy cream
1 egg yolk
¼ cup grated Gruyère cheese
1 tablespoon butter

To make the crepes: Beat the eggs until very thick. Then gradually stir in the flour and salt. Add the milk a small amount at a time, stirring constantly. Finally, stir in the melted butter. At this point, the batter should be very thin and smooth.

To cook: Brush a heavy 6-inch pan very lightly—a mere film—with vegetable oil. When it starts to smoke, take off the heat. Immediately, holding the pan in right hand, add 2 tablespoons (standard measurement)* of batter, pouring with left hand. Quickly tilt pan in all directions so bottom is covered with a very thin coating of the batter. Place back over heat for a minute or so. Loosen edges of crepe all around with a small metal spatula. When a light golden brown, turn, lifting crepe with your thumb and forefinger, and flip it over. Brown lightly for about a minute. The second side is always "freckled," not an even brown. As you cook each crepe, stack with wax paper between. Grease the skillet for each crepe. This batter makes about 12.

*A ladle from your silver drawer that holds just this quantity is ideal.

To finish the dish: Cut the slices of ham to fit the crepe, cover each crepe with ham, and roll up like a diploma. Place in a shallow baking dish just large enough to hold the rolls flat. Beat the cream until thick but not stiff. Stir in the egg yolk well, and spoon mixture over the crepes. Sprinkle cheese on top and dot with butter. Bake in a preheated 450° oven for 12 to 15 minutes or until golden.

Ham Sauce with Rice

This is one practical way to use up a bit of ham and serve a good meal into the bargain.

1 tablespoon butter
Scant ½ cup ham, cut in thin matchlike strips
1 teaspoon tomato paste, or to taste
1 can (10½-ounce size) condensed chicken broth, heated
Hot cooked rice for 4
Freshly grated Parmesan cheese

Melt the butter in a heavy skillet. Add the ham strips and sauté slowly but do not allow them to frizzle. Stir in the tomato paste and the broth. Bring to a boil, then reduce heat to simmer and cook about 5 minutes.

Serve over plain cooked ri with freshly grated Parmesa cheese on the side.

Ham Casserole Bourgeoise

1 large (about ¾ pound) potato, Idaho or California Long White, parboiled, peeled, sliced very thin
6 slices of ham, boiled or baked, cut into large cubes
3 hard-cooked eggs, sliced
¼ pound fresh mushroom caps, sliced very thin
Salt
Freshly ground pepper
Nutmeg
Thyme
1 large bay leaf
2 whole cloves
2 cups sour cream
¾ cup freshly grated Parmesan cheese

Butter a 1½- to 2-quart casserol generously. Lay the potato slice in the bottom. Cover with the ha slices, then the sliced eggs, the the mushrooms. Sprinkle wit salt, pepper, nutmeg, and thym Add the bay leaf and cloves Spoon the sour cream over al then cover and bake in a prehea ed 350° oven for 25 minutes. R move the lid, sprinkle with th cheese, return to the oven an bake until the top has turne golden brown. Serves 6.

A salad on the side is all that needed for this sturdy dish.

Macaroni with Ham and Eggs

⅓ box (1 pound weight) elbow macaroni, cooked al dente (firm to the bite)
1 tablespoon butter
½ cup ham, cut in short matchstick pieces
2 eggs, slightly beaten
Freshly grated Parmesan cheese

Pour the cooked, drained macar ni into a hot serving dish an keep it warm.

Melt the butter and sauté th ham gently. Add the beaten eggs and stir as you would for scram bled eggs. When the eggs are jus beginning to thicken but are n quite as thick as scrambled eggs pour the whole mixture over th hot macaroni. Stir well and co er with freshly grated Parmesa cheese. Serve more cheese on th side. Serves 4.

Split Pea Soup

The aftermath of a good bake ham is a good, rib-hugging pe soup, and here is a superb recipe —a whole meal in itself.

4 cups (two 1-pound boxes) quick-cooking split peas
Ham bone
2 onions, peeled, each stuck with 2 cloves
2 bay leaves
3 celery ribs, with tops, cut in two
3 large carrots, washed, coarsely chopped
½ cup tomato purée
Heavy cream

Place all the ingredients except the tomato purée and the cream in a large, heavy kettle. Add enough cold water to cover, and bring up to a boil. Reduce the heat, then simmer until the peas are very soft. Lift the ham bone out of the kettle. Set aside.

Cut off any meat on the bone, and sliver it. Discard the bone.

Push the soup and all the vegetables through a fine sieve to make a thick purée. Then stir in the tomato purée. This should make about 4 generous quarts.

To serve, dilute the purée with heavy cream (a cup or so to a quart). Taste for seasoning. At this point, you'll probably need both salt and some freshly ground pepper. Bring up to a boil, but do not cook further.

Present the soup in a large heated tureen with a garnish of slivered ham, and serve croutons fried in butter on the side.

Note: This pea soup freezes perfectly. Add heavy cream after thawing.

Ham Glazes

Brown Sugar Glaze: Mix 1 cup brown sugar with 2 teaspoons dry mustard. Stir in enough fat from the roasting pan to make a smooth paste. Spread this mixture over the top and return ham to the oven for another half-hour.

Honey Mustard Glaze: Mix 2 teaspoons of dry mustard (or to taste) with 1 cup of strained honey thoroughly. Spread over the top and return ham to the oven for 30 minutes or so.

Red Jelly-Horseradish Glaze: Mix 1 cup red jelly with ½ teaspoon dry mustard and 2 teaspoons horseradish. Spread this mixture over the top and return ham to the oven for another half-hour.

Mrs. Elizabeth David's Cumberland Sauce

Mrs. David, author of a number of great cookbooks including French Provincial Cooking and Italian Food writes us as follows: "On no account should any thickening agent be added to Cumberland Sauce. It is the best of all sauces to serve with cold meats such as ham, pressed beef, tongue, and venison."

2 large oranges
4 tablespoons red currant jelly
1 heaping teaspoon yellow Dijon mustard
Freshly ground white pepper
Pinch salt
½ cup tawny port

With a potato peeler, peel the rind off the oranges in extremely thin slices, taking care not to pick up any of the white skin. Slice into matchstick strips. Plunge into boiling water and boil 5 minutes. Drain thoroughly.

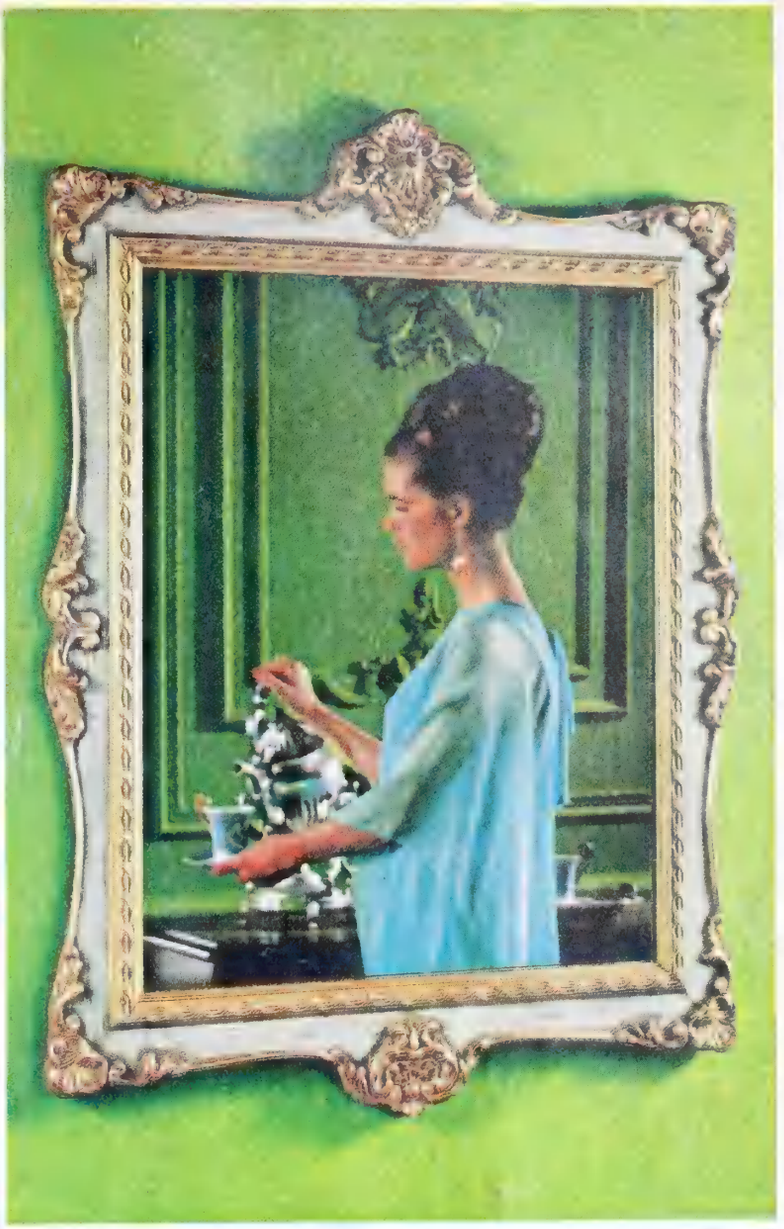
Combine the orange, jelly, mustard, pepper, and salt in the top of a small double boiler. Heat over hot water, stirring constantly, until the jelly has melted and the mixture is smooth. Add the port and cook, stirring, another 5 minutes. Serve cold. This makes enough for 4.

This recipe can be doubled or tripled, then refrigerated in a covered jar. Keeps well.

Vegetables that go well with ham

Spinach is one of the best (it looks pretty, too), but braised celery or leeks, celeriac, puréed chestnuts, mashed potatoes, are all excellent accompaniments. With cold ham potato salad in mustard mayonnaise is excellent.

Spinach with Raisins



6 pounds fresh spinach
Salt
2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons olive oil
1 clove garlic, or to taste, minced
Freshly ground pepper
½ cup raisins
½ cup pine nuts or slivered almonds

Remove the stems from the spinach. To do this the easy way, fold the leaf vertically, underside up, holding the leaf in one hand. Rip off the stem, up toward the tip of the leaf, with the other hand.

Throw all the spinach (whether previously washed or not) into a sink full of cold water. Pump it up and down to get rid of any sand. Lift the spinach with the water that clings to it into a big enameled kettle.

Sprinkle fairly generously with salt, place over a high heat, and stir with a wooden spoon until the water in the bottom comes to a boil. Reduce heat to simmer and cook 2 or 3 minutes or until a piece tastes tender. Immediately lift the cooked spinach out of the boiling water and plunge into a sink filled with cold water. Turn on the cold water and add more water to cool off the spinach quickly. This blanching helps to retain the bright color. Lift the spinach out of the water and squeeze as much water out of it as possible. Chop very fine.

Heat the butter and olive oil in a broad skillet. Add the spinach, minced garlic, and a little dash of freshly ground pepper. Turn the spinach over and over, taking care not to let it "fry" or the garlic to burn.

When it is piping hot all through, stir in the raisins and nuts. Cover and place over a very low heat (it's a good idea to use an asbestos pad) and cook for about 15 minutes.

The spinach may be "held" of the heat sealed with Saran which keeps it from turning black. Reheat over simmering water. Serves 6.

Getting Down To The Fundamentals Of Ham

What is the difference between a cured and a smoked ham? Cured ham, the upper part of a pig's hind leg, is ham that has been preserved by salting. The art of curing or "corning" involves either a liquid salt cure generally called brine or pickle cure, or a dry salt cure. The term "corned" comes from the Old Norse word "korn," which refers to grain. Since grain or granulated salt is used, meats preserved in this manner are called "corned"—like corned beef. Various methods of curing are used in different parts of the country (and the world) and by different processors. Regardless of the method, when the curing process is complete, the meat is labeled as fully cooked or ready-to-cook.

A smoked ham is first cured, then smoked over hard wood (hickory is the most common) for a given length of time, depending on the size and the processor. Like cured hams, they are labeled fully cooked or ready-to-cook. Domestic smoked hams that have not been cured first are also available. However, they need additional cooking before eating.

Basic timetable for baking smoked ham

Whether the label indicates the ham must be cooked before eating or is fully cooked, it has been our experience that in either case, long, slow cooking improves both the flavor and texture. This calls for regular basting with pan juices and/or wine. For a gala, we recommend a whole ham, bone in, because it makes a more spectacular presentation.

Place meat, fat side up, on rack in a shallow open roasting pan. Do not cover in any way. Do not add water. Preheat oven to 325°. Hams should be at room temperature before cooking.

Cook-before-eating hams*

Half an hour before the ham is done, take it from the oven, pull off the rind, if any, score the fat with a sharp knife in a diamond pattern, and stick each diamond with a whole clove. Then glaze (see pages 307 and 313). Return to oven and continue baking for the remainder of the time. Allow ham to stand 20 to 30 minutes for juices to settle and to make carving easier.

What are smoked shoulder butts and picnics? Technically, they are not hams, since they come from the shoulder (not the hind leg) of the pig, but they have characteristics similar to ham.

Smoked shoulder butts, a boneless cut weighing from two to three pounds, can be baked, simmered in water, or sliced and pan fried, or broiled. To bake, allow 40 to 45 minutes per pound in a 325° oven (170° on a meat thermometer). To simmer, allow the same time per pound after the water comes to a boil the second time.

Picnics, also shoulder cuts, are available in two forms: cook-before-eating or fully cooked. Bake in a preheated 325° oven following this timing:

Cook-before-eating picnics

4 to 6 pounds 2½ to 3 hours
8 to 10 pounds 4 to 4½ hours

Fully cooked picnics

3 to 5 pounds 1½ to 2 hours
7 to 9 pounds 2½ to 3 hours

Picnics can be glazed as you would any ham. See pages 307 and 313.

How to present ham in professional style. Before baking, loosen the skin with the point of a sharp knife, then pull it off completely. Scrape off paper labels, if any. About 2½ inches from the tip of the bone, cut straight down to the bone with a heavy, sharp knife, cutting all the way around the bone. Then cut off any meat still clinging to the shank. The meat involved can be used up in soufflés, mousses (page 308) etc. Make sure, however, that it is properly cooked. Follow recipe for baking.

Before serving, the shank end is finished with a paper frill. Some butchers have them available or will make them for you. If not, here's how to make the frill:

Take a piece of opaque white paper (such as butchers use) approximately ten inches square. Fold two ends over about an inch, on the same side. Now fold the sheet in two, with the ends outside. Using a sharp scissors, cut narrow parallel lines (about ¼ inch) straight across up to the ends. Next, fold back so the ends are inside. This gives the frilly effect. Wrap this around the shank end and secure with a pin or toothpick on the under side.

Are prosciutto and Westphalian ham alike? No. Prosciutto, known in Italy as Parma prosciutto ("prosciutto" is Italian for ham), is dry-cured, which means it has not been cooked, nor is it smoked. It has a unique flavor not only because of the way the pigs are fed (part of their diet is the whey left from making Parma cheeses) and the method of curing, but especially because of the dry, airy climate in which the pigs mature.

A fine Parma ham is a pale red color, mild, sweet-flavored, and tender. It is sold by the pound in the thinnest possible slices and is customarily served with fresh figs or sliced melon as a most elegant first course. In Italian Food, Elizabeth David writes that when fresh fruits are not available, it is served with fresh butter—a little piece of butter with every mouthful of ham. Sometimes Italians wrap it around a grissino (bread stick).

Westphalian ham, which must come from Westphalia (Germany) to bear the name, is not cooked but smoked, rolled, and dried. It is somewhat like prosciutto in flavor and appearance and it is sometimes used with fruit, as is prosciutto. The rolls, which resemble bologna in appearance, are sold by the pound, but in serving should be sliced very thin. In Germany, it is sometimes served with freshly cooked asparagus with melted butter or a cream sauce.

Both prosciutto and Westphalian ham are found in fine American meat markets specializing in quality foods. Expensive.

All about canned hams, domestic and imported. American boneless canned hams are all cured: some are then smoked—the label will indicate the process. Whichever, the ham is placed in a sterile can with a controlled amount of dry gelatin added. After sealing, the ham is then fully cooked.

All European hams imported to this country are canned. Denmark sends us the largest number, with Holland next in line, and we also get some from Poland. Like American boneless canned hams, they are all cured, but not smoked, then cooked in their tins in their own juices. Because of the unique flavor found in Polish hams, which even the experts can't explain, they command a higher price. (Poland was the first country in the world to can hams.) It is worth noting that all imported canned hams are inspected by the United States Department of Agriculture.

While all canned hams are fully cooked (this means they can be served cold without further cooking), not all canned hams are fully processed to the point they can be stored at room temperature. Read the label to determine whether or not they must be refrigerated before opening. Always refrigerate after opening. All canned hams should be chilled before serving to make carving easier.

Although canned hams do not need cooking, they can be taken out of the can and heated before serving. Allow 12 to 15 minutes per pound in a preheated 325° oven. They, too, can be glazed (see pages 307 and 313).

What exactly are country hams? Hams that have been given a dry salt cure, then smoked and aged, frequently labeled with such names as Smithfield, Tennessee, Georgia, Kentucky, etc., to indicate the area in which they were produced. If they are federally inspected, government regulations require that the hams actually be produced in those areas to carry such names. Most of us, however, are inclined to think of country hams as Virginia hams, undoubtedly because hams were first cured and smoked in the U.S. in Smithfield, Virginia, 300 years ago. Salt curing is, of course, as old as the hills. Centuries ago, pagans buried meat in the sand by the sea to preserve it, and there is on record, from the writings of the Elder Cato (147 B.C.), a method of curing and smoking hams that is almost identical to the method employed by the Smithfield Ham and Products Co., Inc., in Smithfield, Virginia, today. There are, however, some essential differences. The razor-backed hogs are raised on a diet of peanuts, which gives the meat a unique quality and flavor. This—plus a dry salt cure of three months, six-months' smoking "only on clear days" over fragrant sticks of hickory and apple, followed by an aging period of at least twelve months—results in a ham that is an epicurean experience.

It should be pointed out here that although all Smithfield hams are from Virginia, all Virginian hams are not Smithfield. Just as Champagne and Cognac in France are place names, Smithfield, too, is a place name; legally, a ham bearing the Smithfield name must originate in Smithfield.

Virginia has other famous "cures" in addition to the Smithfield, including the sugar cure, the molasses and salt cure, and the dry cure. Each has its stau adherents. A true Smithfield h ready to cook, can be kept definitely in its original pack without refrigeration. Coo Smithfield or other country h should always be refrigerated cordial is fine to speed the ting guest and keep him warm his winter way home (but it not, of course, for the driver). us cordials and liqueurs are ful tools for the sensitive host—an essential part of the "cel-" in any hospitable home.

There are several problems out finding one's way in the le world of cordials and li-urs. First, there are just so ny of them. Second, one must rn to distinguish between the prietary names of the liqueurs. de by only one producer, and generic names of basic flavor xtures, which are made by ny producers. It also helps to w the names of the great com-nies, how they developed their ducts, and how they make m today.

Apart from the efforts of the nks in their monasteries dating k to the 12th Century, the com-rcial development of liqueurs inextricably intertwined with family names of pioneer mists and merchants. In 1575, Amsterdam trader with the t Indies, Erven Lucas Bols, de-ed to use some of the spices ch he imported to make a ored gin and thus founded the use of Bols, which is today the gest liqueur producer in the rld. Another Amsterdam mer-nt, Wynand Fockink, started small distillery in 1679 and nded the second oldest of the at Dutch firms. In 1695, a per in Rotterdam, Jan de Kuy-, decided to make some of his gin to go into his own bar-; today his is the third-oldest he famous Dutch names.

n France in 1755, Marie Bri-d, daughter of a carpenter, de an anisette cordial that was oyed by King Louis XV, and h her profits from the court, founded the company that uses her name. Another of great liqueur families is that Cusenier, first in Ornans in the a Mountains, then in Paris. ne other historic French fam-names in liqueurs were, and are, Bardinet, Cointreau, fi, and Garnier. In Italy, the ily associated with liqueurs is t of Lionello Stock, who start-his distillery in Trieste. In many, the important family nes were, and still are, Gilka, mpe, and Riemerschmid.

After repeal of prohibition here the start of super-high taxation of imported alcohol, there was a major new development in the liqueur business. If the liquid inside the bottle can be made within the U.S., then the bottle can be sold for about $3 less than the imported version. This hard fact has led some of the great European names to take out, so to speak, American citizenship. They have set up their own manufacturing here, and today the names of Bols or de Kuyper do not necessarily mean a Dutch import. The names of Cointreau and Garnier no longer always mean a French product. These names compete with purely American labels like Hiram Walker. How to choose? A difficult question, because so much depends on personal preference. Let us begin by classifying cordials and liqueurs into six fairly broad groups.

1. The ancient, secret-formula, mixed-aromatic cordials

The name familiar to connoisseurs everywhere and always the powerful contender for first place among all cordials is Green Chartreuse, owned by the Carthusian monks and made by them in only two places: in their monastery of LaGrande Chartreuse at Voiron, near Grenoble in south central France, and at their monastery in Tarragona in Spain. The secret formula, said to contain about 130 aromatic herbs, was developed in the 16th Century and has been made for sale by the monks since 1735. About 100 years later, they developed Yellow Chartreuse, a lighter and sweeter version said to be "for the ladies," but there is a saying in France that all Yellow Chartreuse would rather be green if it could.

The other great name is, of course, Benedictine, developed by the monks at the Abbey of Fécamp on the coast of Normandy. There is a record of the drink having been served to Francis I when he visited the Abbey in 1534. After the French Revolution when the Abbey was pillaged, the secret formula was lost for almost 100 years. Then it was rediscovered, and for the last hundred years, Benedictine has been made by a commercial firm but still in the cellars of the old Abbey at Fécamp. About 30 years ago, noting that many people like to mix their Benedictine with brandy, the company developed B & B.

a delicious half-and-half mixture of the two drinks.

The famous Basque cordial of Spain, Green Izarra, is actually distilled across the border in France, but its aromatic herbs are picked on the Spanish slopes of the Pyrenees. There is also a lighter and sweeter Yellow Izarra.

Other proprietary, herb-flavored cordials worth investigating include, from Italy, the bright yellow Galliano and the slightly citric, highly aromatic Strega; from Spain, the brown-gold Cuarenta y Tres (Forty-three); and from the Bordeaux district of France, Vieille Cure (green or yellow).

2. The cordials with a single, dominant aromatic spice

The most well-known aromatic cordial is, of course, Crème de Menthe, a generic name used by dozens of producers. When it comes from the distillation, it is crystal clear, and I firmly believe (although many will disagree) that the taste is slightly better in this natural state called "white" on some labels. Most brands, however, (including the famous Cusenier Freezomint) are colored green, some rose-pink, or even gold. There is also a lighter, always clear version produced by several makers, called Peppermint Schnapps.

The second most famous spice cordial is Anise or Anisette, generic words used by all major producers. An unusual version comes from Badalona, Spain, under the name Anis del Mono. Another spice cordial, famous in Eastern Europe for hundreds of years, takes its name from its principal flavoring, cumin seed, and is called Kümmel, but it also has the added flavor of caraway and coriander.

3. The fruit liqueurs

These are the true liqueurs in the classic meaning of the word. Different fruits react differently to infusion with alcohol, but above all, the orange, produces the outstanding and most universally accepted liqueur. The word most often linked with orange liqueurs is Curaçao, the name of the Dutch West Indian island. Soon after the Dutch took control of it in 1634, they discovered that a small, sour, wild orange there had such an abundance of flavor oils in its greenish skin that it could be distilled into a marvelous liqueur. There was soon such an international demand for Orange Curaçao that seeds of the orange were planted in other tropical countries, and their cultivation has become an international industry. There is a double-strength version called Curaçao Double, and a triple-strength, much drier orange brandy called Triple Sec. All these names are generic. Though there is still one distillery on the original island (its product is imported under the name Senior's Curaçao of Curaçao), magnificent Orange Curaçaos are sent to us from France to add to our excellent domestic types.

Not every maker, however, uses Curaçao oranges. Some use Valencias, and the label then reads simply Orange Liqueur. Two world-famous proprietary orange liqueurs use neither the word "orange" nor "Curaçao" but are known simply by the names of their makers Cointreau and Grand Marnier. Another variation of the orange liqueur uses the tangerine, and the liqueur is always labeled in French as Crème de Mandarine.

The sweet cherry takes second place to the orange in popularity as the informing flavor of a liqueur. The cracked pits are generally included in the infusion to add a slight but dramatic bitterness in the aftertaste. Again, the liquid as it comes from the distillation is clear, and the Swiss versions are sold without added coloring as Kirsch (the German word for cherry). Without question, the most popular cherry liqueur is a proprietary brand from Denmark, Cherry Heering, the second word being the name of the family who founded and has run the Copenhagen company for more than 150 years. Other competing producers have launched proprietary names, such as Cherry Marnier or Cherristock.

As to other fruit flavors, all the names are, of course, generic and almost all the producers make them. Apricot is sometimes called Abricotine or Apry, and the Hungarian version, Hungaria Baracklikör is always superb. The blackberry's flavor comes through brilliantly in a liqueur, as does that of the black currant. The peach makes a gentle and subtle drink. The less familiar sloe berry, generally imported from England, is usually labe Prunelle or Crème de Prune in France. Raspberry is genera labeled either Crème de Fra boises (in French) or Himb Liqueur (in German). Strawb ry is almost always Crème Fraises.

4. Liqueurs from the essences of flowers

It can be an extremely inter ing experience to taste a bouq which one has known all o life only as a scent. There i Crème de Rose, a Crème de V lette, and a combination of fl er essences with a name at wh cynics scoff: Parfait Amour. I imported from both France Germany, and there is also a mestic variety.

5. A miscellany of other flavors

This category begins with group which includes Dramb based on the Scotch Whisk flavored with heather honey, of the most popular liqueurs the world. When the base is I whiskey, the liqueur is I Mist. When the base is Ameri Bourbon, and the secret flavori seem, to at least one regu drinker, to be a combination Southern peach and honeysuc the name is Southern Comfor

In the second most popu group are the liqueurs flavo with coffee, made in roma places and known by po names. The long list of favor includes Tia Maria from Jama Kahlúa from Mexico, Espre Coffee (with even a caffeine-f version) from Anacona, Pa Turkish Coffee from Istan and others with the added flav of chocolate and mint. F chocolate liqueurs are tradit ally called Crème de Cacao, almost every producer has own version.

6. Conversation-piece oddit

There are some famous beat liqueurs which achieve s a dramatic appearance that t have a value greater than th taste—a surprise factor for entertainment of the guests a party. The first is one of the est of all liqueurs. In 1549, K Zygmunt of Poland is said have visited an ancient mon tery in Danzig where the mo offered him a magnificent, c queur which he liked so much at he christened it "Zwota oda" (gold water). That gave e monks the idea of garnish- g the water with floating flakes gold leaf. About 50 years ter, one of the old harbor uses used for curing salmon as converted into a distillery r making and selling the first mmercial Goldwasser called er Lachs (salmon brand). here is no longer any copyright the word "Goldwasser," but ly one type, now made in Ger- any, may still call itself Dan- (Der Lachs) Goldwasser d still has a salmon on the bel. Danzig is now Polish, and government exports a cordial own as Polmos Zwota Woda.

There is a liqueur from Italy lled Fior d'Alpe (because it said to be flavored with aro- atic Alpine flowers) which car- s inside every bottle a small een branch from a living tree. hen, by a secret manufacturing ocess, sugar crystallizes out om the liquid in the bottle and rms tiny, rock-candy crystals owing like buds all over the anch.

There is a chocolate liqueur om Switzerland called Mar- t Chocolat Suisse, which has. ating in it, literally hundreds neatly rounded chips of Swiss chocolate. I once poured a two-ounce jigger onto a dinner plate, and counted. There were 65 "nib-lets" of chocolate. It's hard to decide whether one is having a drink or eating a snack.

Finally, there is a Swiss liqueur made from the Williams pear, which is bottled with pure magic. Suspended in the liquid inside the bottle is a full-size pear, obviously ten times too large to get through the narrow neck of the bottle. The pears are actually grown inside the bottles. Late in May, when the petals fall off the flowers and tiny pears appear at the tips of the stems, the men slide the empty bottles over the pears and up the stems and securely tie the bottles to the branches. Sometimes as many as 30 bottles are suspended from each tree. Each pear grows rapidly inside its private little hothouse. Usually about mid-August, when each pear is fully grown, it is carefully snipped from its stalk and allowed to slide gently down to the bottom of the bottle. The same day, the bottles are delivered to the distillery to be filled with the pear liqueur, which preserves the color and freshness of the living fruit almost indefinitely. ■

Cheese Sauce

2 cups milk, heated
3 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons flour
1 tablespoon salt
½ teaspoon white pepper
¾ cup Swiss cheese, grated
⅓ cup Swiss cheese, grated

Heat milk in top of double boiler. Melt butter in saucepan; add flour, salt, white pepper, and cook for 3 minutes, stirring constantly with wooden spoon. Remove saucepan from heat and add hot milk gradually while stirring until sauce is smooth. Replace saucepan over heat and continue to stir until sauce has thickened. Add ¾ cup grated Swiss cheese. Cook until cheese has melted. Pour some of sauce into baking dish; put the ham-wrapped endives in and cover with remaining sauce. Before serving, sprinkle ⅓ cup grated Swiss cheese over top. Put under moderate broiler to heat through and to brown top lightly.

Gingerbread

¼ pound butter, softened (1 stick)
1 cup sugar
2 eggs, beaten
Salt
3 cups flour, sifted
2 teaspoons ginger
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1 teaspoon cloves, ground
1 teaspoon baking soda
2 tablespoons boiling water
1 cup strong cold coffee
1 cup molasses

Preheat oven to 350°. Using a large bowl (because mixture foams), cream the butter and sugar; add eggs, well beaten, and a pinch of salt. Sift the flour with the ginger, cinnamon, cloves, and baking soda. Add these dry ingredients gradually to butter-sugar-egg mixture. Add the boiling water, cold coffee, and molasses; Blend thoroughly and pour into two greased pans 8" by 8". Bake at 350° for 45 minutes.

French Bread
*Cheese Salad
CHILEAN RIESLING
Oranges in Red Wine

The Poached Bass can be a beautiful picture with the contrast of the truffles, tomatoes, and shrimp under the shiny aspic. Do take it out of the refrigerator once the aspic is set and keep it just cool enough to prevent the aspic from melting. The Cheese Salad is unusually good, but as it's quite rich, I've chosen a simple dessert.

Poached Bass in Aspic
(6-8 Servings)

Court Bouillon

1 quart dry white wine
1 quart clam juice
1 quart cold water
2 medium onions, peeled and sliced
2 medium carrots, peeled and cut up
8 whole black peppercorns, slightly bruised
1 tablespoon salt
4 stalks celery and their tops
6 sprigs parsley
2 whole bay leaves
1 pound bones of white-meat fish (if available)
4 to 5 pound striped bass, cleaned but with head and tail left on 1 pound cooked shrimp
3-4 large tomatoes, skinned, seeded, and quartered
2 truffles, finely chopped

Put white wine, clam juice, water, onions, carrots, peppercorns, salt, celery, parsley, and bay leaves into an enamel fish poacher. If available, add the bones of white-meat fish. Bring to a boil; turn down heat and barely simmer bouillon for 30 minutes. Strain. Place striped bass in poacher and cover with court bouillon. Bring slowly to a boil. Place poacher over 2 burners on flame tamers and turn heat down very low. Poach fish gently for about 10-45 minutes or until it flakes easily. Remove from heat and allow fish to cool in bouillon. While fish is cooling, make following aspic:

Aspic

1 envelope gelatin
1 cup cold court bouillon (strained through 3 layers of cheesecloth wrung out of cold water)
1 cup boiling court bouillon (strained through 3 layers of cheesecloth wrung out of cold water)
1½ teaspoon brandy

Soften gelatin in strained cold court bouillon and strained boiling court bouillon and stir over heat until gelatin has dissolved. Refrigerate.

Lift fish onto cold serving platter (draining over poacher for moment). Leave skin on head and tail, but carefully remove skin from top half of body of fish. Remove bones gently. (Cover eyes of fish with slice of truffle, or carrot, or other vegetable.) When aspic has become syrupy, brush fish with first coat of aspic. Keep remaining aspic syrupy. Arrange cooked shrimp and tomato quarters around platter and brush them, too, with aspic. Chill in refrigerator. When aspic on platter has set, brush fish, shrimp and tomatoes again with syrupy aspic and sprinkle finely chopped truffles over all. Chill again. Refrigerate remaining aspic and when it is firm, chop up and put around platter. Garnish with crisp parsley or watercress. Serve with mayonnaise to which a generous amount of chopped fresh dill has been added. (If fresh dill is not available, use ¼ the amount of dried dill weed.)

Cheese Salad
(8-10 Servings)

12 hard-cooked eggs
1 pound Bel Paese (or other mild firm cheese)
2 cups sour cream
1 cup mayonnaise
2 tablespoons caraway seeds
2 tablespoons horseradish
Salt and pepper

Chop hard-cooked eggs; cut cheese in strips. In a bowl, blend sour cream, mayonnaise, caraway seeds, and horseradish. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Add eggs and cheese to dressing. Chill and serve.

A lively comment on plants, gardens, and gardeners

By ELVIN McDONALD

When I heard that the iris Winter Olympics had received the American Iris Society's highest honor, the Dykes Medal for 1967, I called the originator, Mrs. Tom Brown, to offer congratulations. She answered breathlessly, explaining that my call had caught her in a distant part of the garden. She had hybridized tall bearded irises for nearly 20 years before having one reach the top.

Winter Olympics is a wide-petaled, ruffled, white, white that forms a vigorous plant with prolific blooming habits. It bloomed the first time in 1959, and by 1961 it was being observed in official trials of the American Iris Society. Since then it has won no less than eight awards of major importance in the iris world.

The home of Winter Olympics is Brown's Sunnyhill Gardens in Walla Walla, Washington, where Mr. and Mrs. Tom Brown have been growing irises commercially for 15 years. Mrs. Brown first became interested in irises about 1940. The results of years of serious hybridizing are now beginning to be realized. As Winter Olympics draws international attention to her work, we see the promise of five new varieties that have recently received Awards of Merit, and several with Honorable Mentions. Also on the way from Mrs. Brown are some new dwarf irises, notably a little pink that should be available in a year or two.

Through the pages of Stanley Schuler's new book, America's Great Private Gardens (Macmillan, New York, $17.50), you can take a grand tour of 36 gardens that are not open to the public. It is to be expected that a book of this type would be lavishly illustrated—and there are 160 photographs, 38 of them in full color—but the special pleasure of this volume is the author's text, which provides keen insight into the individual gardens, owners, and landscape architects. Even if these gardens were accessible to the public, it is highly improbable that interesting and useful information of this nature would be available.

Quite the opposite of Mr. Schuler's book is the Directory of Public Gardens and Nature Sanctuaries, which has just been published by the Horticultural Society of New York. This helpful bulletin covers places of horticultural and natural interest in the New York metropolitan area. Copies are available at $1 each from the Society, at Essex House, 160 Central Park South, New York, New York 10019.

HF-

The other evening, walking in New York's Greenwich Village, I chanced to notice that the window of a Chinese laundry was filled with Chinese evergreens. My immediate reaction was one of amusement, but the plants were so well grown, I stopped to admire them. In fact, they were so luxuriant I decided to go in and inquire of the owner how he grew them. Obviously, the place was often steamy and damp—much to the liking of Chinese evergreens—but there was plenty of fresh air too, the door being left open in summer, and customers coming in and out in the winter. Another thing—the plants were in the window, where bright light reached them all day long, and direct sun warmed them for a few hours daily in the winter months. Someone kept the soil moist, if not wet, all the time, and also trimmed away yellowing leaves. The foliage was so clean and shiny, I asked how this was possible in the city. The answer? Every month or so they get a shower in the sink.

Plain Chinese evergreen—Aglaonema modestum—is often cultivated temporarily as a water plant. For permanency, use a mixture of equal parts peat moss, garden soil, vermiculite, and perlite (or sand). Aglaonemas are close relatives of philodendrons, and equally at home indoors. There are several attractive kinds available from growers of tropical foliage plants. A. marantifolium tricolor has silver-marked green leaves, pink stems, and red berries. A. pictum is similar to the common type, but the leaves are generously splashed with silver. A. pseudo-bracteatum has creamy white, yellow, and chartreuse markings on a plain green background. Its variety Pewter replaces yellow with silvery gray-green markings. A. treubi, a small plant, has slender leaves variegated with creamy lime.

Sta-Set is a new product that has arrived just in time for holiday floral decorations. It comes packaged as a powdery mixture to which water is added to form a material of putty consistency. In this state the Sta-Set may be shaped into almost any form. Once it has dried, the material takes on a neutral greige coloring. Flowers and foliage may be inserted into Sta-Set, and once put, they stay put; or they can be moved freely until the desired effect is achieved. Sta-Set keeps cut flowers as fresh as if they were in water, and once they wither, it can be used again and again with new flowers. For a local source, write the Plantabbs Corporation, Timonium, Md. 21093.

I have always thought of bonsai—the ancient art of dwarfing trees—as traditionally Japanese, and so it is, but members of the newly formed American Bonsai Society see new horizons for bonsai as an American art. Jerald P. Stowell, author of Bonsai: Indoors and Out, was elected the first president at a meeting of the Society in May. In his book, Mr. Stowell used no Japanese names. He writes, "This is not because I do not respect the originators of the art of bonsai—indeed, I am indebted to the Japanese master, Yuji Yoshimura, to whom I dedicated my book—but because I believe the art can be more than exported to America. I believe it can be translated into an art of American bonsai."

The Society has 15 directors, representing various parts of the country, who will help make its quarterly magazine meaningful for all persons in all climates. Editorial leadership is quite outstanding—it includes, for example, Ernesta Drinker Ballard, author of The Art of Training Plants, and George F. Hull, author of Bonsai for Americans. To join, send dues of $5 (for one year) to the Society at P.O. Box 95, Bedford, N.Y.

Three new books published this season brim with ideas for holiday decorations. Nora Fields has written New Ideas for Christmas Decorations (Hearthside, New York, $4.95). From Helen S.W. Goddard comes The Gardener's Christmas Book (Macmillan, New York, $5.95); and from John Burton Brimer comes Christmas All Through the House (Funk & Wagnalls, New York, $7.50). Each book offers a collection of ideas for decking the house in the spirit of the season. ■ village of St.-Cirq-Lapopie, one of the country's most charming places of the past. Mercuès, highly favored by the French themselves, is open from May to October, needs advance reservations.

Recommended to the gastronomically inclined who are planning to motor through offbeat areas is a little booklet called "Relais de Campagne," which lists inns and out-of-the-way stopping-off places that many travelers have found quite dependable. It's available from the French Government Tourist Office, 610 Fifth Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022.

Among the international coterie, Harry's Bar in Venice continues as a favorite fun place where your neighbor can be a duke or a jockey, a movie star or a Roman matron. This glamorous cachet, however, tends to overshadow the fact that this is also a place to enjoy the good dishes of the Veneto, under the aegis of its founder and owner, Giuseppe Cipriani. This host, besides being a catalyst with people, is something of an artist in the selection of food and wine. His son "Erigo" now keeps an eye on Harry's, while Signor Cipriani oversees his delightful summertime Locando Cipriani, a garden restaurant on the island of Torcello which attracts many of the same people when they have the urge to eat alfresco. The menu stars incredibly delicate pasta, beautiful fish, and regional wines that taste as good as they sound. Meantime, at the Cipriani Hotel, across the Grand Canal on the Giudecca, an Olympic swimming pool will be ready by next spring. Poolside meals of typical Cipriani standards will be served here, and Signor Cipriani will undoubtedly have created another "in" spot. Forecast for a future day in Venice: swimming, bronzing, and lunching at the pool, followed by a dash across the water for cocktails at Harry's Bar.

Night life in Venice should include a performance at the delightful 1781 Fenice Theatre and end with supper dancing on the roof of the Royal Danieli. The restaurant atop this hotel, which was once a patrician palace, is a marvelous modern tour de force, its windows designed to frame views of Venice like pictures on postcards. On a sunny day, luncheon up here is as good as a grand tour of Venetian architectu Elegant new Centura Rim-Line. After you've used it a few times you'll discover it's more than just elegant.

You know how it is. Family or friends drop in and while they're oo-ing and ah-ing over your beautiful dinnerware, somebody's little one knocks over a plate.

And later, when your sister-in-law finally decides to help you clear the table, oops! There goes a cup and suddenly your service for 8 is now service for 7.

We know how it is, too. That's why we created Centura Tableware, the first fine ceramic dinnerware without a breakage worry. The new Centura Rim-Line is elegant, lovely and sophisticated, yet tough enough for everyday use because it's made from Corning's unique Pyroceram® brand material.

Centura Rim-Line has the classic shape: a graceful rim that surrounds your plates and bowls with an edging of pure elegance.

The patterns are classic, too: White, Gold Edge, and Platinum Edge. Even the cup is destined to be a classic. It's tall, straight-sided and especially created to accent and highlight the Centura Rim-Line look.

But Centura Rim Line is more than just beautiful. Despite its delicate look, it's remarkably strong and completely dishwasher-proof, even if that dishwasher is your husband.

In fact, Centura Tableware resists those bound-to-happen bumps and bruises so well, if any piece breaks, chips, or cracks within three years, we'll replace it. Free.*

Yet a five-piece place setting in White is just $9.00. Companion cook-and-serve pieces and beverage makers are equally affordable. And you can buy Centura Rim-Line any way you want—you pay no extra for a piece, whether you buy it singly, in a place setting, or as part of a complete set.

You'll find Centura Rim-Line wherever fine china is sold. Just ask for the dinnerware that's more than just elegant.

Centura® Tableware by Corning

*Corning promises to replace any piece of CENTURA Tableware if it breaks, chips, cracks, crazes, or its decoration wears off in three years of normal household use. Pieces bearing ✳ will be replaced if ever broken from temperature extremes. Just return the pieces to a CENTURA Tableware Dealer. Corning Glass Works, Corning, N.Y.

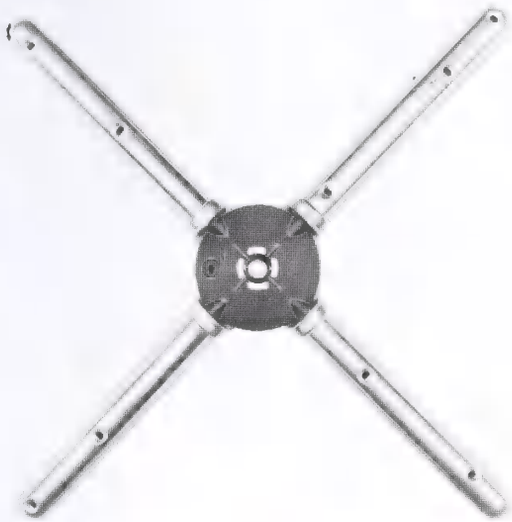
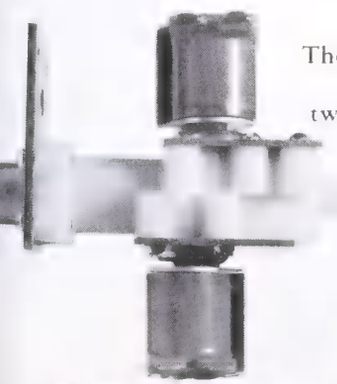
Little things mean a lot in a KitchenAid dishwasher.

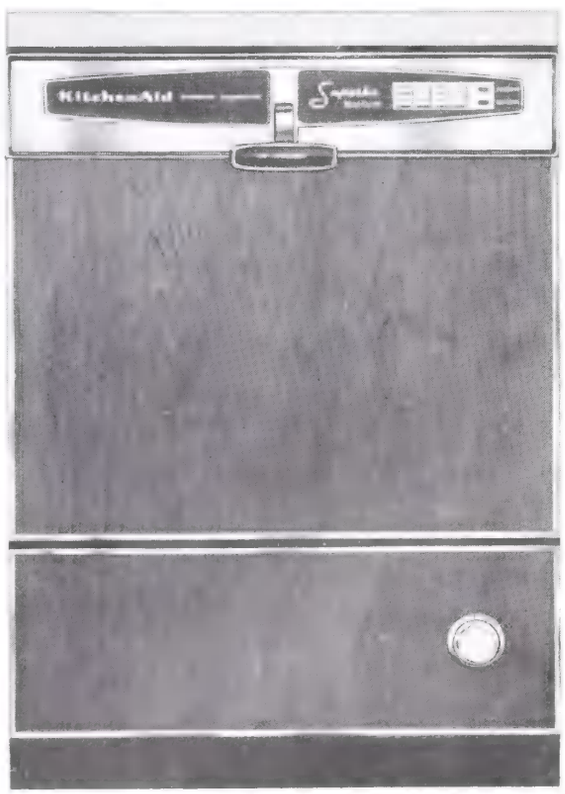


At KitchenAid, we finish the inside of our wash chambers with our exclusive 3-coat porcelain enamel, TriDura™. It resists stains, food acids, abrasion and corrosion. And stays beautiful for years.



This is our motor. We know it's dependable because we design it ourselves, exclusively for our dishwashers. It has more washing power because it has more horsepower—a full 1/2 h.p. (Most other dishwasher motors are only 1/7 to 1/3 h.p.)

This special cycle—SaniCycle—gives extra health protection against bacteria by giving dishes a final rinse in water preheated to 180°.



This sturdy stainless steel wash arm is the heart of the Hydro Sweep wash system. It makes everything you put inside a KitchenAid dishwasher come out sparkling clean. Everything.

The odds are about a million to one against this special twin fill valve jamming open and letting a KitchenAid dishwasher overflow. No other fill valve gives you as much protection against flooding.

This is the package these little things come in. The KitchenAid Superba VariCycle Dishwasher.

Maybe you wonder why we're so fussy about little things. It's simple. It's the little things that make KitchenAid dishwashers work better and last longer. For more details see your dealer (check the Yellow Pages). Or write.

ILLUSTRATIONS BY JOSEPH LA

CLUSTER AROUND A COURT

A superb concept for privacy has been developed with excellent taste by a prominent home builder of Ohio

Almost totally inner-directed, this cluster house overcomes the basic problem of living on the average small suburban lot: uncomfortable proximity to neighboring houses and the street, on land that is essentially treeless. This grouping of modules makes its own private environment. Glass patio doors, the major source of daylight, open from the master bedroom, living, and family rooms to a fenced inner court, offering seclusion outdoors.

By enclosing each living complex in a separate structure, Architect Edward A. Schmitt was free to lay out an adult wing totally apart from the children's bedrooms. In this arrangement, the parents often use the living room as a bedroom sitting area, while the children take over the family room. The study is highly useful as a guest room, hobby and homework area, or office.

Cedar shakes cover the roof; on the sidewalls is an experimental Formica siding, soon to be marketed. An unusual sense of space is produced by ceilings that rise to nine feet. One of a kind at about $43,000, the house may serve as a prototype for similar homes. For more information, write the builder, Bob Schmitt Homes, P.O. Box 160, Berea, Ohio 44017.

Only one car can make a Cadillac owner look twice.

Longtime Cadillac owners, accustomed to the finest, have high regard for the spirited glamour of the 1968 Fleetwood Eldorado—the world's finest personal car. While they may prefer one of Cadillac's more traditionally styled models, they admire the bold concept of the Fleetwood Eldorado. For it reflects the vitality of every one of Cadillac's eleven 1968 models, each powered this year by the new 472 V-8—biggest, smoothest V-8 engine ever put into passenger car production. Shouldn't you, too, give Cadillac a second look?

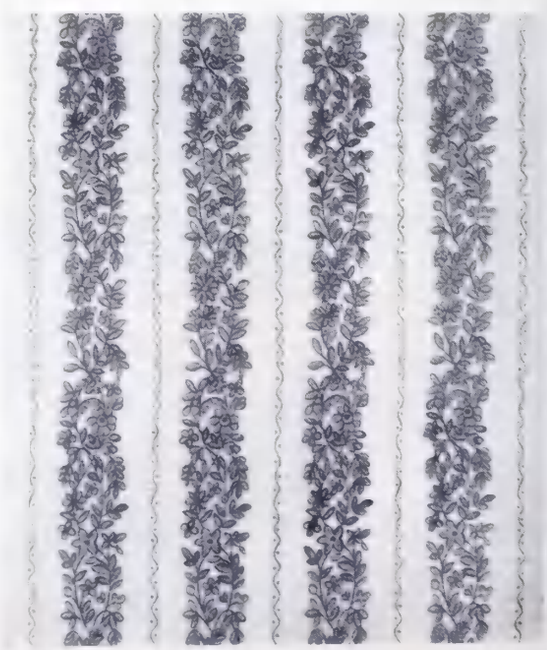
DECORATOR'S DIARY

Something new in home furnishings and how one decorator made the most of it.

"I wonder how many people have one of these things, let alone two," Iris Farmer mused. We were standing in her mother's attic gazing upon two caneback mahogany loveseats wearily upholstered in blue cut velvet. These were reputed to have been the most voguish investment her grandmother had ever made, back in 1915 when there seems to have been a brief flurry of excitement about furniture that looked Adam. The loveseat frames were carved with chaste urns and simple fluting, the tall legs were reeded, and the caning of the rounded backs was miraculously intact.

"They were willed to me, you know," said Iris, "and now Mother insists that she will store them no longer. Do you think I might sell them?"

"Not very profitably," said I. "They are not really antiques—just elderly pieces of what's been called 'pseudish' design—but, on the other hand, they're charming, if you put your mind to it."



"Charming! Wouldn't y

know a fabric that could provide all the frills those little girls dream of and all the toughness a practical-minded mother could pray for. It's 100 percent Dacron batiste, astoundingly durable, drip-dryable, and no-ironable—but it's chiffon—sheer, crisp enough to ruffle like a charm and supple enough to drape like a bride's veil."

"You're suggesting an all-white room for those grubby little rascals?"

"No, not at all—and that's another blessing of this stuff. E.C. Carter & Son have just done a delightful group of prints on Dacron sheer—flowery, lacy, summer-garden kinds of patterns, even including a flight of butterflies—in lovely, characterful pastels like lime and heather and carnation-pink and olive. They are a firm that have made a name for themselves in embroidered fabrics, and, right in character, these new prints look almost as if they'd been embroidered on batiste. And, that, strange to say, gives this cast-iron fluff the gift of concealing soil."

"Lead me to it," demanded Iris, with the result that in the Greeff showroom where this new Minuette Collection can be seen, she immediately chose "Elissa," a vine-climbing stripe of tiny leaves and flowerets. It's a Directoire-flavored pattern that really knows no period and couldn't be prettier with those Adamesque loveseat-beds. It comes in olive, blue, aqua, or gold on white, and 48" wide—a workable width for everything from curtains to bedspreads to dust ruffles to dressing-table skirts. And those two glamour-happy tomboys now live rather elegantly with all of them, in the olive-green choice. We lined the bedspreads with percale, of course, to give the sheer fabric body, and our curtains combine the print with a solid-white Dacron sheer called "Juliet."—M.G.

HOW TO SELL YOUR HOME FOR THE BEST PRICE

By RICHARD BEAMISH

Many homeowners could sell their properties for thousands of dollars more if they paid greater attention to the simple but all-important finishing touches. My wife and I, whose work it has been to find, fix, and resell real estate, would like to share some of the easy secrets (many learned the hard way) that have helped us sell our houses quickly and for the price we wanted.

Amazingly few properties are seen at their best by prospective buyers. For one thing, sellers frequently neglect many of these obvious, inexpensive touches. Yet what could be simpler than building a children's sandbox, making window boxes, or putting up a hammock?

Here's an example of how an extra $12 investment clinched a sale. The outstanding feature of one of our properties was a peaceful lawn with a magnificent shade tree. A lovely setting—yet just as choice food needs seasoning, this yard needed something to bring out the tranquil, parklike flavor. Then it dawned on us. A picnic bench would enhance and direct attention to our strongest selling point. We bought one on sale and stationed it under the tree. Now prospective buyers could see exactly how they might enjoy this pleasant spot.

A young couple looked at the house; they were interested but not sold. Then they spotted the picnic bench. Their faces brightened. "Does that go with the house?" they asked. It did indeed, and the house was sold for our asking price.

From then on, we made sure that prospects could visualize the recreational opportunities of every lawn, patio, sundeck, and backyard. A favorite finishing touch was a swing suspended from a tree bough, or a sandbox containing clean, white sa a toy pail and shovel. W prospect arrived with hi dren, we'd invite the you to use the swing or play sand while their parents through the house. Afte the kids were often hav much fun they didn't want Thus a compelling selling had been made, and the m fective salesmen enlisted.

A hammock, hung in quiet spot, can help win th of a male prospect. So workbench, set up in the ment or garage, with tools ingly arranged on a peg Lounge chairs in the sun, p barbecue on the patio, play the deck, fenced area for children in the backyard, ging badminton net on th all emphasize a property's ure potential. (A word of ing: Don't encourage house hunters to try out th minton. We lost a good p that way when he sprai ankle!)

With one property, we attention on the advanta the rural neighborhood by ing a neighbor's pony in ple backyard. ("No," we answer more than once, "th does not go with the h With another property, structed a safe, simple tre that would appeal to childr later discovered it also a to the buyer, who retreate on weekends to draw carto

Tree trimming can be a able finishing touch. Fifty worth of tree work opene million-dollar view from our houses. Another tir removal of a few boughs formed a dark, damp yard bright, sunny one.

Fresh paint, of course, mendously enhance a hou ding the owner does not indulge s distinctive tastes. A passion r purple, for example, is by no eans universal. A lavender living om usually arouses more aver- on than ecstasy, as will tur- uoise trim on the exterior of an herwise widely appealing house. 's the same with all striking and ntrasting colors (orange, apple reen, strawberry red, etc.), so hen sprucing up for resale, it's lvisable to stay with soft, subtle nes that please almost every- ody.

Outside as well, it pays not to t too personal. One Spanish- yle house we saw had a yard ll of cactus—to the nostalgic elight of the owner, who came om Arizona, but to the dismay confirmed cactus-haters from ore northerly climes. In front another house, an owner had stalled a deep goldfish pond. or him it was a charming little sis, but many parents saw it ly as a hazard for their young ildren.

Flowers can be excellent sales- en. A nice garden is always a elight, but sellers often overlook underestimate the value of stra- gically placed plants and cut owers (especially desirable for ty properties with limited yard ace). Brimming from window oxes and from hanging pots on a ont porch, decorating a deck or balcony, flowers add color and armth—and sales appeal—to any operty.

Perhaps most useful of all, wever, is the unfinished touch. ie discovery of hidden potential ptivates many a buyer, and the portunity for future expansion n be a great comfort to him. rthermore, by leaving some- ing undone, the seller enables e buyer to put his own imprint the property while adding to value as well. To be sure hid- n potential isn't too hidden. 've often excavated part of a llar or partitioned a section of e attic. The urge to improve-it- urself was so strong in one buy- that he'd converted half the sement into a billiards room fore the sale had even cleared crow.

When a person wants to sell nself to an employer, client, or his girl, he goes all out to ake a good impression. He's at, well-groomed, suitably essed. He tries to appear fresh and bright. Yet most people dis- regard these same rules when it comes to selling property.

How often we've entered an at- tractive home to be greeted with the odor of frying fish or boiling cabbage, or been suffocated by the musty, stale-tobacco smell of an airtight living room, or irri- tated by a blatting radio, TV, or yapping dog, or distracted by the clutter of toys, tools, clothes, dir- ty dishes, cosmetics, comic books, or newspapers (and, by the way, clutter reduces the impression of space way out of proportion to the amount it fills). And how of- ten we've been exasperated by the overeager agent or owner who harangues us, nonstop, with every real or imagined advantage of the property.

Everyone knows a dark room is a gloomy one, yet frequently our first (and lasting) impression of a house is that of a depressing, smoky, dimly lit, TV-dominated living room. And how many times we've seen how little, niggling things—sticking door, rust-stained bathtub, mildewed shower cur- tain, junk-jammed garage—add up to a NO SALE.

From our observations of other properties, as well as a good deal of trial and error on our own, we've found four simple steps for successful home showing:

1. Let there be light! And fresh air! And no unpleasant smells!
2. Avoid clutter. A house should look lived in, not rioted in. Pick up, put away, straight- en out—dust, sweep, vacuum. Outside: mow, trim, and weed.
3. Create atmosphere. Good paintings and prints (which we rent from a gallery), soft music, crackling fire, coffee and cup- cakes, child romping joyously on lawn, husband luxuriating in hammock, etc., help put pros- pect in a buying mood.
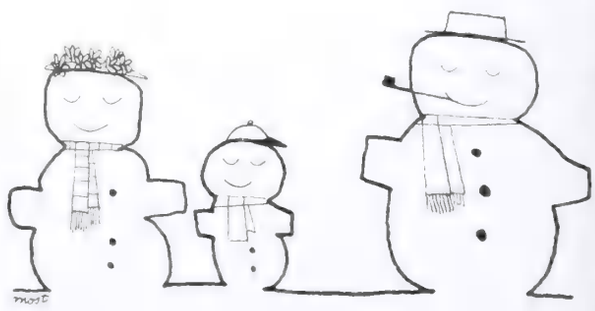
4. Help the prospect—don't hurry him. If you're showing the property yourself, answer questions succinctly and point out, as unobtrusively as possi- ble, less obvious advantages (e.g., new roof, large-capacity water heater, possibilities for expansion, low down payment, proximity to schools). Don't hover anxiously and don't talk too much. Encourage interested prospects to wander about at will, uninhibited by your presence.



Of course, keeping a property "tuned up" for showing can be a frantic and exhausting job for the lady of the house, especially when there are also a husband, children, and regular housework to take care of. But my wife found it's worth the trouble. One morning for example, Sue answered the phone at 8:30. A couple from Ohio, who planned to fly home at noon, wanted to see the house at 9:30. Sue took a deep breath and started running. She rushed our six-year-old daughter off to school, crammed breakfast dishes into the dishwasher, cleared counters, flung open doors and windows, threw scattered toys into a toy box, stacked logs in the fireplace, snatched half-damp nylons from the shower rod and thrust them into a drawer, replaced drooping laurel branches in the urn by the front door, sponged jelly off a doorknob, swept the entranceway, emptied ashtrays, scooped a scattered jigsaw puzzle from the coffee table and stuffed it under a chair cushion, plumped sofa pillows, planted two-year-old Julie in the sandbox outside, tightened the sagging badminton net, put on coffee, changed from dungarees and workshirt to a skirt and blouse. Just as she was lowering the phonograph needle on a Chopin nocturne, the prospects pulled into the driveway.

It was probably the most hectic hour of Sue's life, but may also have been the most profitable. The Ohio couple bought the house for our $31,500 asking price, which was 50 percent more than we had paid for it 18 months ea (And jolly Julie earned a do decker ice-cream cone for cor ingly demonstrating, as ou vertisement claimed, that property was "ideal for dren.")

NOBODY EVER TELLS YOU THESE THINGS

—about food and drink

By HELEN McCULLY

From the kitchen of our food editor come helpful answers to some of the common but often puzzling questions in cookery

Are double consommé and condensed beef broth (bouillon) comparable? In many respects. Consommé or bouillon (they are synonymous) is a soup made with beef, poultry, game or fish bones, vegetables, and seasonings, and simmered for a very long time to concentrate the flavors, then strained. The French call this consommé simple. It can be drunk as is or it can be used as a base to make other soups, to cook other foods, to make sauces, etc. Double consommé is consommé simple that has been clarified to remove all extraneous matter, which further concentrates the flavors. The result is an absolutely clear, usually golden liquid that may or may not "gel" depending on the amount of natural gelatin derived from the ingredients used. It can be served hot or cold with or without garnishes, and it is, of course, the base for savory aspics. Innumerable clear soups "call for" double consommé, a familiar one being madrilene, meaning Madrid style, which is made with chicken consommé flavored with fresh tomatoes and sweet red peppers, traditionally served cold. Condensed beef broth, also called bouillon, and condensed chicken broth, both commercial, canned products, strained but not clarified, are so highly concentrated they can be diluted with water, half and half. However, this writer prefers to use them full strength. They, too, can be clarified and used as you would double consommé or turned into aspics by the addition of unflavored gelatin. Lacking homemade broth, these are well-qualified substitutes. As a matter of record, there is no commercial fish bouillon on the market, but clam juice is a reasonable equivalent.

What exactly is mincemeat? You have to go back a long way. "Mynce pyes" were served at the crowning of Henry V in the 15th Century. The original combination was something to give one pause: duck, rabbit, pigeon, goose, partridge, curlew (apparently the equivalent of the modern quail), neat's tongue (actually, ox tongue), woodcock, and blackbird. The whole bound together with flour and butter. By Samuel Pepys' time, mince pies were essentially meat dishes flavored with spices and fruits. His wife, he reported in his diary dated Christmas 1666, had overslept because she had sat up until four o'clock that morning to see the mince pie properly finished for dinner.

Mince pies have had rough sledding. They were banned in Cromwell's day; and in this country in the middle of the 19th Century, there were no mince pies in New England because of a religious argument over the shape and meaning of the pies. The variations on the recipe are almost endless but, essentially, it is a mixture of dried fruits (raisin, citron, currant), beef and suet, apples, almonds, sugar, spices, and brandy, etc., baked in pastry. The modern ready-to-use commercial mincemeats are so good it seems almost ridiculous for a woman to make her own.

How do you make perfect croutons? Take firm bread, preferably day-old, and cut in shapes such as small cubes, triangles, rounds, etc. One way: Fry in butter and vegetable oil, half and half, or clarified butter, until golden all over. As they brown, lift out of the fat with a slotted spoon onto paper toweling. Another way: Butter the bread generously, cut into the shapes you want, then bake in a preheated 275° oven until crisp and golden—30 minutes or so.

How do you make French dressing properly? The standard proportions are three parts oil (olive, vegetable, or half olive and half vegetable) to one part vinegar (wine, herb, or cider) with salt and freshly ground pepper to taste. It does not need further seasoning. However, a soupçon of prepared mustard can be added, or garlic to the extent you like it, or fresh herbs, minced. Mrs. Elizabeth David, the great English food authority, says: "To my mind, these proportions are too vinegary. I seldom use less than six times as much oil as vinegar." For the interested cook, it is worth doing a bit of experimenting. Note: This dressing is called Sauce Vinaigrette in France, and although some American recipes call for a dash of sugar, it is not done by the French nor is it an improvement.

What is buttermilk? It's the product that remains when fat is removed from milk or cream, sweet or sour, in the process of churning. Actually, the buttermilk you buy today is cultured buttermilk made by coagulating pasteurized skim milk with lactic bacteria. In some instances you may find bits of butter in the milk which are added by the dairy to give that special flavor buttermilk drinkers love. Buttermilk has all the nutrition and the few calories of skim milk, but has added flavor. In cooking, buttermilk is used in making biscuits, rolls, corn bread,

Is chocolate milk the same thing as chocolate drink? No, although both are made from whole milk with chocolate and sugar added. Today's Food Market, published by Kansas State University, says: "With chocolate drink, sometimes called chocolate dairy drink, the amount of butterfat is less than the 3¼ percent required in whole milk. The drink may also be made of skim milk, which has no butterfat at all."

Are fortune cookies really Chinese? No. In a fairly recent cookbook, The Thousand Recipe Chinese Cookbook, the author, Gloria Bley Miller, writes as follows: "The fortune cookie, unknown in China, seems to be Western-inspired, although its origins are obscure." Apparently, they were invented by Chinese restaurateurs but on the wrong side of the Pacific.

Is a Pouilly Fumé wine the same as a Pouilly Fuissé? No. They are both excellent dry white wines produced from different grapes and in different sections of France. Pouilly Fumé (also known as Pouilly-Blanc-Fumé), made from Sauvignon Blanc or Blanc-Fumé grapes, is produced around the village of Pouilly-sur-Loire; Pouilly Fuissé, from Chardonnay grapes, is produced in four small communes in Southern Burgundy.

Can you forestall fresh fruits from freezing in homemade ice cream? Yes. Completely cover prepared fruits with spirits such as Cognac, rum, kirsch, etc., and allow to stand for several hours, before combining with ice-cream mixture. The addition of the alcohol, which won't freeze, helps to solve the problem. Use the leftover liqueur to flavor some other sweet dish.

House Beautiful's ADDRESS BOOK

By EPSIE KINARD

I'd like to fill some antique porcelain jars that I have with a spicy potpourri to give as Christmas gifts, a Louisville, Kentucky reader writes. Who has a mixture in bulk that doesn't smell like straw after a couple of whiffs?

Cambridge Chemists, 702 Madison Avenue, New York City, imports a potent English blend. After a year, the dying-out fragrance can be revived. Made by an old apothecary recipe, the mixture's 60 ingredients include many rare, lastingly scented herbs, spices, sweet roots, grasses, and pungent seeds to give strong support to dried rosebuds and violet and mimosa petals.

A four-ounce box costs $4.50, a 14-ounce canister, $9.75, plus tax and postage. A reviver oil, ten to 20 drops of which will make fading fragrance bloom again, costs $1.50 per bottle.

Anyone in your little black book who can make a display device for a superb Conus gloria-maris, the queen of my mother's sea-shell collection, asks a Canton, Ohio reader.

Stix Rare Shells, 13 Vandam Street, New York City, a craftsman-sculptor, man-and-wife team, mounts some of the country's finest shell collections. They make a nontarnishable brass stand in a half-round or a half-oval style which holds a single shell firm and creates a look of suspension. Such a stand can be used to mount a Russian Easter egg, a semiprecious stone, a thunder rock, a miniature pre-Columbian head of clay, and other artifacts. Prices of stands, prepaid: $12 for 2″ to 4½″ openings; $15 for 5″ to 8″ openings.

My teen-age son, a poster buff, wants to decorate his room with reproductions of the front-pages of newspapers covering great events. Where can I find? a Paducah, Kentucky reader writes.

The New York Times offers two-color, front-page blowups (21″ by 28″) of great 20th-century happenings. Printed in black on bright pink, green, or blue paper, the six headliner categories include: 1. Politics (James Cox nominated for U.S. President); 2. Religion (trial of John Thomas Scopes for teaching evolution); 3. Gambling (the White Sox sports scandal); 4. Drinking (the end of Prohibition); 5. The first nonstop Atlantic flight; 6. The Russian Revolution. Prices range from $1.35 for one poster to $6.05 for six. Send order, indicating category desired by number, with check payable to New York Times, to Front-Page Posters, P.O. Box 551, New York, N.Y. 10036

Where can I get a display stand for a Distinguished Service Cross, the decoration most highly esteemed by our family? asks a New York City reader.

Small domes of heavy crystal, available from Downs, Evanston, Illinois 60204, Department 1112, range in graduated sizes from 3″ by 4½″ for $2.98 to 13″ by 27″ for $81. The smallest size that best displays a D.S.C., Navy Cross, or other medal, antique watch, piece of heirloom jewelry, or other small treasure, has a hook for hanging such objects. Antique dolls, clocks, statuary, and figurines fit into taller domes. All domes are removable from their solid-wood bases of mahogany, walnut, or teak-finished wood. ■

Just place it where you need it and melt snow on landings, ramps, driveways, porches. Keeps walks safe all winter long yet operates on ordinary house current for as little as 1¼¢ per hour. Here's a tip: melt ice on long areas by moving the mat along and you'll never have to shovel walks again. Absolutely safe to use. 18" wide.

IOW TO TURN YOUR CHILD ITO A CLASSROOM WIZARD

NE M. SCHWARTZ AND HIS SON MICHAEL

ather worries about the kind of education his son is getnen that father is also president of a publishing company zes in modern learning methods—then sparks really fly.
ast eight years, Gene Schwartz has worked with some of s leading pioneers in deutro-learning, the modern science how to learn. As writer, editor or publisher, he has been in bringing to the American public, books on Memory
t, Executive Training Techniques, High-Speed Learning. inking, Problem-Solving, and Time Organization. not adapt these incredibly powerful learning break-the problems faced by children of all ages in their class-s is the goal of this book! "The job was too important to nsone else," Mr. Schwartz says. "I had to do it myself!"

Here at last is your chance to make such an overwhelming difference in your child's performance in school — in as little as five short minutes of your time every day — that the teacher may actually call you up to see what happened!

Let me explain! I don't care whether your child is six years old or twenty—boy or girl—in grade school, high school or college! It makes no difference how difficult it is for that child to concentrate today . . . how poor his memory may be . . . how much a prisoner he is of crippling mental habits . . . how terrified he may be of mathematics, or grammar, or social studies, or even the hardest science course!

I believe that your child's mind is working today at only HALF its true power—simply because he has never been taught the right way to make his subjects half-teach themselves!

Simply because he has never been shown the few simple secrets of Speed Reading, that are taught in almost every university in the country today—and that let him flash through the printed page TWICE AS FAST as he can read today—with absolute understanding of every word!

Simply because he doesn't know the right way to feed his mind mathematical problems—so clearly and logically that those problems HALF-SOLVE THEMSELVES before he even touches them!

Simply because he doesn't know the right way to prepare for his tests—so completely that he actually knows as many as FOUR OUT OF FIVE of the questions that his teacher must ask him on that test, RIGHT DOWN TO THE VERY WORDS THAT THE TEACHER WILL USE TO PHRASE THOSE QUESTIONS!

Power-Studying Is A Trick! Your Child Can Master It In 5 Minutes A Day!

Yes! Speed-reading is a trick! Problem solving is a trick! Burning facts, figures, whole lessons into your child's mind is ■ trick! And, above all, taking the sting out of tests and making them half-answer themselves IS A TRICK! Top grades can be made to order; your child doesn't have to be a genius to get them!

The real secret of coaxing top grades out of your child is as simple as teaching him to tie his shoelace! You can do it in five minutes a day, SIMPLY BY SHOWING HIM THE RIGHT STUDY TECHNIQUES! Study techniques perfected by private-school teachers, professional tutors, writers of speed-teaching adult-education courses all over America!

Study techniques that you and your child probably never dreamed existed! So powerful that I'll prove them to you, without your risking a penny. Here's how.

After A Single Night His Teacher May Marvel At His Improvement!

Let me send you—at my risk—one of the most fascinating books you have ever read. When this book arrives, set aside just a few minutes. Get ready to see the incredible performance your child can give you ONCE YOU GIVE HIM THE PROPER MENTAL TOOLS!

What you are going to do, in this very first weekend, is this. You are going to make three simple tests with your child, each one of which will show him such a thrilling spurt in his ability to learn, that he may actually cry out with joy!

First, turn to page 87. Read this page alone—nothing more. Then ask your child to read to himself one page in any of his books. Time him. And then, simply take an ordinary pencil and place it between his teeth as we show you! NOW ask him to read another page! Time him again! AND THRILL TO THE SUDDEN BURST OF SPEED YOU HAVE LIBERATED, AS HIS EYES FLASH OVER THAT PRINTED PAGE!

But this is only the beginning! Second, turn to page 135. Glance over the fascinating word game you find there. Play this game with your child for five minutes. See for yourself how he enjoys it.

And then ask him – without his ever hearing them before, and without going to the dictionary – to give you the meaning of FIVE DIFFERENT FOUR-SYLLABLE WORDS, THAT WOULD STUMP MOST COLLEGE STUDENTS! And watch the excitement on his face as he reels off—easily and instantly—THE EXACT MEANING OF THOSE "IMPOSSIBLE" WORDS.

And now turn to page 145—and break mathematics wide open for him!

Yes! Teach him this one five minute secret! And then let him take any homework paper that's been turned back to him and have him do the problems again! And see for yourself that he now makes up to 20% FEWER ERRORS–UP TO ONE-FIFTH BETTER GRADES–ALL FROM ONE SIMPLE CHANGE IN HIS WORK HABITS!

Now Watch Him Shine In Math, English, Science!

Think of it! From this moment on, in only five short minutes a day, you begin applying these wonder-working techniques of Power Learning to every untrained corner of your child's mind! You begin breaking through mental barriers that have been blocking him for years!

You begin tapping the buried powers of your child's mind! Powers that you have glimpsed before in brief flashes – now brought to the surface–strengthened with simple formulas to double their potency –and placed forever at his beck and call, ready to astound his teacher at the blink of an eyelash! For example—

DOES HE MAKE THE SAME SPELLING ERRORS AGAIN AND AGAIN?

Then turn to page 125 . . . teach him three fun-filled tricks that burn the correct spelling of any word forever into his mind . . . and watch with astonishment from that day on, as he writes those former "trouble" words—automatically—as easily as he writes his own name!

DOES HE HAVE TROUBLE EXPRESSING HIMSELF IN CLASS?

Then turn to page 119 and see how incredibly easy it is to overcome shyness and uncertainty—make recitations sparkle — think instantly on his feet — build thought upon thought correctly and dramatically — reason logically – persuade others to his view – stand out head and shoulders above the rest of the class!

AND DOES HE FREEZE UP IN TESTS? FORGET MATERIAL HE KNEW PERFECTLY THE NIGHT BEFORE? RUN OUT OF TIME AND LEAVE HALF THE QUESTIONS UNANSWERED!

Then get ready for the revelation of your life starting on page 195! Just take one look at this complete armory of test-passing techniques—that remove all trace of nervousness and tension—that take all the trickery out of those double-meaning test questions—that practically pop right answers into his mind to even the hardest test questions, the instant he needs them!

Read It At My Risk!

What I've described to you on this page is only ■ small sampling of ■ revolutionary new book, HOW TO DOUBLE YOUR CHILD'S GRADES IN SCHOOL!

Here at last is a practical, easy-to-read book on improving your child's performance in class that really works! It is meant for every child—6 or 20—boy or girl!

It brings that child—overnight—incredibly powerful new study techniques that he probably never even dreamed existed before! Study techniques perfected by private-school teachers, by professional tutors, by writers of speed-teaching adult-education courses all over America!

Yes! Rapid-study techniques, that produce twice as much homework, in half the time! Flash-reading techniques, that pick out the CORE of an assignment, ■■ fast as your child's eyes flash over the page!

Word-building techniques, that can double your child's vocabulary in ■ few short weeks! Instant-problem-solving techniques, that give him the answer to "jaw-breaker" math problems as easy as 1-2-3.

And—above all—a complete armory of test-passing techniques—that can literally DOUBLE the grades of your child in every one of his classes in school! That can turn D's and C's into B's or even A's! That can turn 60's or 70's or 80's into 80's or 90's or even 100's! THAT CAN UNLOCK THE TRUE, NATURAL ABILITY OF YOUR CHILD THAT IS BEING TRAGICALLY HALF-WASTED TODAY! AND PUT HIM ON THE ROAD TO THE COLLEGE AND FUTURE OF HIS CHOICE—TODAY!

The price of this revolutionary new book is only $5.98. But you prove it at our risk for ten days! It must do everything we say—or every cent of your money back immediately! Try it—TODAY!

They are crafted from genuine whale-tooth ivory, beautifully, intricately engraved, entirely by hand, with Early-American schooners, circa 1782. Each is a work of art—no two sets exactly alike! Mountings and rims heavily gold-plated. Included: fascinating history of "Scrimshaw." Supplies limited—please hurry.

SHE NEEDS YOUR LOVE

Little Mie-Wen in Formosa already knows many things . . . the gnawing of hunger . . . the shivering of fear . . . the misery of being unwanted.

But she has never known love. Her mother died when she was born. Her father was poor—and didn't want a girl child. So Mie-Wen has spent her baby years without the affection and security every child craves.

Your love can give Mie-Wen, and children just as needy, the privileges you would wish for your own child.

Through Christian Children's Fund you can sponsor one of these youngsters. We use the word sponsor to symbolize the bond of love that exists between you and the child.

The cost? Only $12 a month. Your love is demonstrated in a practical way because your money helps with nourishing meals . . . medical care . . . warm clothing . . . education . . . understanding housemothers . . .

And in return you will receive your child's personal history, photograph, plus a description of the orphanage where your child lives. You can write and send packages. Your child will know who you are and will answer your letters. Correspondence is translated at our overseas offices.

(If you want your child to have a special gift— a pair of shoes, a warm jacket, a fuzzy bear—you can send your check to our office, and the entire amount will be forwarded, along with your instructions.)

Will you help? Requests come from orphanages every day. And they are urgent. Children wrapping rags on their feet, school books years out of date, milk supplies exhausted, babies abandoned by unwed mothers.

Since 1938, thousands of American sponsors have found this to be an intimate person-to-person way of sharing their blessings with youngsters around the world.

Little Mie-Wen and children like her need your love—won't you help? Today?

HOW TO PLAY GOLF in the LOW 120's

As can be observed from the title, this is a witty commentary on the sport. Stephen Baker's humor is gay and light, and will entertain even someone who's never held a driver or wedge in his interlocking grip, let alone avidly followed the career of Arnie Palmer! A golfer will all but roll on the floor when he reads this book and will pass it on to his buddies.

AMBROSIA

Just picture these irresistible kittens in your own home. Everyone who sees these appealing waifs falls in love with their adorable warmth and touching wide eyes. You simply want to take them into your home and into your heart. That's because the artist, Gig, one of America's most perceptive painters of animals, has captured the universal appeal and charm of these intriguing felines. Under his sensitive brush, the wistful quality of kittens and the realistic backgrounds combine to give a compassionate glimpse of life. Unfortunately the black and white illustrations here cannot possibly convey all the artist's magical colors and exquisite details. Only when you see them in your home can you fully appreciate their magnificent artistry and exquisite beauty.

OFFER WILL NOT BE REPEATED THIS SEASON

We urge you to order your full color prints now while the supply lasts. The dramatic portraiture of animals is the latest decorator rage, and these are certain to go quickly. In order to show some of the craftsmanship and intricate detail in all the pictures, we have shown one picture larger than the rest. Actually all four fine art prints are the same size, a full 10" x 14" decorator size. So hurry, order now, offer will not be repeated this season in this magazine.

WE'LL BET YOU $4.95

we can make you STOP SMOKING in just 6 weeks

You know cigarette smoking is dangerous — but you still smoke.

All right — we'll bet you $4.95 we can make you taper off gradually . . . then stop smoking altogether in just 6 weeks.

Here's why we are willing to make this bet.

Smoking is a habit. If you try to break the habit all at once, the sudden change may be too much for you. But there's another way, which gives your will power an assist. It's called The Count•Down Program To Taper Off Gradually — Then Stop Smoking Altogether In Just 6 Weeks. And it's all based on a beautifully styled, precision-engineered cigarette holder called Count•Down which is designed to help men and women cut down ever so gradually on the amount of smoke inhaled until finally they're off smoking completely.

The Count•Down® Cigarette Holder

The Count•Down Cigarette Holder is a scientifically designed patented product with a dial for various "smoke" settings -- 100%—80%—60%—40%—20%—0%. If you set the dial at "100," you get 100% smoke. Twist the dial to "80" and you get 80% smoke and 20% cool, smoke-free air and so on. Thus by simply turning the dial you can gradually cut down on the concentration of the smoke you inhale.

The Count•Down Program To Taper Off Gradually — Then Stop Smoking Altogether in Just 6 Weeks.

Set the dial at 100 and use it for one full week at this setting. The second week, set it at 80. Then at 60 for the third week — 40 for the fourth week — 20 for the fifth week — and finally click the dial to zero for the sixth week — and you're off smoking!

HERE'S OUR BET IN DETAIL

You purchase one Count•Down Cigarette Holder for just $4.95 and follow the Count•Down Program To Taper Off Gradually — Then Stop Smoking Altogether for 6 weeks. Our bet is that when you've completed the program you'll stay "weaned" from cigarette smoking. If you do, we'll keep the $4.95 you paid for the Count•Down Cigarette Holder. However, if you go back to cigarette smoking again — just let us know within 4 months after we ship you your holder and we'll send you back your $4.95! You don't even have to return the precision-engineered Count•Down Cigarette Holder. How can we afford to make such a bet? We believe you'll play fair and square with us if we help you break "the habit." Order a Count•Down Cigarette Holder today. You have nothing to lose and EVERYTHING to save.

NOW! you can dial just the amount of light you need with Dial-a-Lite

. . . the new high-intensity lamp by Eagle

What's so great about that?

Most high-intensity lamps have a high and a low intensity . . . and that's it. If you should want anything in between there's not much you can do about it. With Dial-a-Lite, however, there's a lot you can do about it. Because with Dial-a-Lite you don't just switch on light, you dial exactly the amount you need—any intensity from a 15-watt glow to a brilliant white, glare-free light, the equivalent of 150 watts of illumination. Only Dial-a-Lite lets you tailor the light to suit your eyes, and the job you're doing. That's what's so great about that!

But that's not all that's great about this lamp. It has an ingenious reversible reflector† which acts as a buffer inside the shade to keep it cool. Snapped out and attached to the shade, it beams an 8-inch circle of concentrated white light that's perfect for focusing on detail work.

Then there's the telescoping arm that extends 15 inches. A shade that swivels a full 360°, tucks into the base to protect the bulb so that the lamp travels safely and compactly. A transformer that is protected against overloads, and causes the light to dim if wrong replacement bulb is used. A compartment on the bottom for storing the cord. A keyhole slot for hanging.

Eagle makes every important part of this lamp, except the bulb, in their own factories, quality-controls every step of its construction. Result: a lamp they can guarantee without hesitation. The new Eagle Dial-a-Lite comes in black, white, sand or grey. You'll find it ready to go in its own draw-string traveling pouch at department, stationery, specialty and housewares stores.

Just one more thing, the price, $12.95. Would you believe it?

By DUNCAN MacDONALD

Young in New York: With the holiday season calling bac as it does, memories of other holidays, Nathalie Smith Dana c remember more of them than most of us and remember the better. At the age of 89 she enjoys the mystical ability of tot recall.

Vantage point for observing with a young girl's eyes t special world of the 1880's and 1890's was her family's hou in New York at Park Avenue and 69th Street and her fathe church at Madison Avenue and 71st Street. He was the Revere Cornelius Bishop Smith, rector of St. James Episcopal Churc

A Christmas custom in her family evoked the holiday spi many weeks ahead of time. Immediately after Thanksgiving, t guestroom was turned over to the wrapping of presents in whi tissue paper with red ribbon, tantalizing the young who cou only see sizes and shapes.

In her book Young In New York she describes her exp riences as a young girl growing up in the city. She remembe the dairy and farm at the corner of 71st Street and Fifth Aven where there were thousands of ducks, sheep, and goats. Thoug we tend to think that all was green and wild and pure, s says that factories and breweries had already moved in. As child, she admired the châteaux along Fifth Avenue, the wo of the renowned architect Richard Morris Hunt, who becam the first president of the Municipal Art Society.

Nathalie Smith's early interest in the arts and architectu undoubtedly was strengthened by her marriage to Richard Dan Jr., the architect-grandson of Henry Wadsworth Longfello (Grandson, too, of Richard Henry Dana, author of Two Yea Before The Mast.)

Later Nathalie Dana became an officer of the Municipal A Society and is now a dedicated member of its Board of Directo She has been an active participant in its many accomplishmen —its beautification program for New York, the planting of tre the sustaining of standards of design in public buildings, a the securing of protection for historic landmarks.

Christmas Bird Count: If memory serves, the first repo of bird-watching to reach the general public were in Robe Benchley's writing, poking gentle fun at the sport.

Whatever the rules of the game at that time, they now dema great stamina and tenacity. For ten days—this year fr December 20th through January 1st—the bird watchers spe from dawn to dusk in the sometimes snowy and frigid fields a forests to take the annual bird census, a project of the Natio Audubon Society.

At various quarters of the compass, clothing and equipme vary, of course, but generally required are binoculars and kna sacks full of food and drink sufficient for at least twelve hou Additional equipment may consist of cameras, spotting te scopes, and tape recorders.

Hazards there are, and rewards too, as Charles H. Roge the Princeton, New Jersey ornithologist, can testify. He has t distinction of having been on every bird count since the incepti of the idea by Dr. Frank M. Chapman, 67 years ago.

At the very center of this activity is Allan D. Cruickshan of Rock Ledge, Florida, who is responsible for evaluating a editing the thousands of reports, the result of which becom the official bird census. Though the count is an annual Chr mas custom, no one has yet reported a partridge in a pear tr

IN THE GOOD OLD DAYS A BOTTLE OF CHRISTMAS SHERRY WOULD LAST TO THANKSGIVING.

People just don't have the respect they used to for a bottle of sherry.

Instead of keeping the sherry in its traditional spot toward the back of the liquor cabinet, just to the left of the bottle of kumiss that Uncle Jack brought back from his Mongolian trip, people are opening it, serving it, even drinking it.

It's getting so a bottle of La Ina cocktail sherry is a common sight right out in the open.

La Ina is Pedro Domecq's dry cocktail sherry, imported from Spain. It's the most popular dry sherry in the world.

Up to recently that didn't seem to melt any ice with Americans.

But nowadays La Ina is what a lot of people are drinking instead of a drink.

It's light and it's dry. It's just like what a drink should taste like, if you've never really liked the taste of a drink.

STAR BURST YOU CAN MAKE

A dramatic display for Christmas, this all-wood star may suit your décor permanently

WESLEY DALZ

Changing patterns of light flicker across the shafts in our ornament as it slowly revolves on a nylon strand. Before a mirror, it makes rather a striking holiday scene in the dining room. Other settings: an entry hall, over a fireplace mantel, or alongside the yuletide tree. Alternating faces of the hardwood polygon and about half the shafts are walnut-stained. Remaining surfaces were lightened. As is, the star burst could become a permanent art piece, while its shape is especially appropriate for Christmas. Or, since the cost of the wood is less than $2, you may want to experiment with paint: greens and reds, for example, or silver, silver and gold, or gold. We began with a 3½" maple cube; drew lines between the center points on every edge, as you can see below. Resulting diagonals are 45° angles. Corners were cut on a table saw with the blade set at 45° (and using a fence and a wedge to protect hands). Into each face, we drilled three or four ⅛" holes, about ½" deep. Then the polygon, and ⅛" birch dowels—in lengths from 9" to 18"—were finished. Finally, we twisted the dowels into holes.

BY MARION GOUGH

GIVE ME THE WORLD

A Christmas message that is addressed by a global-minded lady to the Santa Claus of her choice

Please, please, dismiss from your mind any notion of chinchilla. I didn't mean it. And I can live quite contentedly without those black opals. As for that annual, bankrupting chiffon and lace negligee—forget it. I really don't ask for the moon. Just give me the world.

As you love me, stuff my stocking with promises of places that I've always longed to find at the end of my rainbow. Let me explain:

Perhaps I do want the moon—but give it to me in a blue velvet Indian night, shining down on the luminous pale wonder of the Taj Mahal—the poignant, final offering from Shah Jahan to his beloved queen. Take me then to Kashmir on a summer day, to live in a houseboat, to float by the yellow roses of the Shalimar Gardens, another gift of beauty for the lovely Mumtaz Mahal. I would go to the wild coast near Madras, where the sea has a conch-shell echo, to the curious temple of Mahabalipuram and the strange scent of incense and marigolds. In Kanchipuram—or Banaras, where the bridal saris come from—I'd watch the weavers making supple magic of silk and gold. I'd ride a painted elephant to Amber, and see with my own eyes that glitter palace of mirror mosaic. I'd go to Fatehpur Sikri, where Akbar decreed a courtyard like a chessboard and played the game with human pawns. Do you get the idea? At the India Government Tourist Office at 19 East 49th St., New York, they will be happy to make it much clearer for you.

The sun, too—I wouldn't mind some of that, either, along with some smog-free air and two, three, or four weeks of sheer lazy leisure. The open sea, breakfast in bed, papayas and Planters' Punches, and spice-scented ports where ladies carry baskets on their heads and speak delicious languages that don't sound like English. You've guessed it—a Caribbean cruise! I see a great blue world of sky and water, studded with dreamy-mountain islands where you can still find pirate lookouts. You skindive fathoms deep through the aquamarine sea to sunken galleons and shimmering gardens of coral and parrot fish. Hibiscus, frangipani, cinnamon and clove, breadfruit trees and mangoes and picture-postcard sunsets. They're all there, waiting—and there are scads of cruising ships (Continued on page 184) to think that once a year this entire nation sits down to make a list of the people it cares about . . . and does something about it. Christmas is a huge gathering up of good will and happiness. Christmas is a visit down the corridors of memory to people not in the crisscross of current life. Christmas is a great sparkling net of expectation and breathless delight thrown magically over children. Christmas is a gleaming ribbon between friendships. And the greatest opportunity for affirmation of love. What then should you give? Something that speaks You*? Something that is just like* Them*? Something they have always wanted? Something they have never thought of? Whatever it is, it should be . . . can be . . . a pleasure, a comfort, a luxury, a pride, a beauty, a surprise, a joy . . . not ever to be forgotten. One thing is sure. Never in history has there been such a panoply of choice: Emperors may have had singing nightingales. Croesus, golden roses. Sultans, jeweled chests. The great Khan, brocaded hangings. Henry, music at all hours. All yours now in the last third of the 20th Century. In this issue House Beautiful has gathered for you the fabulous gifts of today. Merry Christmas!*

MAKING OF A MANOR HOUSE

A charmer of a house, with an aura of gaiety, peace, and good will. Lighted in turn by sunshine, a progression of flowers, firelight, and, now, Christmas candles. A place for wonderful weekends, for year-long living. Brought into being, by great imagination and expertise, from an old silo and barn.

Editor: FRANCES HEARD

On our cover, a nighttime view of the living room of this holiday-minded house in Christmas dress. Opposite and on the next six pages, daytime views, taken in other seasons, of the manor that began, in 1904, as a silo and a cattle barn, built on ground then part of a large Southampton estate. When the estate was broken up, the sturdy structure, having survived its purpose, was left empty and neglected until Mr. and Mrs. Leslie S. Land discovered it, bought it, and transformed it from a dreary old dairy maid into a sparkling young queen of a house. Serving as his own contractor, Mr. Land brought his designing, decorating, and engineering talents into play, shuttling between Manhattan and the work in progress. At the end of 18 months the house was finished and furnished—with a lighthearted mix of modern pieces, New England family heirlooms, and mirrors, sculpture, and bibelots from Europe, all so thoughtfully placed that the effect is one of spontaneity. Everywhere there is comfort, beauty, efficiency, light. Not one dark corner, thanks to the introduction of new windows, French doors, bubble skylights in a fenestration plan that includes, unexpectedly, windows of three shapes—the familiar rectangle, the piquant fan, and today's vented version of the traditional cathedral rose window—the spoked round one. More

ALL "AFTER" PHOTOGRAPHS BY O. PHILIP ROEDEL

In summer a skirted table stands in front of one living-room fireplace, left. Full-length draperies can be pulled up into a crush of soft petaling, as shown. Up in all seasons, the massive 17th-century Italian mirror, the delicate wire chandeliers—the original one of these from a church in the south of France.

Though the dining room, right, is lofty enough to suggest baronial feasts, its French tile floor, flamestitch chairs, long ribbon of table declare it appropriate, too, for Sunday lunch. The fireplace, below the mounted china pieces, is a peek-through to its twin in the living room, so one fire can cheer two rooms.

Designer-owner Land found a practical solution to the problem of heating an expansive house that is sometimes full of guests, sometimes occupied only by him and his wife for a quick winter weekend: three furnaces, all working through hospitable holidays; not all, when needs contract. The floor plans, showing a spiral stairway in each wing, indicate how readily this well-thought-out coherent building can become a house deftly divided.

A lavishing of blossomy chintz turns the master bedroom, above, into a year-round garden spot. Retained from the original barn structure, the quirky wall and ceiling slants. Sun-inviting additions: the fan-shaped window, French doors, and the private balcony beyond. After dark, glow from the white plaster lamp.

Upstairs, a view, left, into the larger of two guest rooms. As in the master bedroom, the original slants are kept: window, French doors, and balcony added. Added also, as the most vigorous of this serene room's dark accents, old beams, not part of the original barn but from a nearby 18th-century house.

Opening directly off the brick-paved entry court, the kitchen, above, is centered by a built-in cooking island under a high ventilated hood. Close by, a chopping-block cart, ready to roll from here to there over the Italian tile floor. From double oven to oversize refrigerator-freezer, everything is picked and placed for maximum efficiency.

Close-up of the breakfast room, below, shown on page 138, from the terrace, and well worth a second look for its lively use of a calm color plan, its lovely balance of lenient curves and the strictly straight. For the rounded dado and the nonstructural window frame, tile-pattern wallpaper. On the wall, trophy plaques of wood, painted, by Mr. Land, to echo the chandelier's porcelain.

Between the breakfast room and the kitchen, the bar, below, is part of a sequence of fresh white-and-blueness. Here again, as in its next-door neighbors, touches of tile-pattern wallpaper, but the bar is linked more closely to the kitchen by having curtains of the same jaunty plaid. The curtain-framed windows over the double sink in the kitchen, right, overlook the side yard, flowery and hedged by trees.

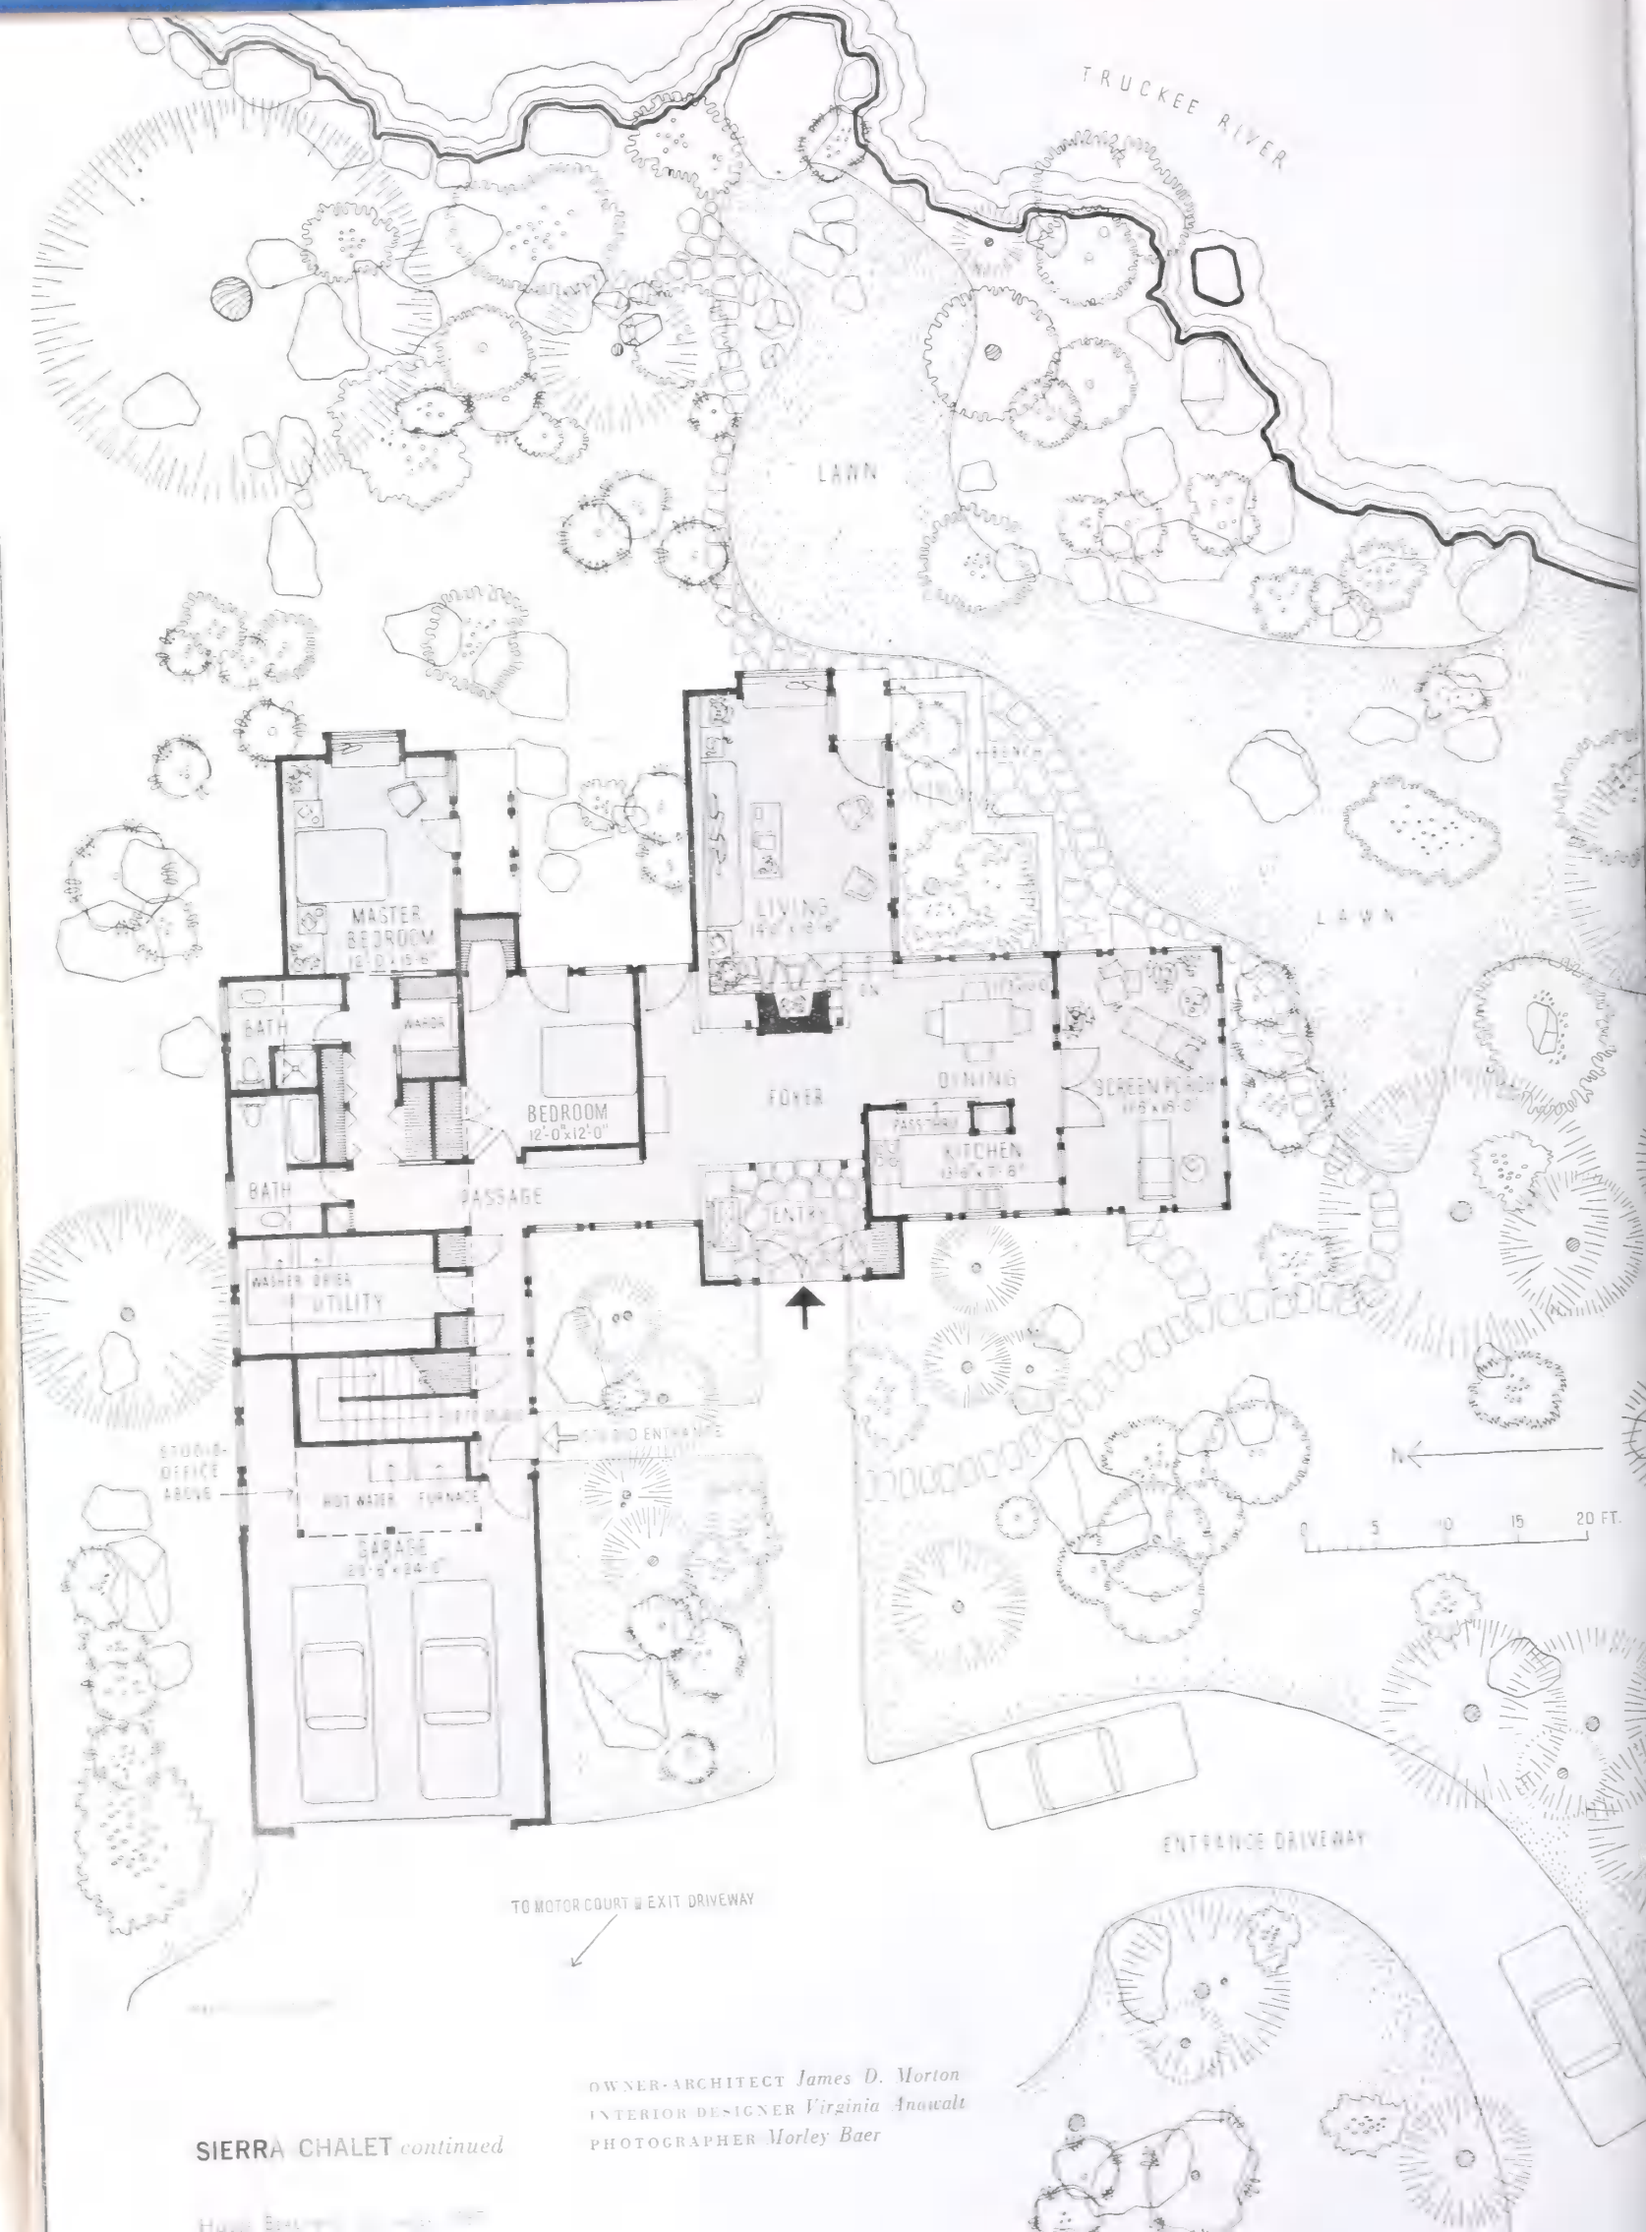
SIERRA CHALET



Located in one of the world's great ski resort areas. this spacious redwood home is the full-time residence and studio of an architect

By JAMES DE LONG

High in California's Sierra Nevada. at the entrance to renovated Squaw Valley. Architect James D. Morton found a hidden spot for his own family home down by the rocky murmur of the Truckee River. In the manner of mountain architecture. he built his house with sloping roofs to resist the rigors of deep-snowed winters and—in the tradition of the Swiss chalet—he has allowed the rhythmed. unconcealed structural parts to express themselves as working ornamentation. But the house is entirely native to its contemporaneous time and clime and has been thoroughly fitted out for year-round living—including a richly trellised porch for summer idling within earshot of the musical waterfront. A second-story office and studio area is headquarters for Mr. Morton's busy architectural practice.

The house contains 27.000 board feet of prime redwood. converted from the remilled timbers of an old causeway into a pegged-and-polished interior framework of rare craftsmanship. More

The drawing on the opposite page shows the relationship of the floor plan to the site and indicates the care with which the building has been knitted into the features of the landscape. Most of the existing trees and boulders were left undisturbed, and their presence dictated the irregular outlines of the structure. These projections and indentations create sheltered, semi-enclosed garden spaces that become intimate extensions of the interior living areas and add variety to the views. The tall, vaulted living room, right, is a forest of redwood timbers, as carefully and decoratively joined as the fretwork of a Spanish galleon. Its height and warm tones are accentuated by the white, plastered shaft of the tapered chimney that divides this room from the dining area and the entry. The rustic fireplace below the redwood mantel shelf was fashioned by the owner from lichen-covered native stone.

LOOKOUT AT SUGARBUSH

By JOHN H. INGERSOLL

Across the valley lie the main ski trails at Sugarbush, within view through the two-story sheet of glass behind the tall, fir-plank sunscreen seen at left. From the living area, using binoculars, the owner can pick out the skiers skimming down the slopes. The big panel of glass is the single source of daylight for the ground-level spaces—a design strategy that becomes clear immediately, once inside. Light flows freely into the living areas, even on overcast days. The view is spectacular, day or night. And yet, there is a snug, secure feeling in this space, since the solid walls back up to the north and east. Because the glass bay faces southwest, each clear evening presents the owner with a first-balcony view of the sunset. Despite its contemporary design, there are strong ties to traditional Vermont architecture in the six-sided geometry of this house. The orderly arrangement of masses, the asymmetrical roof, and the fine, clear lines of the bay reflect the keen sense of proportion found in centuries-old Vermont structures. Designed by Huygens and Tappé of Boston, this spruce-clad lodge is purposely left to weather outside. Cedar covers the walls inside; Douglas fir the floors; and most of the furniture is built in. The successful result: a weekend retreat remarkably easy to maintain, fun to live in, and handsome. More

Morning sun glitters on new-fallen snow stretched out in the valley immediately outside the huge bay window below—the view seen from the living area on the first floor (from beneath the second-floor balcony) of this ski retreat. Meals are usually served close to the bay, adding rich visual fare to the food. The house was designed for and is used essentially as a winter-weekend haven, but it is comfortable in summer. A good thing, since Sugarbush is becoming a year-round vacation spot.

Warmth from the oversized fireplace radiates through the living area, is joined by glowing shafts of late-afternoon sunlight striking the stained cedar wall in the background. Built-in, pillowed benches form a natural conversational grouping by simply following the changing faces of the walls. Downlighting comes from the most basic of wall sockets shaded by a small cedar box. The fireplace wall is nothing more than white stucco over concrete block.

Weekend guests were anticipated in the plan. Eleven can sleep comfortably in the bedroom and two bunkrooms. Nor do that many people feel crowded in the living area, where open space, angular walls, and a bay window make the room seem larger. And note the entry: a covered area next to a heated "ski room." Skiers shed skis and snow in the first, outer togs in second.

Open space is preserved, upper left, by the lack of any solid partitions in the living area. Vertical wood screen before the staircase deftly separates kitchen activities from the main room. Stained cedar cabinets in the kitchen match the new-hewn look of the walls. But there, the "roughing it" concept ends. Kitchen contains a complete array of modern, worksaving appliances.

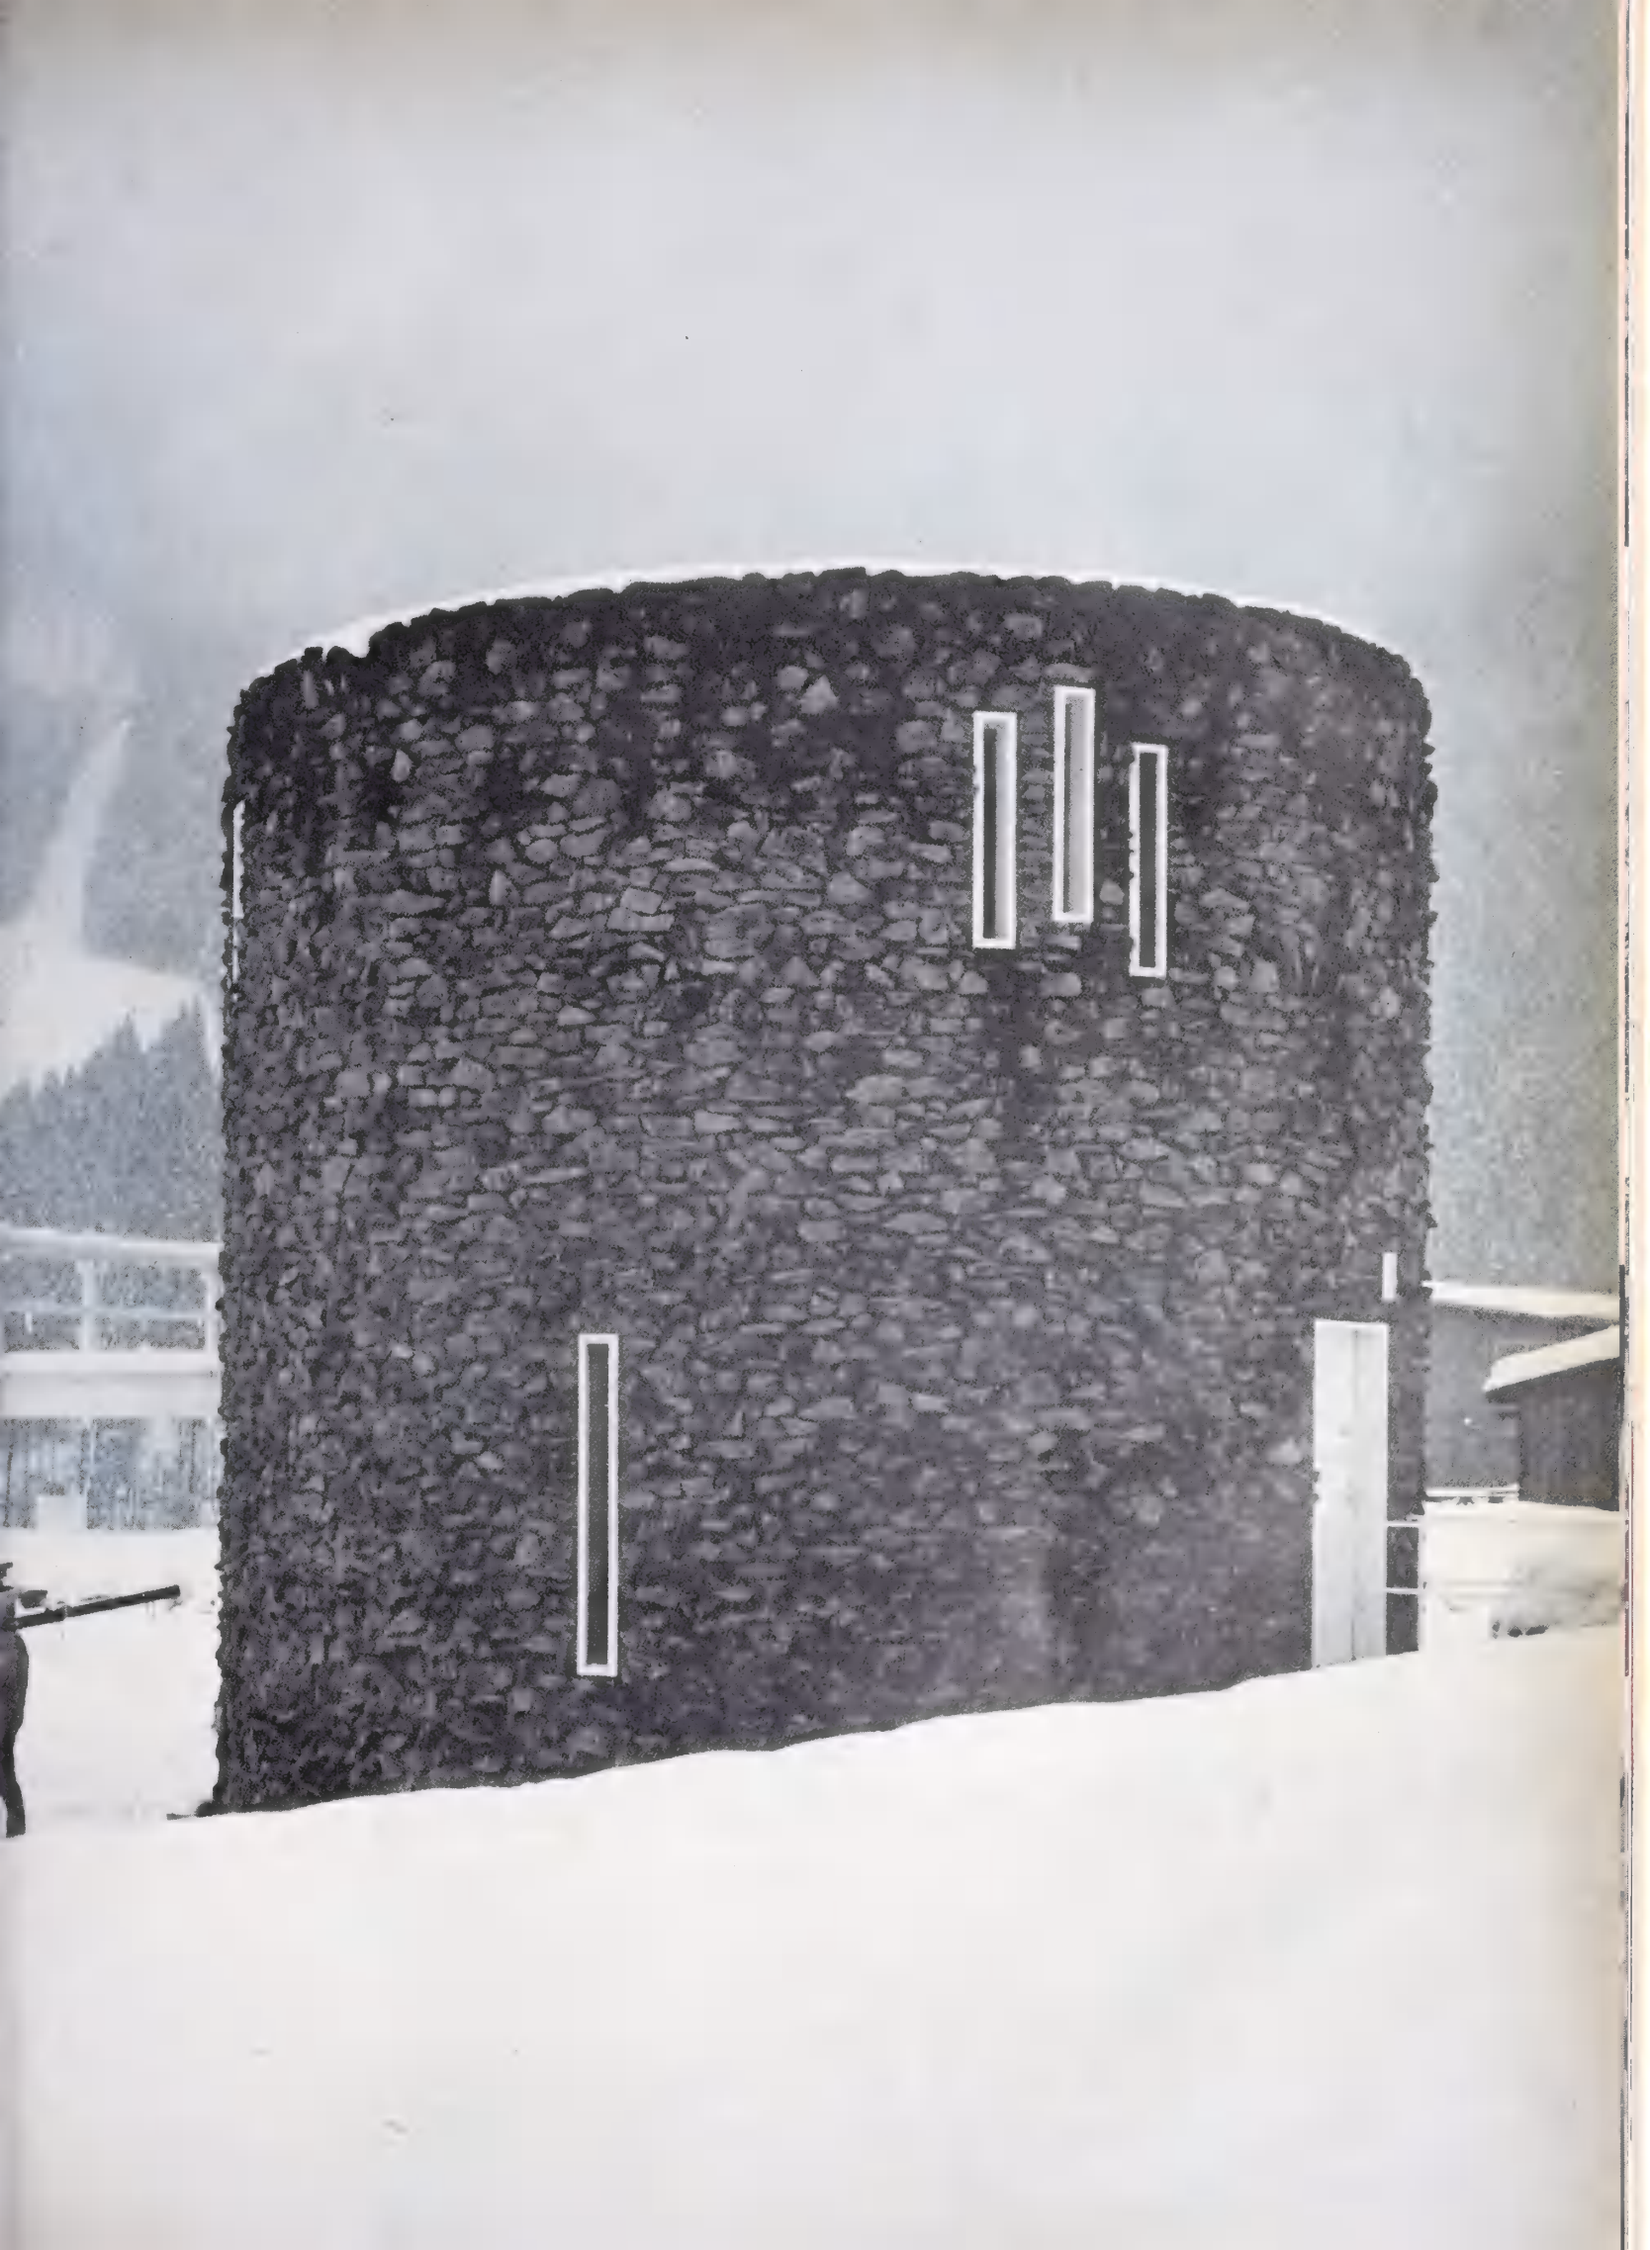
Bunkroom on the upper level, above, is spare, but quite snug. Beds, designed by the architect, are wider than the normal single bunk. With a solid wood panel between the two pairs, each bunk retains a reasonable amount of privacy (a corner of the fourth bunk shows at the top of the photograph). There is a storage closet on the right wall; shelves behind the camera.

Master bedroom at left is striking architecturally and surprisingly complete for a weekend lodge. In addition to the fireplace, wood storage, and built-in bench, there is a commodious closet, wide storage shelves, shoe racks, and a private half-bath. Windows are new weather-stripped steel units by Hope. Roof decking is fir, and above that are cedar shingles. Built by local Vermonters, the house cost in the neighborhood of $35,000.

TOWER OF STONE IN SUN VALLEY

Within easy walking distance of a ski lift is this cylindrical structure built into a slope of the Rocky Mountains in Idaho

By HARRIET MORRISON



Many a skier on the slopes of Baldy Mountain, Idaho, comes round a bend and blinks unbelievingly at the sight of what looks like the turret of a Scottish castle looming through the morning mist. This romantic vision is the home of ski buff John M. Koppes, who not only designed the fortresslike structure but also built most of it himself with stones carried from the mountain canyons. The house is a convenient 200 yards from the Warm Springs ski run in Ketchum, a town known to hunters and fishermen as well as winter sports enthusiasts. Water from Warm Springs is tapped for the ski-house heating system. During the day the cylindrical house is flooded with sunlight filtered through a six-foot-wide Plexiglas bubble in the flat roof. More light pours through clusters of slit-like windows grouped beside main living areas. The stone tower encloses a white-walled complex of five pie-shape platforms swinging out from a central steel pole around which winds a narrow staircase. Because it's built on a slope, its main entry opens on the second level. The ground-level entry on the opposite side of the house is a double door leading into a storage room and a sculpture studio. More

Observation deck circling one quarter of the structure is reached through a door in the sitting room on the fourth level. A bridge across a moat formed by the retaining wall leads to the main entry on the second level. The ground-level storage area and sculpture studio can be entered through a double door on the opposite side of the house or by means of the circular stairway connecting all levels. Owner Koppes is planning to build a second structure that will serve as a garage and provide for additional storage needs.

Pie-shape living area, left, fills quarter-circle between the sleeping platform shown on the opposite page and the kitchen shown below. Each platform is on a different level. One arm of built-in corner sofa forms a divider between living area and kitchen. All the built-in furniture is painted white and edged with teak. Door, left, leads to observation deck facing ski run on Baldy Mountain. Hot water piped from warm springs circulates through coils behind sofa, in ceiling, in floor at ground level to heat house.

Kitchen, below, has a dining area in one corner. Cabinets were custom-built to fit the contours of the round house. The kitchen is the third of five levels connected by a circular stairway. The bathroom, as well as the main entrance foyer, are on the level below. The ground level has its own entrance on the opposite side of the tower. Interior walls of the 28′ stone structure were sprayed with urethane foam, which serves as insulation. The foam was smoothed down to the texture of rough concrete, and painted white. Most of the elongated windows are fixed glass, but a few of them are casements.

A sense of wonder pervades the atmosphere of The Cloisters gardens in New York City's Fort Tryon Park, for here the waxing and waning of each plant turns back the centuries. Inside the museum the magnificent Unicorn tapestries hang, testifying to life as it was some 500 years ago: but in the gardens there are living flowers that speak with eloquence of their medieval ancestors. To know these ancient plants is to have a new experience of peace, for they were first cultivated in the enclosed gardens of Europe in the Middle Ages so that man might seek refuge from the strife that prevailed outside.

It is a marvel that these medieval plants are available now. You can grow them in your home and in your garden. At The Cloisters there is no greenhouse where plants may be encouraged to bloom out of season, yet all during the winter months there is an abundance of natural beauty. This winter forcing is done in the glassed-in area of Cuxa Cloister, without any special arrangements as to temperature or humidity. The plants do receive a fair portion of fresh air and sunlight, and protection from freezing. It is here that container-grown tender plants, such as orange trees, are kept through the cold months.

A showplace for medieval treasures

The Cloisters was planned from its inception to resemble, architecturally, a medieval European monastery. Its first curators, James J. Rorimer and Margaret B. Freeman, shared a great interest in medieval flowers, herbs, and fruit trees. They decided at an early date that all plants cultivated in The Cloisters gardens should as closely as possible represent only those varieties grown in the Middle Ages in similar cloistered gardens.

Perhaps the greatest source for guidance about the flowers of medieval gardens has been a study of the Unicorn tapestries. These late 15th-century tapestries, a gift of John D. Rockefeller, Jr., are beautiful as a work of art, fascinating as representation of intense human labor. It is necessary to look closely at these, keeping in mind that each color, each minute detail, and each shade variation is a stitch woven with painstaking care on a hand loom. The careful attention that was given to botanical accuracy made it possible to identify most of the plants depicted, and these are now a reality as they grow in The Cloisters gardens. Originally this remarkable set consisted of seven tapestries. Six, excepting minor repairs, are intact. Studies made by the New York Botanical Garden revealed 101 different plants in the tapestries, 85 of which have been identified. The remaining 16 are botanical mysteries, possibly the whim of a designer, but they could have been rare plants that have since become extinct.

Medieval artists believed the garden to be the most nearly perfect earthly setting in which holy events could take place. The Cloisters has studied paintings and manuscripts picturing the Holy Family in a medieval garden. Giovanni de Paolo's painting, "Paradise," depicts heavenly reunions in a flowery mead of lilies, carnations, violets, and wild strawberries.

Christmas beauty at The Cloisters

At Christmas it has been traditional to plant a small indoor garden in one of the courts at The Cloisters, and in it to grow some of the favorite seasonal flowers. In the last few years this arrangement has been made in the 12th-century apse of the Church of St. Martin of Fuentidueña, brought from Spain and reassembled in 1961. The Virgin in this Christmas arrangement is placed in the center of a raised flower bed, much as she appears in many paintings and manuscript illuminations. Wood carvings of the three kings—Caspar, Balthasar, and Melchior—which were made in Baden, Germany, and date from the late 15th Century, offer gifts to the Virgin and Child, represented by a sculpture dating from about 1440. The plantings for this winter scene include hyacinth, narcissus, lily of the valley, and ferns, with green pines in the background to suggest a setting in northern Europe, much like those found in many paintings and illuminated manuscripts of the period.

The medieval monasteries often included an enclosed garden, sometimes represented in works of art as the hortus conclusus of the Virgin Mary. Such a garden may be seen at The Cloisters in the cloister of St. Guilhem le Desert, where small orange trees, narcissus, hyacinth, Scotch heather, pine, and acanthus provide fragrant flowers and fruit in the winter. In less formal gardens, wattle fencing woven from green willow branches might have been used to surround such plantings. This ancient form of construction has been mastered at The Cloisters, and from time to time it is incorporated in the creche scene.

Medieval gardens had fountains for functional as well as esthetic purposes. Since these were built before the Reformation, the dietary law of eating fish on Friday, as well as during Lent and other religious times, was widely followed. These garden fountains served conveniently to keep the fish alive and fresh for Friday. The fountains also were used as wine coolers and as a source for drinking water and bathing. The gardens inside the walled area might have been watered from the fountains.

Flowers in pots placed along wall tops, elaborate trelliswork surrounding fountains, and covered arbors were common features in larger medieval gardens. The arbor, made of thickly intertwined branches with a wooden bench inside, was a place that offered solitude to the passerby. Structural details and plantings were increasingly varied in the 14th and 15th Centuries.

The Imperial Gardens of Charlemagne also served as a guide for plantings at The Cloisters. Emperor Charlemagne had more than a casual knowledge of herbs, and this interest of his is reflected in "Capitulare de Villis Imperialibus," an illuminated manuscript. This writing includes a listing of some 74 herbs, said to have been planted in the Imperial Gardens, and most of which are still in cultivation, including such favorites as Madonna lily, sage, rosemary, and German iris.

One of the greatest marvels about The Cloisters gardens today is that all the plants are virtually the same as their medieval prototypes. This means that not just any narcissus would be authentic, but only one of a certain type known in the Middle Ages, and one that has not been cross-bred or hybridized. Miss Esther Ann Huebner, a staff member of The Cloisters for some 20 years, is the horticulturist who looks after the gardens today, and a fascinating aspect of her work lies in keeping medieval plants in cultivation. This is an endless but rewarding task.

A case in point is the mandrake (Mandragora officinarum), an ancient plant once thought to possess magical powers. It was believed to grow only under a gallows where the matter that fell from a dead body gave the plant its characteristic twisted and forked shape, closely resembling the human form. It was said that wild shrieks might be heard on occasion as the mandrake's roots were pulled from the ground, and it was believed that the person who heard would be driven mad.

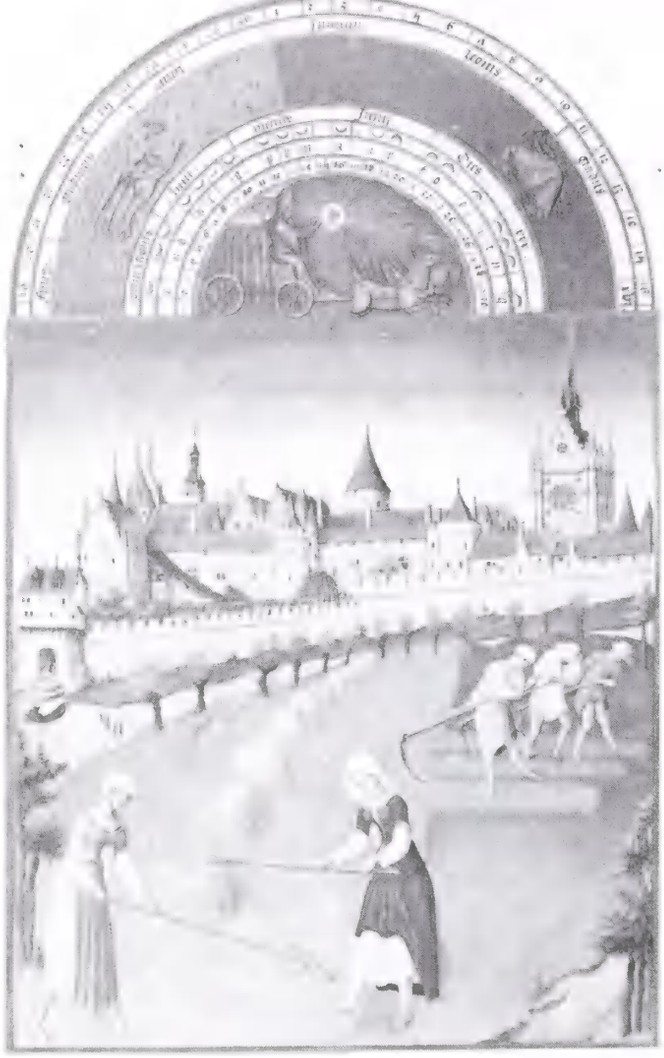
Although mandrakes have been cultivated in gardens down through the ages, very few are grown in this country. For many years The Cloisters has sought specimens of this bizarre medieval plant. In the search Miss Huebner eventually came in contact with a botanical artist who knew a mandrake grower in Philadelphia. This gardener was delighted to provide two healthy mandrakes, the roots of which were planted this year in the gardens at The Cloisters.

When winter brings a lull in active gardening at The Cloisters, the necessary planning is done that keeps the outdoor gardens growing anew every year. Replacement stock is ordered, and the never ending search continues for those medieval plants that have so far been impossible to obtain.

Part of the enchantment one feels in seeing the ancient flowers as they live again at The Cloisters comes from the medieval music that may be heard throughout the interiors, as well as in the gardens. Some recordings of the type music played at The Cloisters today include Gregorian Chant for Easter and Christmas (Angel, 35116), Music of the Middle Ages by Collegium Musicum (Lyrichord, 85), the Play of Daniel (Decca 3200/9402), the Play of Herod (Decca DX 187). In a Medieval Garden (Nonesuch 1120), Voices of the Middle Ages (Nonesuch 71171), and a Dellar Consort recording of the Mass: Notre-Dame (Bach 622; 5045). ■

Where to obtain the medieval flowers

While some medieval plants are commonly available, the editors of House Beautiful have noted that most of those in The Cloisters gardens are cultivated by P. De Jager and Sons, South Hamilton, Massachusetts 01982; Thompson and Morgan, Ltd., Ipswich, England; White Flower Farm, Litchfield, Connecticut 06759; and Greene Herb Gardens, Greene, Rhode Island 02826.



In April, 1968, House Beautiful will feature the coming of spring to The Cloisters gardens, with a detailed plan of the garden in the court of the Bonnefont Cloister.

The Unicorn in Captivity, left, is seventh and last of the series. This flowery mead is rich in plants, only two of which have not been positively identified. The others include scilla, purple iris, stock, carnation, vinca, bistort, broad-leaved pink, campion, strawberry, wallflower, sweet violet, dame's rocket, pansy, St. Mary's thistle, oxlip, and a pomegranate tree. Christmas scene, *opposite, photographed at The Cloisters in the 12th-century apse of the church of Fuentidueña. THE GIFT OF LAND

By DUNCAN MacDONALD

The reservation of certain lands to be held for common use is an American institution that dates back to 1634, when Boston Common was so set aside. That Boston Common's 48 acres were reserved chiefly for the use of cows does not alter the fact that it has been maintained since the passing of mid-city cows for the pleasure of people and pigeons and squirrels.

Later generations of Bostonians continued this noble tradition, beautifying the Charles River shores under the inspiration of the Alster Basin at Hamburg, Germany, and laying out Commonwealth Avenue with a shrubbed and wooded mall, making it one of the most beautiful thoroughfares in the world.

Our forebears, in striving to build beautiful cities as well as in endeavoring to create a true democracy, displayed a rare sense of history. They believed elegantly in the hereafter for themselves, and believed generously in a beautiful world for their descendants.

Present-day landowners may not realize that the tradition of giving land, far from dying out, has been growing at a rapid rate. The benefits to the community from such a program are obvious, but what may not be known is that the gift of land can have specific benefits for the individual donor.

Atop the summit of Martha's Vineyard, for example, is a tract of land owned for generations by the Nathaniel Harris family. As children, the Harrises made do with tents, fished, and dug clams, walked miles in one direction for milk, and miles in another for bread.

Nathaniel and Catherine Harris regarded their Vineyard acres as a great heritage that they wished to pass along to a new generation. They realized that preservation of this unspoiled land was of great importance to them personally, but that inheritance taxes would make it impossible for their heirs to maintain it in its present wild state. So they investigated the alternatives and found that by making a gift of 150 acres to the Trustees of Reservations, their objective could be accomplished. They also learned, in happy surprise, that an income-tax credit could be spread over a period of years, and that the donation would be deductible up to 30 percent of income. As a result, we now have on Martha's Vineyard the splendid Menemsha Hills Reservation, and the Harrises have achieved their dream.

Extensive acreage such as this is clearly a valuable gift, but even a small plot can be useful to a community, perhaps because of its location with reference to other green acres, or because it is the only bright spot of green in an area of pavement and bricks.

Seven acres contributed by Robert McCormick, a banker of DeKalb, Illinois, were of key importance in the city's development of a youth recreational program. The area was ideal for a baseball field. Motivations vary, of course, but one might surmise that Robert McCormick remembered a baseball field of his boyhood.

Another gift to the DeKalb Park District was a 13-acre tract contributed by a couple who were art collectors. Along with the land went an architecturally superb house which now, not surprisingly, includes an art museum and nature-study area adjacent to an illustrative garden.

Five acres given by the George H. Lelands of Dayton, Ohio, reflect a similar special interest, there being a stipulation that the land be used for youth activity. The Leland residence is now the command post of a nature center, making it part of a complex that includes the Dayton Museum of Natural History only a quarter of a mile away.

Wines and spirits for the holidays

THE GIFT OF CHEER

By WILLIAM CLIFFORD

Drinks are gifts that anyone can use, that keep well, that never go out of style. The choice is extensive, even the day before Christmas, and the holiday packaging is sometimes quite dazzling. Because it is so easy to give, liquor has long been considered the typical last-minute gift. Yet, chosen thoughtfully, a bottle of wine or spirits can be the most appreciated gift of the season.

The best principle I know in choosing is to pick the category you know your recipient likes but give something better than he normally would buy for himself. By noticing what he or she really likes to drink, you show an honest desire to please. If a man is a confirmed Bourbon drinker, you'll do better to give him a fine old Bourbon than any other kind of spirits. If a lady has said she can't ever get enough of Champagne, she'll certainly appreciate a blanc de blancs more than any other wine.

Above all, avoid the wholly unfamiliar. I still recall with chagrin the time we gave an unusual eau de vie to my father-in-law. As European travelers, we had grown to like this drink very much, but he was strictly a Scotch whisky man. When the bottle remained unopened after some months, we asked for it the next time he offered us a drink. Later we drank it again, and eventually we finished the bottle. I don't believe he ever tasted it.

Much better then, to give something quickly recognized and appreciated, not something to win your friends over to your favorites. If you don't know much about your man's habits, be conservative. Tastes fixed in early years are quite slow to change, and Christmas is not the appropriate time to try to educate the palate.

Almost anyone appreciates a bottle, and the thoughtful gift does not wear a price tag. For relatively little money—"gifts under $10," the grab-bag category on most lists—there's still a remarkable choice, including a bottle of premium Scotch or old Bourbon, a first-class Champagne, a festive magnum, or anywhere from one to five bottles of good table wine. All the way down in cost, a token gift for only $2 or $3 can be none the less welcome when it is a carefully selected bottle of wine.

If your budget is higher, you have still more choice. For $25 or so you can give one of the great liqueur Cognacs (several of the major companies label them "Extra") of the ethereal quality above the already superior VSOP's, or one of the most rewarding gifts I ever received, four bottles of superb Louis Latour red and white Burgundies. My wife made this selection for me after a visit to France where we had had the pleasure of meeting M. Latour, one of the great Burgundy wine growers and shippers.

If your budget allows spending $50, you can put together many imaginative collections. One might be a choice of after-dinner liqueurs (small bottles will give you a greater selection and won't grow so old- and tired-looking as large bottles of liqueurs often do) together with a bottle of fine champagne Cognac, Armagnac, or old Calvados. Or the selection to warm the heart of every lover of very dry Martinis—a bottle of each of the six best gins plus one half-bottle of French dry vermouth.

A case of fine French or German wine or of premium spirits makes a handsome gift for under $100. For that once-in-a-lifetime gift—if you have the money and your prospective recipient has the interest and storage space—a truly magnificent present would be a small connoisseur's cellar, say a dozen cases of the best vintage wines of Bordeaux, Burgundy, and the Rhineland. Any wine merchant will be delighted to help you make a selection, ready for drinking, that would bring honor to a collector's cellar. The cost of such a selection would be approximately $1,000. (Continued on page 182)

Four Countries of Europe invite

for Christmas Dinner

By HELEN McCULLY

"The face of the turkey is clearly that of a foreigner." Thus, tongue in cheek (we can only assume) Brillat-Savarin, the great 18th-century French gastronome, dismissed the legend that the turkey was known to the Romans and served at Charlemagne's wedding feast. Savarin was in a position to know, for he had shot a wild turkey in Hartford, Connecticut, and cooked it himself.

It is now well established that wild turkeys were enjoyed by the Indians as early as 1,000 A.D., and both wild and domesticated turkeys existed in America when Columbus landed in 1492. Turkeys were first taken to Spain from America in 1498, and from there they spread all over Europe, refuting the story that the Jesuits imported them into France—where they are still occasionally referred to as "Jesuits."

Gastronomically, contributions from the Old World to the New outweigh ours to the Old (although we should not ignore tomatoes and potatoes), but it is interesting that our native bird—"one of the most beautiful gifts of the New World to the Old," wrote Savarin—is now the Christmas-feast bird in many countries abroad. Christmas in France

Christmas dinner as it is served by Le Comte and La Comtesse Emmanuel de Ville Franche at Villarceaux, their magnificent 18th-century château in Bray Lû (Seine et Oise), is a memorable experience. Elaborate as the dinner may seem to most Americans, it is still a family dinner—served after Mass on Christmas Eve or at lunchtime on Christmas Day—with young and old all gathered around the lavish board. Gifts are traditionally exchanged after Midnight Mass, and it is the French custom to fill the children's shoes rather than their stockings, as is done in England and the United States. As is true in many French homes, there is always a crêche, and at Château Villarceaux it is arranged in l'entrée chambre. Until fairly recently, La Comtesse de Ville Franche tells House Beautiful, "We did not decorate our houses, but now we are beginning, with a big red bow on the front door, holly on the dinner table, and mistletoe for kissing under."

Le Mornay at Villarceaux, the charming restaurant on this beautiful estate, is just a short run, by car, from Paris.

Dindonneau Farci aux Marrons
(Turkey with Chestnut Stuffing)

1 12- to 15-pound turkey
¾ cup lean pork
¾ cup lean veal
2 eggs, lightly beaten
Salt
Freshly ground pepper
1 bay leaf, crushed
½ teaspoon thyme
Several sprigs parsley, minced
4 tablespoons finely chopped truffles
Butter
½ cup finely minced onions
3 or 4 shallots, finely minced
½ cup dry white wine
The turkey's liver and heart, chopped fine
4 cups (2 cans, 11-ounce size) imported fresh whole chestnuts*
Cognac

Grind the pork and veal together very fine or have the butcher do it. Combine the eggs, salt, pepper, bay leaf, thyme, parsley, and truffles. Mix together very thoroughly. Sauté a teaspoon or so in butter to taste for seasoning. Refrigerate for the moment. Melt 2 tablespoons of butter in a saucepan, add the onions, shallots, and ½ cup of water. Bring up to a boil, then cook slowly until all the water has evaporated and the onions are tender and translucent. Scoop into a bowl. Add the wine to the saucepan, bring to a boil, and reduce to about half. Combine with the onions and meat mixture thoroughly. Add a lump of butter to the same saucepan. When it's hot, sauté the chopped liver and heart. Now combine everything with the chestnuts, adding a dollop of Cognac.

Follow directions on page 182 to prepare and roast the bird. *Or 1½ pounds (8 cups) peeled, raw chestnuts, cooked and puréed (see Purée de Marrons, below).

Purée de Marrons
(Puréed Chestnuts)

8 cups peeled raw chestnuts*
2 ribs celery
4 or 5 sprigs parsley
½ bay leaf
Pinch thyme
2 cans (10½-ounce size) condensed beef broth
¼ cup (½ stick) butter, softened
Heavy cream
Salt
Freshly ground white pepper
Pinch sugar

Combine the raw chestnuts, celery, parsley, herbs, beef broth, and 1 cup water in a heavy saucepan. Bring up to a boil, then simmer for about 1 hour or until the chestnuts are cooked through. Drain. Discard the herbs. Purée the chestnuts in a food mill or push through a fine sieve. Return to the saucepan, beat in the butter and enough heavy cream to bring the purée to a good consistency. Season with salt, pepper, and sugar to taste. If not served immediately, seal with Saran. Reheat over boiling water, giving mixture an occasional stir. Serves about 8.

*Or 4 cans (11-ounce size) imported whole chestnuts. If these are used, purée, heat over boiling water, then add the butter, heavy cream, and seasonings to taste. Beat until smooth.

Bûche de Noël

The Genoise

½ cup butter
6 eggs
1 cup sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 cup sifted cake flour

Butter a 15-by-10-by-1″ jelly-roll pan. Line with wax paper, then butter the paper. Set aside. Melt the butter over low heat, then set aside to cool; combine the eggs and sugar in the top of a double boiler, over hot, not boiling, water and beat with a rotary or electric beater for 15 minutes. At this point the mixture should have tripled in volume and should be firm enough to almost hold soft points. Take off the heat and stir in the vanilla. Sift the flour, a small amount at a time, over the egg mixture and fold in carefully with a rubber spatula. Finally, add the cooled butter and fold carefully until well mixed.

Pour into the prepared pan and bake in a preheated 350° oven for 15 minutes. Turn out at once onto a fresh towel, peel off the wax paper gently, and sprinkle with sifted confectioners' sugar. Trim the crusts from edges, then roll up while still warm, starting with the narrow end, towel and cake together. Cool. While cake is cooling, make Mocha Filling.

Mocha Filling

¾ cup (1½ sticks) sweet (unsalted) butter
¾ cup sifted confectioners' sugar
2 egg yolks, slightly beaten
1 teaspoon powdered instant coffee

Cream the butter with your hands or an electric beater. When soft, gradually work in the confectioners' sugar and continue beating until the mixture is very smooth. Beat in the egg yolks. Dissolve the instant coffee in 1 tablespoon of hot water, then mix into the filling.

Unroll the cold cake and spread with the Mocha Filling almost to the edges. Roll up neatly, like a jelly roll. Wrap in wax paper and refrigerate.

Chocolate Glaze

2 squares (1-ounce size) unsweetened chocolate
2 squares (1-ounce size) semi-sweet chocolate
2 teaspoons liquid honey
4 tablespoons butter, softened

Melt the two chocolates over hot, not boiling, water. Stir in the honey and butter, stirring until butter melts. Beat until cool and somewhat thickened.

To finish the Bûche de Noël, place the roll on a handsome, generous serving platter. Slip short pieces of wax paper under the cake all around to catch any drip from the glaze. Pour the glaze all over the roll (except the ends) so it is covered evenly. Pull out the paper. Run the tines of a fork down the length of the roll to simulate the bark of a log. If you're adept with a pastry tube, decorate the top with small garlands of green leaves made with frosting. Serves 10 generously.

Christmas in Italy

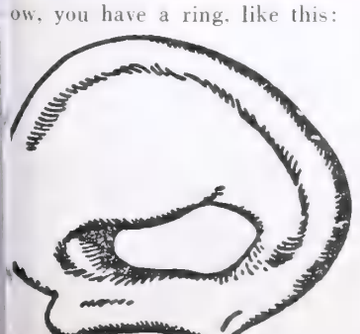
"We're a country of individualists," Signora Luca Salvadore of Milano writes us, "which precludes a national menu. What is served depends, really, on the family's economic status, but even then there are certain enduring patterns—always an antipasto, a pasta in broth, fowl of some sort, boiled meats, and dessert. Christmas dinner, always a huge family reunion, is served between one and two o'clock in the afternoon, but it has been preceded on Christmas Eve by a dinner of generous proportions, following Midnight Mass.

Rich Antipasto

"A rich antipasto," Signora Salvadore says, "consists of prosciutto, salami, anchovies, Russian salad, hard-cooked eggs, olives, artichoke hearts, and small onions, vinaigrette."

Tortellini al Brodo
(Stuffed Ravioli in Broth)

This is a great dish in Italy at Christmastime, and although it is tricky to make (it is also fun), you will find it's worth the effort. Ask your butcher to give you exact weights and go on from there.



2 ounces veal brains
3 ounces lean pork
2 ounces lean veal
2 ounces breast of chicken
2 ounces ham
1 ounce mortadella (Italian dried sausage)
1 tablespoon butter
Salt
Freshly ground pepper
Freshly ground nutmeg
2 eggs, slightly beaten
1½ cups freshly grated Parmesan cheese

Remove as much of the film from the brains as possible, very care-

lly, then place in salted water r an hour. Chop the pork, veal, nd chicken, and set aside; then op the ham, sausage, and rains coarsely. Melt the butter a heavy skillet. When foaming, ld only the pork, veal, and hicken and brown very gently. hen add the ham, sausage, rains, and seasonings. Use loads nutmeg. Cover the pan, reduce eat to simmer, and cook 15 min-es. Put the mixture through the nest blade of the meat grinder. lix in the eggs and cheese. Note: urée should be fine and smooth. ow make the egg paste:

Fold ne flour over the eggs and knead ith your hands until thoroughly ixed and the paste forms a ball. pastry canvas and rolling pin ith a sleeve are desirable here ecause the dough must be rolled xtremely thin. Lightly flour the anvas (or board), sleeve (or in), and your hands. Knead by olding the dough in one hand hile rolling away from you with ne heel of the other hand. It akes a good ten minutes of neading to achieve the desired lastic consistency. Divide dough i two. Wrap one in a damp, ght cloth to keep it from drying ut. First roll out one half, olling in all directions, until the ough has stretched greatly and almost transparent. Cut rounds f the dough with a 2″ cookie utter. Take a pinch of the stuff-ng, roll it between the palms of our hands to make a little tube. lace on the round, then fold ver so the top half of the circle omes just short of the under lge. Bring the two points of the alf circle together, with your ttle finger between, and pinch ie ends to make them stick. ow, you have a ring, like this:

Place the finished tortellini on a lightly floured cloth, cover with another cloth, and allow them to rest for several hours. Makes about 7 to 8 dozen. Serve 10 to a person when part of a dinner.

To cook: Drop the tortellini into boiling chicken broth (about 2 cans, 10½-ounce size, condensed chicken broth), and cook for 4 to 5 minutes. They should be al dente (firm to the bite). Lift from the broth with a slotted spoon onto a hot serving dish. Serve with melted sweet butter, freshly grated Parmesan cheese.

Tacchino Farcito Arrosto alla Lombardia
(Stuffed Roast Turkey Lombardy Style)

1 12- to 15-pound turkey
½ cup (about 12) pitted, ready-to-eat prunes
½ pound sausage
Turkey liver and heart, chopped
Butter
2 medium onions, coarsely chopped
3 slices crisp bacon, crumbled
2 large apples, peeled and coarsely diced
2 cups (an 11-ounce can) unsweetened chestnut purée
8 or so sprigs parsley, minced
2 eggs, slightly beaten
Salt
Freshly ground pepper
Freshly grated nutmeg
Freshly grated Parmesan cheese
Thyme

Soak the prunes in warm water to soften slightly. Drain and chop coarsely. Place the sausage in a cold skillet with 3 or 4 tablespoons of water over a good heat. When boiling, cover, reduce heat to low, and cook 10 minutes. Take off the heat, drain off any surplus water, and cook until brown. Drain on paper toweling. Chop coarsely. Cook the liver and heart over high heat in the fat left in the skillet for 2 minutes, stirring constantly. Drain.

Melt a good lump of butter in a large heavy frying pan, add the onions and a cup of water. Bring up to a boil, then cook until all the water has evaporated and the onions are limp and transparent. Now combine in a large bowl the prunes, sausage, bacon, liver, onions, apples, chestnut purée, parsley, and eggs. Work together with your hands. Season to taste with salt, pepper, nutmeg, cheese, thyme, and sage.

Follow directions on page 182 for roasting and stuffing the bird.

Patatine Arrosto
(Roast Potatoes)

Peel as many medium-size (all of a size) potatoes as seem called for. Drop into boiling, salted water and cook until they are almost tender when pierced with the point of a small sharp knife. One hour before the turkey has finished roasting, place the potatoes in the pan, rolling them in the drippings so they are coated.

Christmas in Spain

"It is a wonderful fiesta, our Christmas Eve dinner," Señora Ana Perez Vuidate Heras, mother of Señor Albert Heras, propriétaire of New York's distinguished Spanish Pavillon, tells us. "The heart is warm at Christmas. Everybody comes, all our relatives and many, many friends. Sometimes there are fifty of us sitting down." Señora Perez, also a restaurateur (the famous Casa Felix in Calle San Roque, Spain) will cook this very dinner, herself, this Christmas as she has done for forty years. Dinner precedes or follows Mass. It is interesting that the Spaniards do not serve a rich dessert, as do the French, English, and Italians—only fruits and nuts. Gifts are exchanged on January 6th, the festival of the Epiphany (children receive toys), which is preceded by another large family dinner on the eve of Epiphany.

Sopa Quarta de Hora
(Fifteen-Minute Soup)

2 tablespoons olive oil
2 tablespoons flour
1 large onion, chopped fine
3 or 4 sprigs parsley, chopped fine
1 clove garlic, minced
1 large, ripe tomato, chopped
1 hard-cooked egg, chopped
Good pinch saffron
2 tablespoons butter
½ pound chicken livers, chopped fine
½ pound fresh, medium-size shrimp, peeled, cut in half
¼ cup rice, cooked
Salt
Croutons

Heat the olive oil in a heavy frying pan, stir in the flour, and cook, stirring frequently, until flour has turned golden. Add the onions, parsley, garlic, tomato, and 1 cup hot water. Bring to a boil, then reduce heat, and cook until the onions are tender and most of the liquid has evaporated. Place half the mixture at a time in the electric blender with ½ cup hot water, and blend at high speed. Turn into a large, heavy saucepan. Add 5 cups boiling water, the chopped egg yolk, and saffron. Bring to a boil, then simmer for ten minutes. Heat the butter in a frying pan. When hot, add the livers and sauté lightly for a minute or two, stirring constantly. Add the livers, shrimp, rice, and salt to taste to the soup and cook for 5 minutes. Serve in hot soup plates with a garnish of chopped egg white and croutons to 6 or 8.

To make croutons, see page 30 ("Nobody Ever Tells You These Things").

Besugo al Horno
(Sea Bream in the Oven)

2 3-pound sea breams*
Salt
2 lemons, cut in 6 wedges
2 large potatoes, peeled, sliced ⅛" thick
½ cup olive oil
1 tablespoon paprika
3 or 4 sprigs parsley, minced
4 slices firm bread, crumbled very fine
2 cloves garlic, minced
Parsley bouquet

*Since sea breams are not available on this side of the Atlantic, red snappers or porgie make a good substitute.

Have the fishmonger clean the fish, leaving heads and tails on. Rub the fish well, inside and out, with salt. Cut 2 slits in each fish, one on each side, and push a wedge of lemon into each, skin side out. Arrange the potato slices flat all over the bottom of a shallow roasting pan, large enough to accommodate the two fish. Sprinkle with salt. Add enough water to make a film over the bottom of the pan. Arrange the fish on top, pour the olive oil over both. In baking, the water should all evaporate and the potatoes absorb the oil.

Combine the paprika, parsley, breadcrumbs, and garlic well. Sprinkle over the skin of both fish. Place the pan in a preheated 400° oven. When the liquid begins to boil, reduce heat to 300° and bake for 30 minutes or until the fish flakes easily with a fork.

To serve, arrange the fish on a very large, heated platter, spoon the potatoes around the sides, garnish with the remaining lemon wedges, and place a bouquet of parsley in the mouth of each fish. Serves 6 to 8.

Pavo Relleno
(Stuffed Turkey)

1 12- to 15-pound turkey
¾ pound lean fresh pork
¾ pound lean veal
12 slices firm, day-old bread, crumbled fine
Milk
2 eggs, slightly beaten
1 cup Sherry
2 or 3 truffles, chopped fine
The truffle juice
1 large onion, coarsely chopped
Salt
Freshly ground pepper
Butter

Put the pork and veal through the finest blade of the meat grinder twice or have the butcher do it; combine the breadcrumbs with enough milk to moisten. Mix well. Then combine with the meat, eggs, Sherry, truffles, truffle juice, onion, salt and pepper to taste. Mix very thoroughly. Sauté a little of the mixture in butter to taste for seasoning. Prepare and roast turkey, following directions on page 182.

Salsa (Gravy): Place the giblets and neck, one well-washed leek, chopped, two scraped carrots, coarsely chopped, good dash of salt, and enough cold water to cover in a small saucepan. Bring up to a boil, then simmer until almost tender. Add the liver and heart, chopped fine, and continue cooking until all are tender. Remove the gizzard from the liquid and chop fine. Return to the saucepan, then combine with all the pan juices, including the onion. Blend in the electric blender. Pour the salsa over the turkey in the roasting pan, and turn off the oven. Leave it there, door closed, for about 10 minutes. Place the turkey on a hot serving platter and pour the salsa from the pan into a warm sauceboat.

Christmas in England

Miss Yvonne Trethewy, author of many distinguished books, including Successful Cooking, writes us from England, "Today's menus for Christmas, especially where there are children, are rather simple, due more to lack of servants than anything else. I think the turkey has become the Christmas bird because it will accommodate large families."

dulging guests. It is customary among the British to invite friends or even acquaintances to join the family group, and, apart from wishing to be kind, the English tend to like the leaves of nonfamily at the Christmas dinner. Also cooks (breadwives, especially mothers) are happier knowing they have the remains of a cold bird in the "fridge" against boxing Day, the day after Christmas, which is a public holiday.

The children get their stockings at dawn and gaze, shrieking, at hung on the candle-lit tree, ge exchanged after breakfast on Christmas morning. Dinner is usually served midday, especially if there are children, and some [illegible] still drink a "Send health to ge Queen" and almost friendly evocations vary from home to home, the only fairly universal taboos being the use of bread balls and party snappers on the Mr. At the very end of the meal, e snappers are "pulled," and anyone dons a Christmas hat.

Mrs. Elizabeth David's Parsley and Lemon Stuffing

The British depart from the customs somewhat in the matter of stuffings in that they invariably stuff the cavity with no rib stuffing and the crop with extent. Stuffing the crop, [illegible] done in this country, makes a more shapely-looking bird.

12- to 15-pound turkey
Half loaf (1½-pound size) firm bread

1½ tablespoons salt butter
1½ teaspoons sugar
Salt
Freshly ground pepper

Chop about two-thirds of the nuts coarsely; purée the remainder with a little chicken stock in the electric blender or push through a fine sieve. Beat in the softened butter and sugar. Combine with the prepared nuts and season with salt and pepper to taste. Fill the crop cavity of the turkey, then pull the neck skin under the bird and secure with a skewer. Roast turkey, see instructions, page 182.

Stir 1½ pounds peeled raw chestnuts cooked in gallon stock or water with 2 blades of mace for 40 minutes or until nuts are just tender. Drain; remove mace.

Plum Pudding with Hot Brandy Sauce

English Plum Pudding, as an integral part of the Christmas feast in most English homes since the 17th Century, was once almost made in the home. Today in England as here, many people buy their puddings and the quality, usually excellent, is excellent.

Steam pudding for several hours before dinner, as also it is eaten hot through. Then turn out on a handsome silver platter. Warm 2 tablespoons (a to of liquid, spoon it over the top, then light with a match. Add the traditional sprig of fresh holly.

Hot Brandy Sauce

1½ cups table-cream all-purpose flour
2 cups milk, heated
1 tablespoon sugar
2 tablespoons brandy

Melt the butter in a small saucepan; stir in the flour until smooth. Add the hot milk and blend with a wire whip until smooth. Add the sugar and bring to a boil, whipping constantly. Cook 2 or 3 minutes (or 5 or 6 for best taste, stirring awhile). Take off the heat, allow to cool slightly, then stir in the brandy. Pour into a warm serving bowl.

Mincemeat Tarts with Hard Sauce

Pastry

1½ cups sifted all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon sugar
Good pinch salt
Grated rind 1 lemon
½ cup (1 stick) butter

Très chic

Here's a most beautiful way to serve cocktails. The delicately designed pierced border keeps everything on the tray, off your orientals. Flowered embossing creates a rich-textured pattern that prevents slippage and masks scratches. Entire tray is made in England of heavy silver plate.

VIRGINIA HAM AGED LIKE VINTAGE WINE

Christmas Tradition for 300 Years!

Smoked for weeks over hand tended fires, kept going day and night, while juices drip and pungent hickory smoke flavors the meat. Aged a year, then baked with wine and sugar. Arrives ready to serve (doesn't even need heating), for Christmas feast, buffet, cocktails, sandwiches, etc. Traditionally sliced paper thin and served cold; goes a long way; easy to keep; a delight to any homemaker during busy holidays.

300 years ago Virginia planters traded their hams to English sailing masters. Soon the old world's epicures were agog over this new flavor. Virginia Ham became famous around the world. It still is. Each magnificent ham now hanging in our aging rooms has been slowly cured, smoked to a rich mahogany hue, and aged the way the colonists did it 300 years ago. For there is no short cut to such flavor. Just before shipment each ham is soaked, simmered, skinned, the fat trimmed, then sauced with wine and sugar, and baked to a sweet and savory feast of flavor unlike any other!

Nested in burgundy tissue in sturdy Old Virginia Smokehouse box, with carving, keeping, serving suggestions enclosed, here is a grand treat for your family and guests and a magnificent gift! Our hams are prepared to please discerning people. We guarantee complete satisfaction or money refunded. $1.98 per lb., net cooked weight plus postage. Sizes: 8 to 15 lbs. Please specify if wanted now, for Christmas, or other date.

Be sure the quality and construction are "top drawer." Look inside the top drawer.

You can tell a lot about furniture quality by simply opening the top drawer. If you see the manufacturer's name there—a name you recognize—you can be sure of all this:

That the furniture is built to last. So you're not just making a buy for today, but a sound investment for the future. You can be sure the style and design are authentic, too. And you'll know you're getting good, honest value for your money.

A brand name means quality and integrity. It's the manufacturer's way of telling you that he stands behind his product 100%. With furniture though, you have to snoop to find the brand name. It may be tucked inside a drawer. Or on the underside of a table. Or hidden beneath the cushions of a sofa. Or on the end of a mattress.

That way, the brand name never detracts from the furniture's appearance. But it does add greatly to your confidence and satisfaction.

GIFTS FOR CRAFTSMEN

By JOHN H. INGERSOLL

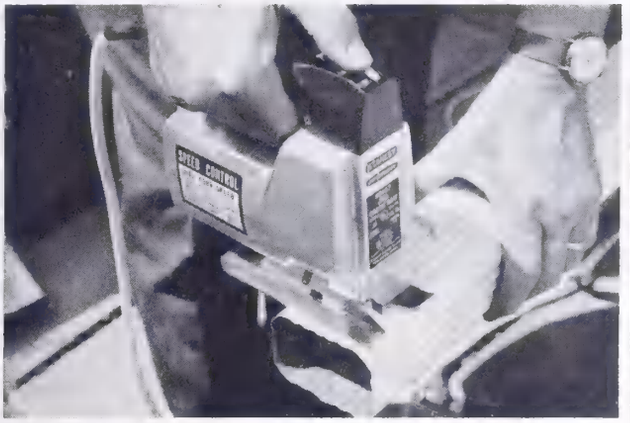
This year, a workbench-full of fascinating new tools have appeared in stores. Below you'll find an array of the most appealing—all ideal as Christmas gifts for the discriminating craftsman.

Marvelous for a weekend painter. Called Sprayit, pump sends paint through nap of roller until you release hand pressure. Has a 16′ reach. Thomas Industries: $55.

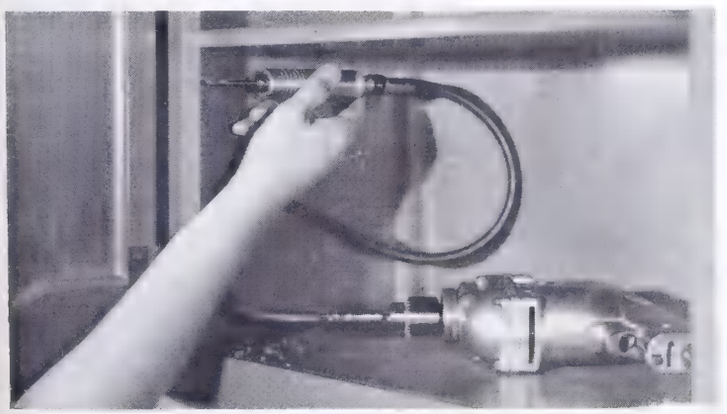
Electric router opens the way to fine cabinetmaking. New model by Rockwell is a great value at $40: has a ½-hp motor operating at 28,000 rpm; double-insulated against shock.

Handiest vice we've seen in years. Ball joint below jaws allows craftsman to turn, angle work without removing it. From Brookstone, Worthington, Mass., for $16.

Pipe fitting rusted tight? GripLock should help loosen it. When locked, jaws have viselike power. Curved or straight jaws: $5 by Channellock.



TWO PHOTOGRAPHS BY WESLEY BALL



Teflon-S-coated blade of new Diston pruning saw won't gum up with sticky sawdust. By Porter at $6. All of this firm's hand and power saw blades are now Teflon-S-clad.

Thumb-operated, variable-speed control on new Stanley saber saw simplifies cutting through tough steel or brass; making sharply curved cuts in hardwood. It's $47.50 with blades.

Great for the modest shop—a modest-size, yet heavy-duty vacuum. Steel-tank unit holds five gallons; 2½" diameter hose; will scoop up shavings, sawdust, fireplace ashes. By Black & Decker at $30.

WESLEY BALZ

Drilling in tight spaces is no problem when bit is set in a flexible shaft attached to your own drill. Also ideal for deburring or grinding small metal parts. With a Jacobs chuck, $24 from Brookstone.

10-speed push button control with Hi-Lo "Solid State" switch for every liquidizing and blending need. 30-second timer with automatic shut-off. Full 44 oz. glass jar with easy-pour spout and handle. Heavy duty ice crusher attachment available. Sparkling chrome finish with non-marking rubber feet and coiled cord.

A KNAPP MONARCH Gold Crown Appliance

The Voice. Anybody's voice. Your voice. It has a special quality and timbre all its own. But.

If it should become hoarse or if a cough should persist, find out what the reason is. Promptly. It could be a warning signal of cancer. And cancer is easier to cure when it's detected early.

Frank Sinatra knows the seven warning signals of cancer. Do you?

1. Unusual bleeding or discharge. 2. A lump or thickening in the breast or elsewhere. 3. A sore that does not heal. 4. Change in bowel or bladder habits. 5. Hoarseness or cough. 6. Indigestion or difficulty in swallowing. 7. Change in a wart or mole.

If a signal lasts longer than two weeks, see your doctor without delay.

It makes sense to know the seven warning signals of cancer.

Sift the flour, sugar, and salt together into a bowl. Add the lemon rind, then work in the butter with a pastry blender or two knives until the mixture is mealy. Mix in the egg yolk with 3 tablespoons ice water and work into the flour mixture until the pastry holds together. Chill.

Roll out the pastry very thin on a lightly floured board. Cut circles, an inch larger than the top width of the tart pans (a big cookie cutter works fine). Fit the circles into the pans, pressing them down carefully into all indentations. Cut off any surplus carefully with a sharp knife. Makes 18 to 20 tarts.

Mincemeat

Buy the best ready-to-use mincemeat on the market and doctor it up with a good dollop of Cognac. Spoon mincemeat into the little pastry shells, right to the top, making sure all indentations are filled. Smooth the surface with a wet knife. Place the tarts on a cookie sheet and bake in a preheated 450° oven for 15 minutes or until pastry is golden. Serve hot with Hard Sauce.

Hard Sauce

4 tablespoons (½ stick) sweet (unsalted) butter
1 cup sifted confectioners' sugar
4 tablespoons (or to taste) brandy or dark rum

Work the butter until soft and creamy with your hands or, better, an electric beater. Then gradually work in the sugar. Finally, mix in the brandy or rum. Pile in a crystal or silver serving bowl and chill in refrigerator.

Preparation and Roasting of the Christmas Turkey

Whichever of the "imported" stuffings you choose for your Christmas bird, the preparation and the roasting instructions remain the same. Rub the inside of the turkey with the cut side of a fresh lemon, salt, and pepper. Then stuff with one of the several stuffings (pages 174-177). Truss the bird securely and place in a large roasting pan. Smooth the skin all over, generously, with softened butter (allow about ½ cup—1 stick) and sprinkle with salt and pepper (the Italians also add some crushed rosemary). Soak a double layer of fresh cheesecloth in melted butter (approximately ½ cup or 1 stick) and drape over the bird to cover breast, legs, and thighs. Place in a preheated 350° oven and roast 20 minutes per pound.

Baste with the pan drippings every 15 to 20 minutes right through the cheesecloth. One hour before the turkey is done, remove the cheesecloth and baste with 1 cup dry white wine, a small amount at a time.

Test for doneness: Juices should run clear when the leg is pierced with a fork: the leg should feel soft when squeezed and move easily in its socket; the skin will have just begun to shrink away from the leg bone.

Allow the turkey to "rest" 25 to 30 minutes before carving. ■

If you have a merchant who really knows wines, rely on him. As soon as you express your tastes and needs, the salesman will be able to suggest several choices at various price levels, discussing the merits of each in some detail. He'll search for something he thinks you may like well enough to reorder or well enough to make you return for further selections.

Until you have done enough tasting to be your own expert, you may prefer to put your faith in the good name of one or another of the leading wine growers and shippers. It's a good idea to keep trying different wines from the same house until you form an opinion of its overall quality. A major house such as Sichel producing in both France and Germany (selling as well in America and England) does not jeopardize its long-established name by shipping bad wines. Whether you buy its popular Blue Nun Liebfraumilch or a great vintage Auslese, a rare Burgundy or a plain Bordeaux shipper's blend, you will get value for your money. Each château-bottled Bordeaux wine is the same for each vintage, no matter which shipper handles it. But one of the better shipper's own blends, such as Sichel's or the highly esteemed Kressmann Monopole, may be a better wine than a minor or off-year château.

No drink seems more appropriate to holidays, to celebration and entertainment, to bubbling good spirits and the froth of life, than Champagne. The word itself is almost effervescent. Champagne is always numbered among the great luxuries of the world—along with diamonds and furs, couturier originals, fast cars, and grand tours. But it's the only one of them you can buy without radically altering your budget. And good Champagne is probably the easiest of all wines to buy without expert knowledge, for you can rely very much on brand name and price. All the well-known Champagnes are good, and the main question you answer as your drinking experience accumulates is which major company's distinctive blend you prefer. Unknown brands at bargain prices are never first-rate Champagnes.

If a bottle of Champagne is a welcome discovery under the Christmas tree, a magnum is more than doubly welcome. Large bottles seem to reflect the open-handed generosity of holiday giving and hospitality. And they can be filled with other good wines besides Champagne. Fine red wine actually ages and develops best in the magnum bottle, and it may seem to taste even better just because of the psychological effect of the ample quantity. It's mainly the better wines of Bordeaux and Burgundy that are sold in magnums, and prices tend to be proportionately high. But I've seen good double-size bottles of Beaujolais and of the fine Italian wines from the Piedmont, such as Barolo, which cost less than $5.

A bottle of the highest quality and youngest Beaujolais that you can find would make an excellent gift in the token $2-to-$3 range. Another good choice at this level is one of the charming white wines of Switzerland—again the younger, the better. (A collection of all the different Swiss wines available—there won't be more than half a dozen of them—makes an interesting present of more substance.) Or a premium varietal from California, especially Cabernet Sauvignon. Many of the important California wineries are now making exceptional wines from this grape—costing in the neighborhood of $2 a bottle. They are drinkable immediately but will certainly improve if aged for a few years. California is also making good red wine from the Pinot Noir grape and exceptional white from the Pinot Chardonnay and Johannisberg Riesling.

Because wines are inevitably associated with food, a thoughtful gift might be the several drinks necessary for a complete holiday feast or dinner. Whether your recipient is likely to prepare a Christmas or New Year's réveillon in the French style, a New England turkey dinner, a banquet of oysters and game, or virtually anything else, he ought to be pleased with a hamper containing a bottle of apéritif wine or Champagne, a dry white wine, a big red wine, and a sweet white dessert wine or Cognac.

Another attractive possibility is a gift of food and drink in combination. I'd avoid hampers made up in advance, both because they obviously don't reflect any special knowledge you might have of your friend's taste and because they often contain too many unwanted oddities. But who would not be pleased and honored by a side of smoked salmon or a large tin of fresh caviar with the brut Champagne or vodka that best complements them? Or some choice winter fruit and giant walnuts with a vintage port or a fine bottle of Sauternes? Or a brace of pheasants with old Burgundy? Imagine your pleasure at finding any of these on Christmas day!

Some gifts seem especially feminine—liqueurs in fancy bottles, light summer wines, Champagnes. Others seem assertively masculine—all kinds of whiskey, Cognac, port. But no wine or spirit is at all out of place for anyone who likes it. Ladies drink Champagne, but so does a Texas rancher I know—half a bottle regularly before lunch and another half-bottle before dinner, as the best of all apéritifs.

Give wines and spirits as generously as you can, but above all give them thoughtfully, and you will be giving in the spirit of Christmas. ■ recognition of the need for preservation of as much as possible of the remaining green acres. "Stewardship" is a good word for expressing the obligation both to our forebears who preserved so much natural beauty for us and to our descendants who will share a more crowded land.

In the New York metropolitan area, the Open Space Action Committee presents its stewardship program in a book, Stewardship: The Land, the Landowner, the Metropolis, by Robert L. Burnap and Charles E. Little, the president of Open Space Action Committee.

An interesting example, one of many in the book, concerns the Long Island estate of Mrs. Robert G. McKay of East Norwich, New York, who granted Nassau County rights to use 58 of her 95 acres with the proviso that they would use the land to develop a nature center. In the state of New York, such an arrangement comes under a statute of the municipal law giving the owner of land the right to parcel out to others any of the rights that ownership entails, yet still retain enjoyment and possession. Rights-of-way, hunting rights, and mineral rights are familiar examples. Less familiar are the rights to undisturbed, unspoiled open land, known as conservation, scenic or open-space easements, or development rights.

Mrs. McKay granted the county an affirmative easement to use her land. An easement, unlike a license or lease, has permanence. It is recorded with the deed and is normally binding on subsequent owners. Mrs. McKay could have donated the land through a testamentary gift or she could have given it and retained the right to live on her land until her death. But the arrangement has provided personal and financial advantages otherwise unobtainable, and she will continue to enjoy the beautiful property she created. In a further step, Nassau County reduced the valuation of the land under easement by approximately 75 percent, and in addition lowered the assessment on Mrs. McKay's residence and its immediate grounds by ten percent, because public use of the property entails some loss of privacy.

As INDICATED by this example, the legal machinery is an important part of the successful transfer of land. Stewardship covers this subject in some detail from the point of view of the layman. It also lists government agencies and private organizations that can be contacted regarding land and its use. The list of some 25 private groups includes such organizations as the Wildlife Management Institute (709 Wire Building, Washington, D.C.), which advises landowners through its field service and helps them find suitable recipients. The Natural Area Council (145 East 52nd Street, New York City) puts the landowner in touch with an agency to guide him in the proposed transfer. Stewardship is available for $3.00 from Open Space Action Committee (a nonprofit organization), 145 East 52nd St, N.Y.C.

Other such organizations exist across the land, and since the laws of individual states vary, it is usually desirable to work with a group within one's own state. For instance, in Peoria, Illinois, the Forest Park Foundation serves the three counties of Peoria, Tazwell, and Woodford, easing the way for the donor by handling all the legal work without cost. The Natural Land Institute (819 North Main Street, Rockford, Illinois) distributes a free pamphlet, "Gifts of Land to Preserve Our Heritage," which is helpful with legal detail.

The gift of land is unique. It is a rare opportunity open to a few who by circumstance or fortune own the land or have the resources to buy it for donation. There is no gift that will yield greater satisfaction, and there is no time like the Christmas season to consider giving it. ■ ready to sail me to them in the pampered style to which I am really not accustomed. I should hope you'd opt to come along. The easiest shopping imaginable is at the travel agent's, or shop around at Swedish American Line, Norwegian America Line, Holland-America Line, American Export Isbrandtsen Lines, Cunard Line, French Line, Paquet Lines, Grace Line, Moore-McCormack Lines, Italian Line, Greek Line, Bergen Line, Clipper Line, Sun Line, Incres Line. No dearth of sailing ships, is there, or the opportunity to sample an international atmosphere en route—but should you care to go cruising in private, there are yachts to be hired, too, with full crew and galley staff. For this, do your shopping at Wakefield, Fortune, Inc., 24 West 58th St., New York. I shouldn't be at all averse to sailing one way, flying the other, or island-hopping by plane. In this case Pan-American, Eastern, KLM, Air France and British West Indies Airlines should be full of suggestions.

On THE other hand—and on the other side of the Atlantic—there's that whole Mediterranean to be had for the cruising. Fancy the places to be savored—the Madeiras, Gibraltar and the apes, Lisbon and the fadas, Casablanca and Tangier; there's the rosy island of Rhodes, and Cyprus, where Venus rose from the sea and that marvelous Turkish paste comes from, and all those white Greek islands that make you think of Ulysses and resinous wine and Mary Renault—Crete, for instance, and those scary goings-on with the Minotaur, and ladies with curly hair. We could go from here to Haifa—a green-and-white garden that climbs from the sea, and perhaps we could get to the crusaders' city of Acre, a great fortress built right in the water. The modern town is Arab, with mosques and muezzins. Some ships stop at Venice and go down the Adriatic along the Dalmation coast. Do you remember how mad I was for Illyrian Spring? I've often wondered if it's really true that wild irises perfume the cliffs around Dubrovnik in springtime. A trip down the Adriatic via the Adriatic Line from Trieste would prove it, I know, and there'd be the fun of all sorts of other Mediterranean ports. The Greek Line takes in Naples and Sicily and lots of Aegean islands, and the Mediterranean Sea is like a super-highway for the American Export Isbrandtsen Lines.

Speaking of opals—I was, wasn't I?—there is always Australia, the land where they come from, amazingly dug out of the rocky mines near Alice Springs, in the wild west country they call the Outback. It would be a good idea to hurry, because the opal deposits are running out. But opals or not, there would still be Sydney to see, and I'd be so near that I'd certainly go see what their Palm Beach looks like—and all those other beaches where those handsome young Aussies put on surf carnivals with parades and water stunts. It would please me to think I could be tanning myself to a golden glow up at the Great Barrier Reef while Chicago was smothered in a blizzard. I'd like to get acquainted with those kookie animals they have out there—how about a wombat or a platypus or a lyre bird—and those darling koalas and kangaroos—joeys, they call them. Somewhere near Melbourne there's an outdoor zoo in a forest of eucalyptus. And Tasmania—doesn't it sound marvelously far away, although they say it looks like England, only more so. A perfect froth of apple blossom in spring, which is fall to you.

And wouldn't you love to see Perth and thank everyone there for lighting up for our astronauts? It's a terrifically big place—so you'd need help in planning a trip—and that you can get from the Australian National Travel Association, 636 Fifth Ave., New York City.

NATURALLY, New Zealand, too—"The Land of the Long White Cloud"—that's what the Polynesians call it. Wouldn't you love to see the Maoris on their native heath? And the hot springs? And the cave in Waitomo that lights up with glow worms—how about that for a Christmas Eve celebration? They say the flowers are incredible—every house with a garden, and in Christchurch whole blocks compete with each other for the prettiest landscaping. Way in the south there are glaciers and fjords that might as well be in Norway. All this, and as much whipped cream as I could eat, because the New Zealanders have the highest consumption of creamy things and Chinese gooseberries; tree tomatoes and toheroa clam soup, too. You could look into all this by getting in touch with the New Zealand Government Offices at 630 Fifth Ave., New York City; 153 Kearny St., San Francisco, California; and Suite 702, 510 W. 6 St., Los Angeles, California.

Fiji! Imagine actually going to Fiji! It's only a jump from New Zealand and a zag away from the International Date Line where you gain 24 hours when you go east. I'd like to see the big Fiji cop in Suva who directs traffic in his bare feet, wearing a skirt with a sawtooth hemline. I'd like to see those people who can walk through fire; I'd like to taste the stuff they call kava and drink out of coconut shells; I'd like to see the Hindu ladies in their saris.

WOULD you believe that I have a yen to hear "Jingle Bells" played on a ukulele? Do you know that I secretly yearn to celebrate Hogmanay, and you don't even know what it is? If you decided to take me on a P & O Lines Christmas cruise you'd make both wishes come true. They are part of the holiday celebration at sea—a tradition of the line which invented the word "posh"—probably the most romantic steamship company in the business, harking back to the Empire and the pukka sahibs who traveled out to Injah.

Nowadays they're cruisier, go almost everywhere, but concentrate on the Pacific. Their ships are always scheduled to be at sea on Christmas, with a tree lashed to the top mast, the public rooms all trimmed with greens, and simultaneously, everywhere, all the ships light up at once on Christmas Eve. There are all kinds of goings-on: Tom-and-Jerry parties, even in the tropics, caroling, ukuleles in action, a great big roast beef and Yorkshire pudding kind of English yuletide dinner, church services, and best of all, a children's party where the Old Man himself reads Dickens' A Christmas Carol. Hogmanay is celebrated—and that, my dear, is Scottish for New Year's Eve.

Ready for another suggestion? This daydream began years back when I first learned the samba, got progressively more powerful with the bossa nova, and now every time I hear the "Crooked Song," "Desafinado," I want to call the Moore-McCormack Line and book at once for Rio and the Carnival. It sounds so let-yourself-go, such fun, so unlike anything you'd get involved with at home. Catharsis, that's what it'd be, to dance in the streets, with the frevos bands, watching the marchers and the parasol dancers, seeing a whole city go pleasantly berserk for three or four days. They say there's music everywhere, night and day, till the whole town vibrates with the unbroken frolic. I'd go to as many balls as I could get into, especially the big giant bash in the municipal theatre, where the costumes and prizes are fabulous and the whole place turns into one big banqueting hall and ball.

Bahia—how I'd like to see that place. The very name has a sultry come-on—the cradle of Brazil, full of Portuguese Colonial baroqueries, with a wedding-cake-gilded church for every day in the year. It's rhythmic Afro-Brazil, too, with black and beautiful people, and ladies wearing beads and turbans like Carmen Miranda. I'd eat feijoada, the Brazilian boiled dinner, and preserved cashew fruit, and drink tiny cups of strong sweet coffee, and buy topaz and aquamarine and tourmaline, and an alligator bag.

Baroque! What am I saying? Bavarian Germany is the heartspring of all swooping curve and cockleshell carving. Even one little long weekend in Munich would thrill me for a while—a trip to the Nymphenburg Palace where the precious porcelain used to be made, a concert in the Mozartian jewel-box theatre of Cuivillies, even, perhaps Mardi-Gras, because carnival is celebrated here, too. We could hear opera, Strauss and Wagner, as it was written to be heard. The German National Tourist Office, 500 Fifth Ave., New York City, will give you details.

TO MAKE an extra-long weekend of it—an opera weekend, in fact, I'd sneak a few days more in Vienna. On a Sunday morning I'd rise betimes to hear the Vienna Boys' Choir sing Mass. I'd go to the Treasure House to see the jeweled cloaks and mantles of Burgundian kings. I'd ride out to Schönbrunn and soak up the world of Maria Theresa and Marie Antoinette, and see the room where the Prince of Rome died. And if I did nothing else I'd go on Sunday noon to the pretty little rococo riding palace and lose my heart once more to the endearing cleverness of the white Lipizzaners. Naturally, I'd throw the calorie count to the winds, eat Sachertorte fearlessly, drink coffee with schlagsahne and chocolate liqueurs. Austrian State Tourist Department, 444 Madison Ave., New York City, could help you plan. ■

Beauty and the Best

Beauty, as you know, is so often fragile.

Not Waterford Club Colorcast, the revolutionary new cookware born in Ireland.

"You don't have to treat it like a new born-baby," said one writer. Said another, "The inner surface is like hard velvet ...proof against the most careless cook."

They were talking about the black velvet Teflon finish, baked on so ingeniously by the Irish, you can practically hit it with a shillelagh.

The beauty you can see. Each piece is sculptured in cast iron and enamelled in white porcelain by Irish hands plying their art under a banner, "Lest we forget, one quality only, the best."

It cooks beautifully. Low heat, no burning. Keeps every bit of the flavor in. "Incomparable for cooking food evenly," said the British Reader's Digest.

Take cast iron, white porcelain, black Teflon, Siamese teakwood and Irish hands...

And what have you got?

Beauty and the best.

By ELVIN MCDONALD

Harold C. Cook of Dixon, Illinois, a nationally known florist and lecturer, has discovered a formula that not only doubles the indoor life of most cut evergreens, but makes them a greener green, too. The benefits are more than visual, because fresh greens are much less likely to catch fire, and more needles stay on the branches instead of falling to the floor. Here are the ingredients of the formula: To a gallon of hot water, add and mix four tablespoons Green Garde Micronized Iron (a natural horticultural iron), two cups of Karo Crystal Clear Light corn syrup, and four teaspoons Clorox or a chlorinated household bleach.

Before placing the tree in the holder, saw one inch off the trunk bottom. Then stand the tree in the holder and add the hot solution. As the solution is absorbed, add tap water that has been warmed to room temperature, stirring as you do, and keep the holder filled at all times. Mr. Cook also recommends the use of large tree holders that hold at least a gallon of water. This magical formula is from Cook's new brochure, which includes information about the Advent wreath, the Della Robbia, and his well-known Nativity wreath. It can be obtained by sending 75 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Harold C. Cook, 202 North Court, Dixon, Illinois 51021.

DAVID G. LEACH, keynote speaker at the 22nd congress of the American Horticultural Society, which convened recently in Cleveland, said that the image of organized horticulture is so dim and diffuse it evokes a mental picture of a suburbanite planting a petunia. He suggested that we cease to be solely preoccupied with planting a petunia and instead give at least equal attention to the world the petunia is to be planted in.

Leach, himself an expert plantsman and rhododendron specialist, said, "I believe that unless we widen our horizons enormously, we may soon live in a country where the problem will not be how to plant a petunia, but whether planting a petunia is possible." Leach challenged the members of the American Horticultural Society to take the lead in stimulating an aspiration toward grace and beauty in all humanly contrived surroundings. He said, ". . . we must stand for this ideal: that ugliness does offend, that beauty does reward, and that the latter produces a morality important to this country."

I ALWAYS look forward to the arrival of a box of fresh-cut holly at Christmas time, and this year I am going to try some tips passed along to me by Ambrose Brownell, who cuts half a million pounds of holly annually from the 15 to 20 thousand trees that grow on his farms in Milwaukie, Oregon. He suggests that the package be opened promptly on arrival and the holly submerged in cold water for a few hours or overnight before using it for decoration. Holly absorbs moisture through leaf surfaces and through berries. If loose branches are to be arranged in a bouquet, recut the stems about an inch from the base for better water absorption.

Brownell advises against spraying or dipping with any kind of oily preservative. Naturally, cool temperatures retard the aging process of cut holly; specifically, storage at 35° to 50° will keep it fresh almost indefinitely. About 85 percent of all holly grown commercially in America is produced within 50 miles of Portland. It is a common practice among the growers to dip all cut holly in a weak mixture of alpha naphthalene acetic acid—30 parts to a million of water—to cancel the effects of any ethylene gas present. This dipping process literally "nails the leaves to the stems," and vitally effects how well cut holly keeps.

FOUR years of research at Virginia Tech show it is possible to have green grass all winter. Cool-season grasses such as fescue, bluegrass, and bentgrass will maintain their green color when fertilized in late fall and winter with nitrogen. In addition to the regular fertilization program, A.J. Powell, the turf researcher, says one pound of nitrogen per 1,000 square feet from soluble sources in late October, December, and February maintains color throughout the cold season. Nitrogen can be applied any time color fades during winter, but to be on the safe side, it should be watered in or applied just before a rain.

THE newest book on my shelf for indoor-gardening buffs is Begonias—Indoors and Out, a small volume about a tremendously large subject. The author, Jack Kramer, selected 300 begonias—all attractive and all suitable for growing at home—to describe briefly and to include in various listings. There are excellent black-and-white photographs, along with appealing, if fanciful, line drawings. At $3.95 this book is a sure winner. It doesn't pretend to be the last word on begonias, and I'm glad it doesn't. There's so much fun in discovering new and unfamiliar begonias, some of the mystery would be gone if they were all covered completely in one neatly organized volume. E. P. Dutton is the publisher.

Modern American Gardens—Designed by James Rose is an exciting new book that presents the contemporary garden as an art form. Through more than 200 pages the theme is how to see a garden in our changing times. Rose himself did the remarkable caption story that accompanies the photographs, and in combination with Marc Snow's illuminating text, the book is a masterpiece. It is published by Reinhold, $16.50. ■
